CARDONIA, Ind., was shaken up by the explosion of a dynamite cartridge. Mrs. Jesse Jones, of the village, lost her husband, secured the cartridge and placed it under the house. She supposed her husband to be in, but he was not, and he was in the saloon. A Hancock's residence, Mr. Harwick, and his wife, and two children were shaken up but not seriously injured. The building is a total wreck. Mrs. Jones was injured by the explosion of the cartridge.

LYMON BLAINE, second son of James G. Blaine, died suddenly at Chicago, Saturday noon, of bloodpoisoning, following a carbuncle on the neck. He had been officially ill but a few hours, and his death was unexpected. It is believed that the original trouble resulted from a carbuncle on the back of his neck. Blaine, after repeated efforts to reach Washington, arrived at Chicago Tuesday night, and was met by his brother, James G. Blaine, Jr., and Mr. Hamlin, of Maine, and the Rev. C. of Trustees he has contributed a fund of $50,000, which he says he can make good.

DEATH FROM THE SKIES.

LIGHTNING STRIKES IN LINCOLN PARK, CHICAGO.

Three Persons Killed Under the Shelter of the Grant Monument; Three More Seriously Injured and Many Shocked into Insensibility.

Killed by a Bolt.

Lightning laid Brad Ingoes upon the pavement in front of Grant's tomb in Lincoln Park, Chicago, Thursday evening and the unknown of pleasure-seekers who had crowded under the granite arches to escape from the storm. The bolt struck prostrate upon the stone floor. Three were instantly killed, and the third one was picked up raving like a maniac. Two were unconscious, and three were proved to be dead. A little latent in the stone of the grandmother, who had taken refuge from hail to foot and almost, detained, was taken away unharmed. The alarm was given by a park policeman who had just left the shelter, and a few moments later the clang of the ambulance bell portel the sending thing that instantly gathered about the scene of horror. The dead were lifted into a patrol wagon and sent to the morgue and the injured were taken to the German hospital.

Lincoln Park was crowded during the afternoon with men, women and children, seeking in the cool lake breezes and the shade of many trees to escape the oppressive heat of the day. Shortly after three o'clock, the skies darkened, and a cloud burst on the city, and the rain came down in torrents. Within a few minutes the park was deserted. When, at 6:30 o'clock, the sky cleared, there was Railroad Notes.

Roadmaster John Doyle spent a part of the 4th here.

An extra gang of men, in addition to the section men, is at work between here and Bellaire in taking out imperfections of the track.

The cable for the telegraph arrived last week and will soon be laid. Communication will be open the last of this week, or the first of next. The wire is already working to Bellaire from the south.

The freight depot is still utilized as the passenger station. A week longer will finish the depot, and then attention will be given to the grounds and highway back of the two depots.

The elegant local service between Charlevoix and Petoskey is a continued subject of comment.

Jos. Troyer, of Clarion, has been appointed baggeman here, and has entered upon the discharge of his duties.

Mrs. L. P. Eddy, of Grand Rapids, who is here for a few weeks, has the honor of being the purchaser of the first two tickets from Grand Rapids to Charlevoix.

The first victim of the new railroad, was Myron Geer's dog. A south bound train cut him in two several times last week, and Myron mourns.

Local railroad tickets are now on sale at the New Belvedere.

Charlevoix Summer Resort.

Wallace Cheverling, Hue Magay and [illegible], are at the Abbott cottage.

S. A Gibson and wife, of Kalamazoo, arrived the 3d, and are in their cottage.

Geo. E. Bardeen and wife opened their cottage the 3d. Mr. Bardeen went back Tuesday, but will return soon.

J. L. Sebring and wife are settled down in their pleasant cottage.

C. N. Hudson and family, of Chicago, are on the grounds.

Mrs. Travis, of Grand Rapids opened her cottage Monday.

Prof. Barber, of Ypsilanti, is occupying the Weideman cottage.

Dallas Boudeman, and family, of Kalamazoo, arrived yesterday.

S. V. Chisholm, and family, have the King cottage for the summer.

Harbor Improvement.

The U. S. dredge "Saginaw," in tow of the U. S. tug Williams, arrived here Thursday last, and is at work deepening the channel Mike Daley, the man who dug the first spade of ground from our harbor, is in charge of the outfit. Mr. Daley has orders to make a channel of fourteen feet of water from Lake Michigan to Pine Lake. At the mouth he is digging 16 feet. It will take about three weeks to do the job.

Norwood Notes.

The glorious fourth is over. Don't think it was much of a day after all. Most like all other days only it had considerable of "Charlevoix the Beautiful" mixed with it. Norwood was there. She's always there; only this time she was there at the other end of it. Band, trotters, high jumpers, all in the saw. Well, here's one more chink to "Charlevoix to Hoofus!"

R. T. Steeper's mother and sister of Iowa City, Iowa, are here on a visit for a few weeks.

Geordie VanPelt trolled to Charlevoix in a row boat the 4th and caught five fine large Mackinaw trout.

Sam'l B. Chase's fireworks Monday night were very fine. He and it was fun for the children.

G. W. E. Hill, of Des Moines, Ia., will lecture at the church July 9th on Temperance.

Fred Gilbert is enjoying a visit from his sister, Miss Elma Gilbert, of Hudson, Mich.

R. Coe Irish, of Traverse City, was up here last week with some Saginaw gentlemen looking over the line to property interests.

The Old Folks' loaded with lumber at G. V. Nash's dock last Thursday.

Mrs. J. G. Holliday and children visited relatives in Traverse City over the 4th.

Geo. M. Ferguson sent up from Chicago an assortment of fireworks that was immense. Norwood residents can congratulate themselves on having a cluster of fireworks that was not equalled north of Grand Rapids.

C. D. Hitchcock sold his bear the 4th to a Chicago gentleman.

Ed Stafford this week commences the foundation of Wm. Cowen's new residence.

That the judges decision in the band tournament was a cutand dried affair, is now very patent on the face of it. That it was location and not merit that won the prize, goes without challenge.

Additional Locals.

—Miss Katesmith leaves tomorrow for a two or three months trip among relatives and friends at Stanwood, Ionia, Holdig, Pontiac and Detroit. Miss Hettie accompanies her as far as Stanwood, where she will remain a month with her cousins.

—The Driving Park Association are to be congratulated upon the remarkable work done during the past two weeks in preparing their track and grounds for the 4th. Less energy and good management would have resulted in a disastrous failure for the demonstration of that day. The crowd that attended the races was a gratifying evidence that the future of the association is assured. It was a master-stroke of good policy when the movement was inaugurated, and the good results are already apparent.

—Yesterday—(Wednesday) the C. & W. M. officials tendered the Charlevoix Village Council and press an excursion on their line to Petoskey and to Traverse City and back. The Bellaire officials, and several prominent people at Central Lake and Williamsburg came up on the same train. General Superintendent Agnew's private car was attached to the train for the use of the party. The occasion was a very pleasant one, and resulted in the forming of many new acquaintanes. Our party unite in pronouncing the road first-class in every particular.

—Napoleon at the zenith of his glory, placed the "iron crown" upon his own head. Charlevoix on the 4th of July crowned herself queen among queens. The greatest event in the history of Northern Michigan, assembling the greatest concourse of people, from greater distances, was the celebration at Charlevoix. The new railroad had much to do with the stupendous success of the occasion, but it all went to prove that Charlevoix has "vim, vigor and victory" embarqued upon her seaticheon. It demonstrated the fact that old Fogy ism in Charlevoix is only a reminiscence; that she is wide awake and thoroughly inoculated with the bacilli of get-up-and-dust. The demonstration of last Monday, in every respect, has never been equalled in Northern Michigan, and we hereby serve notice that the inoculation has permeated every artery of our anatomy, and will continue to be pumped into our blood and bone. We have got a boom on us. We repeat it: Charlevoix has crowned herself. Sheba rises above jealously or envy of any sister village, and can afford to magnanimously extent the right hand of fellowship to her neighbors, secure in her supremacy, yet wishing prosperity to all.

—The SENTINEL serib made a trip to Bellaire Thursday afternoon over the "new line." As a pioneer of Northern Michigan we are compelled to acknowledge that it was our first visit to the county seat of Antrim county—an acknowledgment involving some degree of humiliation. From Charlevoix it is a run of less than an hour, through one of the richest and loveliest sections of Northern Michigan, along the shore of that most beautiful chain of lakes—the Intermediate. Bellaire has been somewhat isolated since it was created by the Antrim County Board of Supervisors. But they "builded better than they knew." Bellaire is now secure in her grip of the future. It is a beautifully located town, in the heart of a section marvelously rich in natural resources, and possessed of manufacturing advantages now largely augmented by railroad facilities, and most in the natural order of things proper. The town has an eternal clinch on the county seat, by virtue of her location, and a farming section contiguous to it that will multiply agencies of growth and progress. The people are wide awake and enthusiastic, and deserve the success that is now assured.

Hayes from Hayes.

Miss Susie Sutton of Alanson is visiting with Mrs. I. S. Webster.

Henry Fisher and wife of Chicago, are visiting friends in Hayes.

We begin to hear the clicking of the mowers, and the weather is propitious for haying.

We understand that Inwood has been investigating the tanbark business in Hayes, and noting how fat and sleek the Hayesites have become, has branched off heavily into "bark peelin" himself. The Lord help him.

Several of our Hayesites got tangled up with the railroad schedule on the Fourth, and went home via Petoskey reaching home in the wee sma' hours of the morning.

Misses Agnes and Annie Koff of Petoskey, were visiting their parents during the holidays.

Mrs. Blythe of Petoskey was the the guest of Mrs. Geo. Banks last week.

We have a notion to apply to the officials for a re-naming of our station and have it called Bay Rum

Everybody with his best girl enjoyed the galorious Fourth, the screeching of the eagle, the drinking of lemonade with a stick in it, etc.; but as for Hayes give her liberty, or give her something better to drink.

The town of Spencer Creek on the Chicago & North Michigan R. R., will change its name to Alden, in honor of Wm. Alden Smith.

The first regular passenger train of the M. & N. E. R. R. arrived at their depot grounds at Traverse City at 9:05 a. m. Wednesday, the 29th.

The native gallants of Leland are happy, as the U. of M. boys struck camp last Sunday and the girls have nothing but the local beaus to fall back on for amusement.

A small boy at Cheboygan called a colored man employed with a cheap circus, "nigger" and the latter hurled a stone which struck the boy in the head injuring him, it is found fatally.

A few paper wheels have appeared under the G. R. & I. coaches, and those who are old in railroading say they out-wear the iron. They are considerable larger, measure about three feet in diameter, and are made of paper pulp with a steel tire.

The plant at St. Ignace fired by Stager, Smith & Co. in the manufacture of lock barrel staves was burned to the ground lately. In the building was stored the machinery formerly in use by the St. Ignace veneer mill. Actuating company, recently failed. The loss exceeds $50,000.

—Yesterday, Deputy Sheriff L. E. Smith served an injunction on Hon. John Nichols, restraining him from the delivery of the Charlevoix railroad bridge bonds. Orlando Blair, of Boyne City, took out the injunction.

—The Rifenburg Milling Co., so Geo. Sherwood reports, is making good flour sales along the line of the railroad.

—The New Belvedere hotel and the Chicago Club House are fast filling up, and most of the cottages are occupied.

—The finest sample boxes of strawberries we have seen this year were laid on our table Monday by A. O. D. McCabe.

—Chalcopha Bros. have purchased two lots on the north side directly west of A. D. Cruickshank's and will erect a residence.

—Hugh Vaughan leaves next month for Chicago, where he will take a course in pharmacy at the Northwestern University.

—The iron pipe for the Charlevoix water works arrived by rail last week and is being scattered along streets. Work is to be done at once.

—Miss Mary Hanna, of Henderson, Ky., and Eugene Joyce, of Louisville, Ky., will arrive this week and be the guests of Thos. K. Hanna for a time.

—Dr. John Avery, of Greenville, was in town yesterday. The Doctor is being boomed by the Republicans of his portion of the district for congress.

—Contractor Newville, who had the Ellsworth sub-contract, has taken a $60,000 job of three miles of solid rock excavation in the Northern peninsula.

—Miss Nellie Ford, of Geneva Lake, Wis., and Miss Mabel Stanley, of Chicago, daughter and neice of Del Ford, are the guests of Mrs. L. A. West.

—J. H. McLane & Co. of Coldwater, connmer a next week the work of constructing fifty miles of railroad for the Chicago and West Michigan, from New Buffalo to Chicago.

—Last November Peter Grady was washed overboard from a vessel at Beaver-island and lost. On the 9th of this month his body washed ashore near the Beaver harbor lighthouse.

—The Chatauqua circle had a picnic at the park Saturday. A condition of the literary contest of past course was that the vanquished should entertain the victors—hence the picnic.

—Complaint has been made that certain conveyances during the afternoon of the 4th, charged 50 cents fare between the depot and town. In justice to our own bus men it should be stated that it was outsiders that raised the "tariff." None of our boys were in it.

—Mr. Chas. B. Gale, of Albion, has been here the past week visiting his sister, Mrs. H. Lee Iddings. Mr. Gale is one of Albion's most gifted singers, and, by request sang two solos at the M. E. church Sunday morning, much to the delight of the congregation.

—The schooner Florence Smith is on her way here from Milwaukee with a cargo of wheat for the Hilfenberg Milling Co.

—The U. S. survey steamer Geo. Hancock, Capt. Jas. Beauvais, arrived here yesterday, to relieve the tug Williams which will leave for Grand Haven tomorrow.

—Leo See has bought a corner lot on the Nettleton addition, near the Smithson place, and Miss Maggie Coulter has purchased two lots on the same plat—all on Dixon avenue.

—Capt. Daily, of the U. S. dredge has received orders to dredge for the water works pipe across the river. Yesterday he hog out a hole for the W. U. cable across the upper river.

—The Charlevoix Driving Park authorities are by no means to let improvements on their grounds cease, because the 4th is past. Plans are being made, to continue work on the track, and fit their grounds for fall races.

—The famous Wizard Oil people are occupying Lewis Grand Opera House every evening this week with a free entertainment embracing stereopticon views, songs, athletics, etc. While the entertainment is good, and costs nothing, Wizard Oil is the "burden of their song."

—In the Bay View school of music, which opened Tuesday, July 12th, Charlevoix people have offered them right here near at home privileges for musical culture as fine as in the best city conservatories. In fact all the teachers are selected ones and are only those of the finest taste and talent. The full four weeks gives time for good courses, and the prices are very moderate.

—This question of good roads enters into the warp and woof of the future of Charlevoix. It is a vital question in the life of any town, and must be recognized. Liberality in the improvement of highways even, if extended to adjoining townships, is but a good business investment. If Charlevoix would retain the trade of contiguous territory, it must give this question the attention it deserves.

—The Republican Magazine, published in New York, is before us. It is a handsome 50-page monthly work, devoted to the promulgation of Republican principles. The number on our table has much of interest attached to the voter, discussing topics the nature of which are suggested in the creed of true Republicanism. The contributions are from eminent Republican statesmen and writers. It should be read by every Republican during the present campaign. Fortify yourself with unanswerable arguments. Send a sample copy to your stand.

—The Norwood correspondent of the SENTINEL last week charges the judges in the band tournament with awarding the first prize with a view to location and not merit. In reply, the editor of this paper, who was a judge, has nothing harsh to say. The criticism is manifestly unfair and unjust, to attribute dishonorable motives to three gentlemen who were appointed to act with impartiality, and who endeavored honestly so to do. It is something we did not expect from the correspondent. The award was made on merit, and was made honestly. But it may have been wrong. If so, the band committee which appointed the judges, are the ones at fault, in selecting incompetent men. They should have gone to the Northwood cribs for pointers. This charge of "location" governing the judgment we will refer to Sen. Davis, who was a judge. Eastport is in Antrim county, where Sen. Davis lives. We shall not take the pains to elucidate the points of musical excellence by which East Jordan won, more than to say that it was but by one point that they won—harmony—and in that essential feature of good music they did excel. But even humanns do not always agree, as appears by the Norwood correspondence.

Well, What Next.

For many years Charlevoix looked forward to uninterrupted navigation between Lake Michigan and Pine Lake. The blessing was secured.

Then we cast our eyes forward for the sight of the locomotive. It is here. Charlevoix has now what we have these long years hoped and prayed for—a harbor and a railroad. We have—or soon will have—a fourteen foot channel into Pine Lake, and the main trunk line of one of the best of railroad systems is ours.

What next?

To what shall Charlevoix next turn its attention? Or shall we set down contented with what has been accomplished? By no means has Charlevoix reached the fullness of her destiny. There is yet much to be accomplished for Charlevoix. What we have accomplished is only the beginning.

We have it within our power to make the fruits of past labor mighty agencies for future progress.

Shall we do it?

Shall we be content with the ephemeral benefits of a summer travel or reach out after the more permanent benefits industrial growth?

We have every requisite for this much desired advancement, and only energetic action is necessary.

Shall we look forward or be content with the past and present?

Railroad Notes.

We now have a daily local freight each way.

The railroad telegraph wire is in operation.

The "suburban" is doing a good business already.

The company is grading around the depot grounds.

The depot will be ready for occupancy next week.

All hands at the depot and freight house are busy unloading freight.

A force of men from Grand Rapids are putting in the plumming at the depot.

Two Wagner sleepers are attached to every morning train north, and every evening train has two chair cars and a "hoofer."

Burns & Cameron have taken the contract to erect the C. & W. M. platform and pavilion at the New Belvedere, and have begun work.

Conducting Hart, of the local passenger train, has accepted the position of trainmaster with the Grand Trunk. Conductor Jones is in temporary charge of the train.

The north-bound freight was derailed at the Ironton junction at 2 p.m. Monday, and did not get out of the scrape until 9 that night, and then an unbroken car of merchandise had to be left on the siding.

Yesterday afternoon at Interlochen, two stations below Traverse City, Seth Raymond, of South Arm, a C. & W. M. brakeman, had his leg crushed between two cars. He was taken to Traverse City, where his leg was amputated. He did not survive the operation and died at 7:30 last night.

Resolution.

At a meeting of the Alumni of the Charlevoix High School, July 11th, 1892, it was unanimously

Resolved,—That we tender to Mr. and Mrs. L. V. Hilfenburg an expression of our thanks for their kindness in opening their home for the entertainment of the Association and its guests on the occasion of the reception given the Class of '92; and that we recognize their cordiality and generous efforts in our behalf.

Resolved, That public acknowledgement of our obligation to them be given, by sending these resolutions to be printed in the Charlevoix SENTINEL and the Charlevoix Democrat.

CLISY

"She's coming, baby, she's coming!
Clear the way!" Blake rosin and blow Bugle respectful!"

Have Hope swing himself over the low picket fence and stand in attitude the day school and rushed—excitedly toward a group of boys, clustered about the west entrance.

"Who is coming?" a half dozen bewildered voices.

"The Queen of Salmagundi come to school on Monday," shouted Hope dancing frantically about. "Hats off! Get ready for a regular old ocean wave!"

Dave set the example, which was followed by several others—prostrating themselves upon the dusty ground in the most exaggerated manner as a sly, oddly dressed girl turned the corner and passed in.

"Wouldn't Nate like a sight of this?" he said, as the last vision peed, as she disappeared though the girl's entrance.

"A coat of mail!" cried Dave.
"Didn't I tell you she was coming Says girls, you've got one of the sockiest girls for sister in a number of the girls came up.

"Well, Clisby, we can't help that," her mother mented. "We're poor, but I want you to be somebody."

"How can I?" cried the girl, fiercely
—"How can I when there's all Cain't! Hain't every one of them?"

Her mother silenced.

"Well, Clisby," said Hope, "I'm you as. You don't care, can you sir. They can't stop you.
Your pa was a soldier, and you're strong only one that wore the flag, was

You can do right; be a lady and learn.
Nobody can keep you down if you're bound to go up. Be somebody in spite of them; oh, Clisby, try for my sake!"

Calista rushed out of the house, as her mother ended her appeal, with a burst of tears. An hour passed before she issue from beneath the sofa where she had taken refuge, and Clisby was sent back to the house with eet tins and pale face.

"I'll do it," she sighed, sadly.

The next morning she was back in the school-room, outwardly unmindful of the cold looks, whispers and shrill and upturned noses of the girls.

It soon became evident that the Gay school pupils must wake up. It was irritating to Hiram and Hope Weston's beating them behind her in the race for learning, but she was big in it, and when one day she gained great victory over Belle Brown, who had always been first, such a wail was uttered. But she proved bravely on until at last Dave Hope could not resist speaking to her one day as she passed out of the school-house.

"Good for pluck, Clisby!"

"What do you care for my pluck?"
she flashed back dolefully. "You set them from the first."

"Now, Clisby," drawled Dave, planting himself before her, "I'm a bigger Rebel than bitter any day
I've gotto make fun of somebody.
I'd get Emma Howe herself! And if you don't you did look so old as Methuselah the other day. I tell you've changed mightily and I'd advise you to anyhow. Just remember to, Hi, Clisby, and you'll pull through.
Girls are queer animals."

"And boys, too," Clisby could not help saying to herself, with a queer little twinge of regret at anger and giddiness. It was something, at least, to have gained one friendly word she would keep on.

But Hope Weston succeeded perfectly in making her miserable. She looked upon the designed gift as her prerogative and her influence was all-powerful with the others.

They came the offer of prizes to the girls for the best essay "Clisby know nothing about it, and the girls meant so much jeoniarly. So she sat down to her task, and the pride of the contestants and a determined spirit.

The day was rapidly approaching, and Belle admirers took occasion to state openly that their friend's production was not to be excelled. The afternoon before the day set for the exercise Calista was absent discouraged. Of what use to strive longer?
Suddenly a cry rang through the school-room.

"Fire!"

"There was a mad rush for the doors. The teachers' presence of mind enabled them to get out safely the scholars and the result, but once outside it was discovered that Clisby was not among them.

For a minute, as the lines passed out, some of Clisby's pal began to know that Belle had slipped off secretly to the school-house the night fore for a final rehearsal by herself.
But which side had? It was some time before Hiram could be sure one would look her up and Belle would be too humble to say her. This mo-ting, she bitterly thought, as she remembered the mortifying fact, she would be the laughing-stock of the school.

"Clisby, I know!" laughed Jef, voice was pathetically tremulous to the chief of the impishness plot that put forth for "Georgialine," and when she closed the book, her sent amid renewed applause.

Then Belle Price's name was called, and she saw that it was Belle who now occupied the seat next her.

Was it she who had deserted her?
The question asked itself again and again as she listened to the essay in a tumult of feeling. But she was momentarily forgotten.

As Belle took her seat Mr. Price arose to award the prize.

"In awarding the prize," he said,
"the judges have considered it as being between the two best essays, and, but one has lessonably withdrawn, adding to the commended that her effort was modeled in the refined and cultured. Therefore, we feel that the prize is due in all respects to Calista Weston."

Clisby stared at Belle in amazement, but the latter only nodded with Mr. Price continued after the storm of hand-clapping had ceased.

"This is not all. A gold medal has been privately prepared for the one who has lost her class in scholarship and deportment, so she also leads it from her seat to-day upon this stage, in magnanimity and heroism—Calista Weston.

There was no doubt this time. It certainly was Belle who escorted her to the platform to receive her honors. It was Belle who stood by her through the ordeal, doing expressions and it was Belle who afterward introduced her to those who gathered round for congratulations.

"My friend, Calista Weston."

"Can such people be anybody?"
whispered Hope to those mischievously in Belle's ear later.

"Being somebody rests with the person, after all," she quickly replied, "and Calista has proven that true worth will compel recognition."

The Value of Study.

At a recent meeting at Berne of the Agricultural Association of the arrondissement of Blaye (Gironde), the Archbishop of Bordeaux, Cardinal Donnet, gave some statistical details in order to show the injury done to the agricultural by the wholesome measure of small birds.

"It was formerly calculated that in spring time there were not less than 100 billion insects in each square league. Now, we know that every nest contains on an average four young ones. Well, then, it has been shown that each of these little ones requires for its daily consumption fifteen worms, and that the parents require for their share sixty, making a total of 120 insects for the daily consumption of each brood. If you multiply 120 worms by 10,000 nests, you have a total of 1,200,000 worms destroyed every day, or 36,000,000 in a month. Thirty-six million worms!
Have you reflected that those 36,000, 000 worms, if you do not respect the existence of those poor birds that consume them, will in their turn eat up the leaves, the flowers, and the fruits of our trees as well as the produce of our kitchen gardens? Neither should we forget that the insects and the parasite plants of which these birds would rid us by an impost nearly double the property tax. Bear in mind that in the present year the caterpillars have done more damage to the cabbages than the vegetable lice disappeared from our tables, and that these insects have been equally injurious in the pine woods."

A Wonderful Set of Chessmen.

A remarkable set of chessmen has just been completed by an American mechanic. The pieces are made of carved bone, and the period of costume and equipment is A. D.
1776, all the characters being historic al and contemporary and strictly accurate in every detail of headgear, blazons and costume. The knights are in chain-mail armor, with shield, axe, sword and dagger. Their ar-mors have each the individual blazon of the house. The queens wear royal robes and carry sceptres. The bishops are in church vestments, with cross and crozier. The pawns are represented in a kneeling posture, with spear, bill-hook and knife. The white men are English, the black French. The English king and queen are Richard I. and his Berengaria.
The bishops are Herbert Walter, Archbishop of Canterbury, and William Longchamps, bishop of Ely; and the knights are the Earl of Salisbury and Baron of Worcester. The counts is Anglo-Norman, and is a perfect accurate representation of feudal architecture. The French king and queen are Philip and Ingelburg, his Danish spouse, the bishops being Le Breux and de Sally, of Rouvais and Paris. The knights are also well known men of the twelfth century, and the castle is Franco-Norman.
The set has taken upwards of six years to make.—New York Home

How the British Treat Their Old Soldiers.

was charged with begging Constable Six 11 stated that recently he saw the defendant begging from foot passengers in the Whitechapel road and as he would not go away witness was obliged to take him into custody.
Offiron, whose feet and hands were deformed, stated that he entered the Queen's service in 1857. While serving with his regiment in Canada he got frost-bitten and had to amputate the one half of each hand, his toes and heels after which he was discharged from the army with a pension of 1d a day for twelve months, although he held the rank of sergeant. After that period he was left entirely dep-ent. He had only been in London a few days and it took him nearly three months to walk from Morecie field. Mr. Hutchinson had the defendant put back in order to consider what should be done with him.

Female Tobacco Chewers.

In Hungary it is chiefly the women who chew, and travelers have often described their emotions when, on entering a house, a lady, dressed in satin and adorned with precious stones, comes toward them, and, before holding out her mouth to be kissed, as is the usual custom where we come, pulls the beloved tobacco quid from her cheek pouch. Some of the South American tribes actually eat the tobacco cut into small pieces.

The Universal Republican Verdict in Favor
It's a Strong Ticket and Sure to Win Distinguished Men Make a Campaign Text-

The Republican—Cincinnati, 1892.

This platform adopted at Minneapolis is straightforward and pertinent upon all its meanings. It is a frank, courageous statement of the Republican policy in this campaign. The document is terse in expression, and comprehensive in its scope. It is a document of the national spirit, it gives out no uncertain sounds, it is free from demagoguery and pandering to the material prejudices of the country, and to the re-spons bilities after the rapid increase in national power and prosperity.

The tariff plank affirms the American doctrine of protection in a few direct words, and pinds to the great growth of commerce that has followed the application of the law passed by the last Congress. The position taken is that imports consisting with American products should be subject to only covering the difference between wages abroad and at home. The success of "the Republican policy of reciprocity" is referred to in a compact paragraph, and the Democratic party is charged with the guilt of killing the measure.

The plank on silver and gold will give full satisfaction to all except those who have deserted the party because they believe in free silver and less dollars for a dollar's worth, and those who gold, silver, or anything else, are seeking and debt-paying power. The protection of American industries and labor is commended, and the steps taken by this country for securing a fair and pronounced wise and patriotic.

The purity and freedom of the ballot are demanded and the outrages on American citizens in some of the Southern States denounced. The development of our foreign trade, commerce and shipping the building up of the navy are strongly supported. The Monroe doctrine is reaffirmed and the control of the Nicaragua canal by this Government is urged.
The proper restriction of immigration to the shores of America is recommended. There are other planks relating to trusts, to education, to the separation of church and civil service, the admission of new States, the utilization of all lands, the extension of the postal free delivery service, the Columbian Exposition, and woodmen.

The position is sound or referred to in the platform, though President Harrison is commended as a patriotic, soldierly, patriotic, and thoroughly American man. "Times, conditions and issues rise, the country has confidence in Harrison, and he is the man to lead the hosts of the radical, patriotic defeat, have been faithfully maintained, and the pledges made to the people kept as a guarantee of faithful performance in the future.

Such is the unofficial Republican verdict. The Democrats are free who have not said that Harrison is a good man, but are in error if with a sense misrepresentation. The bright prospect that has given joy to so many hearts with experience and the strengthening sup-ment of the party is a great and surprise of overthrown national security and advancement.—Times-Star.

President Harrison.

In the Republican platform party has a statement of its faith apology nor defense is required. His record is open to all and his fitness as President is known of all men, and the more it is studied the more admi-able it appears. The President has been the victim of misrepresentation.
However able his Ministers, he has been the recognized leader and the stamp of Harrison is on all the great measures of his administration for the three years of government. The two features of President Harrison's ad-ment term that will take rank among the great events of the generation are the ment of the Mckinley law and the independent and aggressive assertion of American rights in the controversies growing out of Behring Sea. The Monroe doctrine is a plank that leaves no single case for American interests or the United States, and President Harrison as a model in dealing with governments of Central and South American republic. The admission which the President sent to Chili, when that nation refused to give satisfaction for the murder of American sailors and the insult to the American uniform, was so more positive in tone than the final notice to Lord Salisbury on the subject of sealing. The result in each case American flag and the American name are regarded everywhere with greater respect than before President Harrison assumed the reins of office. England

Confederate Free Trade.

The National Democratic platform reaffirms the declaration of the Confederate States, that Article 1, section 8, clause 1, of the permanent constitution of the Confederate States, which adopted there in Montgomery on March 11, 1861, was as follows:

"The Congress shall have power to lay and collect taxes, duties and excises for revenue purposes, and to provide for debts, provide for the common defense and carry on the government of the Confederate States, but no bounties shall be granted from the treasury, nor shall any duties or taxes on importations from foreign nations be laid to promote or foster any branch of industry."

The Democratic National Convention adopts the ideas of Jefferson, Jackson and Tilden.

"We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the Federal Government has no constitutional right to enforce and collect tariff duties except for the purposes of revenue only."

Cleveland and Free Trade.

The nomination of Grover Cleveland of Chicago is fortunate for the Republican party and the country. If remembered by the people of the country, it stands which with another candidate would have served to confuse the minds of American voters as to the merits of the issue. Cleveland stands in the eyes of America and Europe as the chosen champion of free trade. Represented a trace of the genius of Golden or a tribe of the instincts of Peel, without a single intelligent conviction concerning the tariff, he unfortunately refers to the reason he learned by rote while in the White House, that the protective tariff is the sort of "tariff for rob" which means absolute free trade, and accepts the "protection principle" as accepted with American industry.—New York Tribune.

gion of Republican ideas, Benjamin Harrison will be made a second time to

His fortunes and those of his party are now identical, so far as the pending campaign is concerned, and his re-election is dependent upon the interest of national prosperity and for the presertion of the causes of about and benefits rat.

WE have never had any sympathy with the dark horse idea. The President has seemed to us to be the only candidate if Mr. Blaine was not in the race. Therefore, we rejoice that the President is once more to lead the party to victory. Of his election there is no reasonable doubt, and his administration will be even more satisfactory than the past.

The more we think of it the clearer it seems to us that in the nomination of Mr. Harrison the weak points are sphere real and will fade away, while the strength is all and the popular response to it will grow steadily, the more the issues and the candidates are discussed.
—Boston Journal.

EVERY man who believes in the destiny of the Republican party will congratulate himself on the national ticket thus formed, and all those who place class-ness and economy and security in the consist of public affairs above party loyalty will think long before they vote against him.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

WHAT is left to do is for every Republican and every lover of good government to go to work and help elect this ticket. Though the ticket is popular and the platform sound, success is only assured by hard work and contests every where with the party. The enemy is desperate and wary, and will fight hitter and long for victory.

In the opinion of the Commercial the nomination of Harrison was the very best that the convention could have made. It is a strong and popular ticket for the party. The campaign must be made upon the record of the administration, and it could not be made as effectively with anybody else. It is a good and unfitted prophet.—Hartford Commercial.

cent administration of its affairs, Benjamin Harrison, the statesman.

A Warning.

Everybody is asking "Who on earth is Stevenson?" Well, he is a man who is something almost the man the Democratic party thought of for President Presidency, and most of them have lost their breath at the idea of his nomination and if all accounts are true, he is even more surprised than they are. He is a pleasant Democrat. His principal work in the past has been to the Cleveland administration, when he lapped the fat offices and fattened on gravy, in the name of civil-service reform. He is the man who, when this journal that a dead bird been made was palatable than devoted to the disaffected Democrats who had taken revel is that of executioner to the Cleveland administration, and lopped off the heads of postmasters at a great rate, in the name of civil-service reform. When the anti-Cleveland faction had taken hold of the party and been with indians to nominate Gray on condition of his dissolving the war of Gray to Cleveland, they took their Billy-to-order and made him Gray. It is a sight of the state of feeling in the party, of a bitterness that is not yet cold. It means, too, that the Democrats definitely resign that they can't win.

KEEPING A BANK ACCOUNT.

An Experienced Cashier Says Down Some Useful Rules.

1. If you wish to open an account with a bank, provide yourself with a proper introduction. Well managered banks do not open accounts with strangers.

2. Do not draw a check unless you have the money to pay it in your possession to deposit. Don't test the courage or good nature of your bank by presenting or allowing to be presented your check for a larger sum than your deposit.

3. Do not draw a check or sign it in a person out of the city expecting to make it good before it can possibly get back. Sometimes exceptions are made in such cases.

4. Do not exchange checks with anybody. This is soon discovered by your bank, it does your friend no good and discredits you.

5. Do not give your check to a friend with the condition that he is not to use it until a certain time. He is sure to take an out-of-town check from a neighbor, pass it through your bank and charge you and give him your check for it. You are sure to get caught. Discount an accommodation note; in the meaning of a bank is a note for which no value has been given to the maker by taking the proceeds.

6. Do not give your check to a stranger. This is an open door for fraud, and if your bank should through you it will not feel kindly toward you.

7. When you send your check out of the city in any bills, write the name and residence of your payee, thus: "Pay to John Smith & Co., of Chicago." This will put your name on its guard if presented at another bank.

8. Do not make your bank stand responsible for your mistakes. Do not ask your bank to enter into a promise of any business transaction unless you are willing to pay your bank for your trouble.

9. Don't suppose you can behave badly in one bank and stand well with the others. The world is such is a clearing house.

10. Don't quarrel with your bank.
If you are not treated well, go some other place and tell your friends your business line unpresented. Don't think of increasing your bank decline in.

11. If you want an accommodation note discounted, tell the bank frankly that it is not, in fact, an accommodation note. If you take a note from a debtor with an agreement, verbal or written, that it is to be renewed in whole or part, and if you do not make arrangements for that ask to have a new one discounted to take up the old one, tell the bank about it.

12. Don't commit the folly of saying to your bank, "I don't want to do anything to the prejudice of any one's which you have already done.

13. Give your bank credit for being a good deal more or just understanding its own business purposes. It is much better informed, probably, than you supposed.

14. Don't try to convince your bank that you are smarter than it is. It is quite likely that in the long run it will be found out.

15. Don't commit the folly of saying to your bank, "I don't ask you to do anything for the sake of the old friendship." Business is business.

and beg your bank to make use of you. You may not be found, "Be

Effect of Light on the Skin.

Others the skin is exposed to an unaccustomed amount of light, it becomes decidedly influenced, and is said to be "sunburned." Hummer has ascertained by experiments with electric lights, that this influence of fortion is caused almost entirely by the violet rays, since also in the ultraviolet or photographic rays of the spectrum. Sunburned, therefore, is hardly a correct expression, and it is the phenomenon of tan which is produced by the action of the violet rays of the spectrum. "Sunburned," therefore, is a correct expression, since it imparts a color to the skin in question is the effect of heat. The violet rays produce a tan, or brown, however, lifeless, essentially different from that of a healthy glow, or a sudden and quickly-transient blushing. The skin of the face of the latter is delayed for some time after the exposure to the followed by a detachment of the cuticle and a discoloration continuing for months, and sometimes, some months
the sensibility of the skin is so that it is not in a condition for days of rudeness these symptoms, electric light, increased by heating
ing in ultra-violet rays, exerts a very powerful influence in this direction
even at a distance where heat radiation is absolutely inappreciable, somestances that produce the ultra-violet rays to cross freely—such as water, quartz, rock crystal, olive oil, cod ceum, etc.—when applied on the skin, produce a tan, or brown, and

Rats.

W. W. Newell, the Secretary of the American Folk Lore Society, has been collecting the rare information as to the caution which prevails in many parts of this country of riddling
a house of rats by sitting them a letter in which they are recommended to leave the premises for the sake of another party of the country. This method of getting rid of rats is quite peculiar, to say, appears to be well known, but is commonly regarded as a jest. It is a survival, however, of a belief in the entirely serious and ancient usage. He gives a specimen of such a letter, written up in Maine
no later than 1885, in which the rats are duly requested to leave. The HELP! HELP! THE LADY PAINTS.

"The twitch of an eye,
The dimpling of a cheek,
Then the fullness of bosom Betray the secret."

When sudden fainting spells come upon a lady, she may always expect some serious disturbance of her health, or some great disorder in the circulation and nervous system. A great that has always proved a wonderful and restorative in such cases is Dr.
Miles' Nervine. It is the cause of them, corrects the circulation, and and gives a healthy tone to the nerves, being serious energy so essential, hence
Dr. Miles' Nervine is invaluable.

THE JUDGE'S TWO CASES

Judge Sharpe had just tied together a bundle of papers and tossed them into a pigeon-hole when a young man came in.

"How are you, my boy? Sit down.
What can I do for you today? Are you light in the head, or how much ought to be a lesson to all young fellows who are fooling with Bobbsville?"

"It isn't a lie exactly, but a trouble you need, I would, if were only that."

"Lewis vs. Lewis, notice for a little divorce, on the ground of incompatibility, and cruelty and so on forth. You sign the young Women's Bachelor Club."

Leaving nobbles.

"Well, young man, what's your trouble?"

"Judge, I want you to be clinical, and tell me what is it together. Well,"

"Well, it does, Judge, I don't know what to do."

"Go on," said the Judge, as the stammer interrupted him with a wave of his hand.

"Whoever heard of a tramp working to do anything," he said musingly.
"Well, I'm a tramp, and I'm people won't have it. Change the Effect of Light on the Skin.

Others the skin is exposed to an unaccustomed amount of light, it becomes decidedly influenced, and is said to be "sunburned." Hummer has ascertained by experiments with electric lights, that this influence of fortion is caused almost entirely by the violet rays, since also in the ultraviolet or photographic rays of the spectrum. "Sunburned," therefore, is hardly a correct expression, and it is the phenomenon of tan
which is produced by the action of the violet rays of the spectrum. "Sunburned," therefore, is a correct expression, since it imparts a color to the skin in question is the effect of heat. The violet rays produce a tan, or brown, however, lifeless, essentially different from that of a healthy glow, or a sudden and quickly-transient blushing. The skin of the face of the latter is delayed for some time after the exposure to the
followed by a detachment of the cuticle
and a discoloration continuing for months, and sometimes, some months
the sensibility of the skin is so that it is not in a condition for days of rudeness these symptoms, electric light, increased by heating
ing in ultra-violet rays, exerts a very powerful influence in this direction
even at a distance where heat radiation is absolutely inappreciable, somestances that produce the ultra-violet rays to cross freely—such as water, quartz, rock crystal, olive oil, cod
ceum, etc.—when applied on the skin, produce a tan, or brown, and whatever in preceding sunburning.

Rats.

W. W. Newell, the Secretary of the American Folk Lore Society, has been collecting the rare information
as to the caution which prevails in many parts of this country of riddling
a house of rats by sitting them a letter in which they are recommended to leave the premises for the sake of another party of the country. This method of getting rid of rats is quite peculiar, to say, appears to be well known, but is commonly regarded as a jest. It is a survival, however,
of a belief in the entirely serious and ancient usage. He gives a specimen of such a letter, written up in Maine
no later than 1885, in which the rats are duly requested to leave. The letter is addressed, "Rats of the Hermitage," and begins by stating that it is under the direction of

CHARLEVOIX, JULY 15, 1892.

For President—
BENJAMIN HARRISON,
Of Indiana.

For Vice President—
WHITELAW REID,
Of New York.

The Democratic platform starts off with a violent harangue against what it denominates the "force bill," meaning thereby the measure which the Republicans sought to pass to protect the rights of qualified electors in the exercise of their constitutional right to vote and have their ballots counted. Republicans will gladly accept this issue as one among the several important issues of the campaign. The attitude of the Democratic party on this matter suggests that the question of manhood suffrage is very likely to force itself into supreme importance in the not distant future. It is a foul blot upon the honor of this nation that the constitutional rights of some millions of citizens should be systematically stolen from them and trampled upon all they are in the South today. The people of the United States have conquered the Democratic party once, and if necessary can do it again.

The Bloody Conflict at the Carnegie Works.

One of the most sanguinary conflicts of its kind in the history of the country occurred at the Carnegie Iron Works at Homestead, near Pittsburg, Pa., on the 6th.

A reduction in the scale of wages precipitated a strike. The firm attempted to resume work with nonunion men, and the attempt was resisted by the amalgamated society of Iron Workers by force or arms. Over 500 Pinkerton men were brought to the spot to protect the works, and they were met with bullets. Nine of the Pinkertons were killed and several of the mob. Fully 25 lives were lost in the light, and many wounded, and the end is not yet.

It is useless to moralize, or point out lessons. It is only an incident which attaches to the problem of capital and labor, of which no country of system is exempt. Free trade England is cursed with greater evils of its kind, but meets them with firmer hand and more summary treatment.

Here it is only a question of how best to remedy the evils as rife with sorrow. Of course, coming at this time, free traders turn the incident to account as an argument against protection, but fail to point out where free trade has ever bettered the condition of labor. Even Cleveland's reduced scale of wages is higher than that of any like concern in any free trade country in the world.

The free traders greet the troubles with the glee and rejoicing that the English manufacturers feel over any trouble or embarrassment that comes to their American competitors. It is true these troubles are not due to any increase of tariff in the McKinley bill because that bill lowered instead of raising the duties on iron. But it is all the same to the Democratic and mugwump American free trader. He thrives on calamity. The Democratic party always grins when there is a drouth, or panic, or flood or any hard trouble in the country, and they look upon the Homestead troubles as a godsend.

Benjamin Harrison.

(The Independent, Religious Weekly.)

Benjamin Harrison has now been President for nearly three years, and while it is too soon to pronounce judgment upon his administration which, however, is universally regarded as any able one—i. e. not too soon to form an estimate of his personal character as exhibited in his public action.

There is, perhaps no position in the world in which a man's character is tested as it is in that of the President of this great republic. The labors of the office are very severe; the trials and perpexities unlimited the pitfalls countless and the temptations many and strong. He is subjected to the most remorseless criticism; every act he performs, every fayor he grants, every word he utters, is weighed and judged; and he is held strictly responsible for the remote consequences of both his acts and his refusal to act.

President Harrison is very fortunate in his equipment for this high office. He possesses a strong physique, is compactly built, has a vigorous appetite good digestion, full sleeping capacity an even temper and the power of long sustained labor. He loves work and takes a keen delight in the avowed mental effort.

A college graduate a trained lawyer, successful and yet acquainted with adversity a soldier with a practical knowledge of campaigns and battles; a local politician of the better sort; for six years a United States Senator with a wide acquaintance with the ablest men of his day; a careful student of history and of contemporaneous political movements; an independent thinker, and a close observer of men and methods, he comes to the Presidency in in prime of life, fully cognizant of the exalted dignity of the position and filled with an ambition to meet worthily all proper demands that it might make upon him.

The English Annual Fair of the Charlevoix Co. Agricultural Society will be held at the grounds of the Driving Park in East Jordan on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, September 20th, 21st and 22d.

Petoskey Democrat: Capt. Neil Gallagher of Beaver island has sent H. O. Hose an eighteen pound cannon ball dug up on the island, and supposed to have been dred from the government building at the time of the Mormon troubles and the murder of King Strang.

Capt. M. Cummings has put a little steamer, the "Sallie," on Carp lake, to run between Lee & Pounch's landing, where it connects with the M. & N. E. R. R. for Traverse City. By this means Leland[illegible] and the people of Provement, Bingham and other points on both sides of Carp lake can go to Traverse City, stay seven hours, and reach home the same night.

The Endress-Booth fight at Whitefish Point over fishing rights and property is at an end. Endress & Sons have sold their entire plant and property to the Booth packing company, of Chicago. The Chicago people take possession at once, but Endress & Sons will manage the business until January 1, 1893.

Grand Traverse Herald: We understand that "Indian Jake" died at his home in Pushaskenaw, a few days ago. "Indian Jake" has always been a noticeable figure on the streets of Traverse City ever since we got a town here. He was a chief aboriginal resident of the Indian days of Michigan and was popularly supposed to be, as he would put it himself, "more'n a hundred" years old. He was a fine specimen of the old time red men, and we old have graced the pages of Hiawatha.

—There seems to be a great demand for cows in this locality. Here is a chance to buy one offered for sale by Bill Nye: "Owing to ill health I will sell at my residence in town 19, range 13 west, according to government survey, one plush raspberry colored cow, age, eight years. She is a good milkster, and not afraid of the cars or anything else. She is of undaunted courage and gives milk frequently. To a man who does not fear death in any form she would be a treasure. She is very much attached to her home at present, by means of a stay chain, but she will be sold to anyone who will use her right. She is one-fourth cheetor and three-fourth hyena. I will also throw in a double-barreled shotgun which goes with her. In May she generally goes away for a week or two and returns with a tail red calf with wabby legs. Her name is Hove, and I would prefer to sell her to a non-resident."

The Colonna Boomer: We understand that the county now is being canvassed to call a meeting for local option. They might better call a meeting and see what can begin for some new county buildings....President Harrison desires it to be understood that the politicians who helps him most in this campaign may be secretary of State next year. Groves will take the stump and boom Harrison. Is there any chance for us Den....The London Times say that Cleveland is the man to elect for president of United States. We wonder if England capitalists will spend $1,000,000 buying votes in the coming campaign as they did in the last. More money in the country? Hog-so!

Celebration Notes.

Elk Rapids Progress: About one hundred Elk Rapids citizens attended the celebration at Charlevoix. Speaking of Fourth of July celebrations it was immense. They had everything, and in some instances three times of a kind to afford pleasure to the guests.

Bellaire Breeze: The number of tickets sold on the railroad for Charlevoix last Monday was 3,000. The hose company has many words of praise for the Charlevoix boys, who attended to them every courtesy and did their best to make their visitors feel at home.

East Jordan Enterprise: All in all Charlevoix can be proud of the excellence of the arrangements for the accommodation of the immense crowd and also that so large a celebration should pass off without accident to mar the pleasure.

Petoskey Democrat: Good order and good nature prevailed, and on the whole Charlevoix is to be congratulated on the success of the day.

ABOUT MOTHS

An Old Subject, But One of Absorbing Interest.

It is an old subject, the subject of moths, but till the middle of April the moth lays her eggs and hatches the grub into its devastating feed season of from one to three weeks, to the period of its pupa stage. It is well to remember that the moth never destroys woolens; it is the worm. It is well to remember that camphor and all the other vile odors will never protect fabrics in the least.

If a woman puts a garment away that has scorched as she moth egg a box of camphor won't prevent that egg hatching, if the egg and hatch is in it. The only way to preserve a garment from the ravages of the moth is to absolutely sure in the first place that a moth has laid no eggs in it, and this is not easy to discover, because with the mother instinct it creeps in dark crevices, the more obscure the better, and its eggs are as small as the point of a pin. It coats these eggs, or incrusts them with a covering, and you might beat and beat the garment and not in the slightest degree hurt the eggs. Now you can put that garment away in a camphor chest and heap a ton of camphor on top of it, and if one of these eggs hatches a worm, that worm will start in to feed.

The only way to be sure that none of these eggs are put away in a garment is to keep the garment out under constant surveillance for two or three weeks before putting it away, and in that time any newly hatched worm will develop into a size that can be readily seen. Once a garment is absolutely free of the egg or the worm, it can be put up in a paper parcel or any thing else that will keep the living moth out with perfect impunity for a moth will never bore its way into any thing.

SEVEN MOONS OF SONOMA.

One of the Most Remarkable Spots on the Continent.

Sonoma Valley, in Sonoma county, California, is, in one respect at least, one of the most remarkable spots on the continent. It is the only place in America where the moon seems to rise and set seven times in one evening. The Indians gave the valley the name it bears away back in the misty past, and many have been the explanations offered by the white man to account for it. Even a slight acquaintance with the language spoken by the original inhabitants of the valley teaches one that words used in Sonoma is attached the whole phrase means "Valley of the Moon." But why does this natural stalk have Luna's other name attached to it? That was the question asked and left unanswered for many years, even though the phenomenon which had caused the observant red man to give the valley name in question was regularly witnessed and admired. A year or two ago a gentleman of the Sonoma Valley visited an Indian who was supposed to be between 100 and 150 years old. In course of the conversation the old Indian stated that the reason the valley was called Sonoma was because it had "heap moshes moon," meaning many moons. Then he told how between the town of Sonoma and a certain peak the moon, when in its full, can be seen to rise seven times in succession in one evening, owing to the peculiar formation of the mountains. The valley was settled centuries ago by the Indians, who called it Sonoma, and the depression "The Valley of Many Moons."

Maine Gold and Glum.

A. O. Reed, who is merchant, postmaster, constable, tax collector and Poet Laureate of the enterprising hamlet known as Dixon's Corners, in Oxford county, Maine, divides his time nowadays between gold and gum, both of which are produced in the Swift river country. Last year Mr. Reed bought $4,000 worth of gold that was picked up by the Swift river miners, and this year he expects that many times that amount will reward the diggers, who are going into the business with the usual appliances. The spruce gum crop of that wild region is of far greater value up to date than the gold product, however. Last year Mr. Reed shipped 200 pounds of gum to various parts of the United States. Pure spruce gum is worth 40 cents a pound at Gum Corner, and the pickers average three pounds a day. The refuse or crumbs of the gum is refined and melted into penny chews.

Extravagance of Women in Olden Times.

Speaking of the extravagance of women in our day, Marie de Medicis had a given saves with 35,000 pearls and 5,000 diamonds, and her example was followed by lesser personages, who cheerfully expended more than their incomes on gowns so laden with precious stones that their wearers could scarcely move erect in them. Mme de Montespan, the beauty who reigned at the court of Louis XIV., wore at one great court festival "a gown of gold on gold, and over that gold frieze studded with rose gold which makes the most divine stuff that has ever been imagined," according to the panegyrics written by the pen of Mme. de Sevigne.

Reading a Stone by Telephone.

A gentleman was trying to talk with a neighboring town the other day over the long-distance 'phone, and was seeling a little information that was current on the streets of the town. Could anybody be found who would go out and pick it up. The young man at the distant 'phone was disinclined to accommodate, without stating the reason why, and finally the help of Utica "Toll-board" was implored. The conversation between "Toll-board" and the distant town was quite interesting. "Just step out on the street," the toll board" "Well, you run right along, and I'll watch the store for you." The young man went, and "Toll-board" kept her word by keeping her ear to the receiver at Utica, forty miles from the scene.

Everything Was at a Sale.

A Walla Walla, Wash., man about a year ago started a man out with a band of sheep on the range. A few days ago he received the following from him: "If you wantime to remain here any longer, you'll have to get another band of sheep; there's all gone."

SENDING OUT SAMPLES.

A Seeming Trifle That Costs a Great Deal of Money.

"I wonder whether one person in a thousand who asks for a sample of a piece of dry goods ever stops to think what it costs the merchants of this country a year to satisfactorily respond to the simple request?" asks a dry goods merchant.

"I had a talk with the managers of a dozen or more big houses one day, and among other things discussed was that of giving away samples and sending out samples of dry goods, etc., by salesmen. Finally we got to figuring on the matter. The result was most appalling. Some of us had been computing with big factories in our lines, as well as other large houses, wholesale and retail. We found that, placed at a conservative figure, there are more than $5,000,000 worth of goods given away and consequently destroyed, in samples every year in the United States.

"This $5,000,000 or more, eventually, of course, comes out of the pockets of the purchasers, or, more properly speaking, the consumers of dry goods. The sample feature of the dry goods business is at once one of the greatest nuisances and blessings that we have. Where the nuisance comes in it is easily to be seen, the blessing of it is in the fact that it saves us, or, I should say, the dearly beloved people, many a thousand dollars which otherwise would go for the expenses of sending out more travelling salesmen. Thousands of dollars' worth of goods are sent out every day to retail merchants over the country from which we never hear a word. But do we lose by them—never! We simply count upon it as being so much clear loss or necessary expense, along with clerk hire, taxes, etc., and ask the store for the goods that we sell.

THE PLOT THICKENS.

DECISIVE POLITICAL MOVES IN ALL QUARTERS.

John W. Foster of Indiana Succeeds Blaine—Tarsney and Bynum Are Also Talked of—Tickets Published in Ill. Soon After Their Hand—Three Spaniards Killed.

At Washington.

In the House, yesterday, the Indian appropriation bill, on which an agreement was reached Saturday night, was further delayed by a couple of hours were spent in the consideration of a bill amendatory of the timber culture laws, and but it was withdrawn without action. Mr. Hiscock of Missouri, chairman of the Committee on Agriculture, reported back the Senate bill for the relief of Mississippi levee bills, with the Senate amendments thereto, and asked that the Senate amendments (recommended by the committee) and a conference ordered. This was agreed to. Mr. Cutcheon rose to bring up the Pacific bill, and House adjourned. In the Senate there was a long discussion of the resolution of Mr. Morgan, calling for information from Secretary John W. Foster's nomination, to the Venezuelan Arbitration Commission, to succeed Blaine. The legislative, Executive and Judicial appropriation bill was then taken up, the question being on the amendment as to the salary of the Chief Justice, which was agreed to—yeas, 28, nays 24. The salaries of the five Commissioners were fixed at three thousand, but a proviso offered another amendment that any judge appointed to the vacancy should be appointed from the territory of Utah. Agreed to. The Pension Appropriation bill then came up. The only important amendment recommended by the Committee on Appropriations, or one to restore from $12,000,000 to $15,000,000 the appropriation for the payment of pensions, which was agreed to, after a long debate the committee amendments were agreed to, and the bill passed. The bill was then sent back to the House with the Senate amendments, and House adjourned.

Gold Water Bonds.

This month half of Cincinnati, the Queen City, as been the scene of many a notable gathering that has left its impress upon the history of the State and of the country. An earlier one than it had a more determined, carnal, and endless shadow resting on it, and women there which assembled under the big Dome Wednesday morning. A score of years have passed since the opponents of the Nebraska and the Dred Scott decisions of the Slave traffic, meeting together for the purpose of shaping the history of the Republic, determined to display the spirit of the Pilgrims of Plymouth and to prepare a Presidential ticket in the field. That was the World's Fair of 1856. In 1872, and in every succeeding Presidential campaign they have called the roll of the dead, the maid and battled at the polls in defiance of their prophecies. Now, although the feeling that for many years to come there will be but little more than a campaign of education, they are stepping more boldly than ever before in the grate assurance that they have ever been right in the first place, that their prohibition cause, and surely the beautiful convention hall, never presented a more attractive—one might say enchanting—appearance than it did Wednesday morning when the sun peeped through the dim clouds, and shone full in the dome.

Iowa Republican Tickets.

The following ticket was placed in nomination by the Iowa Republican State Convention at Des Moines Wednesday:

Secretary of State, ... WM. M. McPAIL.
Auditor of State, ... JOHN L. BRIGHAM.
Treasurer, ... BYRON A. BENJAMIN.
Judge of Supreme Court, ... JOHN H. ROTHROCK.
Railroad Commissioner, ... GEO. R. PETERSON.
Electors-at-large, ... A. R. ANDREWS.
J. WILSON SCHLEE.

Twenty years was represented, and Grand Opera House was comfortably filled. Pen, pencil and pictures of years, there was not so great an assemblage of intelligent Republicans. It was elaborately decorated with the national colors and portraits of eminent men. In the rear of the stage was an immense canvas, with a circle of Horrors and Relic, and in the background was a representation of a northern vessel plowing the seas.

The Confederates of Pulaski, Tennessee, assembled in the courthouse to hear speeches and interviews, and to have passing animadv of the government, which they denounced as crazed Republicans in Germany. The festival ended in a general fight between the German newspapers.

Washington dispatch: The President has sent to the Senate the nomination of John W. Foster, of Indiana, to be Secretary of State, to succeed James G. Blaine. A confidential adviser of the President says that the appointment will not be made until next March, owing to the wont of the President's selection. Mr. Foster, whose diplomatic successes with other governments are a matter of universal remarkable distinction in unwilling to forego them for a longer time. Meanwhile, the other government would be unwilling to hold the offer of a portfolio, either or commit to the negotiations open for a longer time. By the appointment of Foster, it is said that interests are properly placed in congenial hands in our relations with Mexico, Canada, and the outlying West Indies, to come the foreign negotiations with the new Siliga.

EASTERN.

The Goshen (N. Y.) National Bank closed Monday, pending an examination, and Cashier Will. A. M. Murray has left this place. The bank has suffered a loss of from $50,000 to $70,000 and its capital has been impaired to the extent of $50,000.

The most disastrous wreck that has ever occurred in Harrisburg, Pa., took place Saturday morning at 12:30 o'clock at Dock street. The second section of the Western express ran into the first section, completely demolishing the engine. Five Dollar Street Commercial Hotel, Pittsburgh, was also on fire in the morgue at the Pennsylvania Railroad depot. The number of injured is placed at forty, but it is impossible to authenticate this report. It rained hard, which was greatly retarded the work of rescue. Thirteen bodies were recovered.

Wilson Horne, a top-sawed-off, an employee of Joseph Wiggs jewelry store in Fitzsburg, Pa., was arrested on charging jewelry valued at $20,000. The boy has been systematically cutting the sawed-off for months, and when arrested had nearly $10,000 worth of diamonds on his person. He would take a $250 gold watch, and after knocking the works into river would pound the case out of shape and sell it for old gold. All of his ill-gotten gains the recipients of valuable presents, including diamond rings and watches. Young Horne is well connected, and his arrest was a great surprise to his friends.

Norwood Notes.

Temperance lecturer Hill is a very interesting and pleasant speaker.

Miss Angie Wood has returned from Ripon, Wis., where she has been attending college the past year.

Mrs. G. Y. Nash and family have returned from Bay View.

Miss Kate L. Meech arrived from Lake Forest, Ill., Saturday, and is visiting at her sisters, Mrs. G. Y. Nash.

The school meeting Tuesday evening was well attended, quite a number of the ladies being present. Mr. Babcock has been engaged to teach the coming year, and it was voted to hire an assistant for the first two terms of twenty-six weeks. It will be necessary to raise about eleven hundred dollars school money this year, so remember, gentlemen, the cause of big taxes next winter.

The Norwood and Eastport ball teams will meet on the diamond at Norwood Saturday, at 2:30 p. m. It's the big game.

C. H. Ferguson returned to Chicago Monday. Geo. M. Ferguson will be up this week to picnic for a few days. George now has a partnership with his father in the insurance business of the Mutual Life of New York.

The Chase boys are over on the intermediate lakes this week camping and fighting mosquitoes.

The band boys will have an ice cream festival and lots of other good things next Friday evening, in the pleasant grounds at Mrs. Alson Woods' in Banks. We hope Banks and Norwood folks will turn out and have a good sociable visit. Pony Hilton is also invited.

Geo. H. VanDyke came up Sunday to attend church and go to school meeting.

W. S. Blake had a two year old heifer killed a day or two afterward.

The law says it shall be the duty of every owner, occupant or person having charge of lands in this state to cut down all milkweed growing thereon, or on land between the center of highway passing through the same, in each and every year so often as shall be necessary to prevent said milkweed going to seed. Any owner, occupant, or person having charge of such lands who shall knowingly suffer any such milk-weed to grow thereon and the same to ripen shall be punished by a fine of ten dollars and costs of suit. The law also makes it the duty of the overseers of highway to look after the matter and proceed in a similar manner as they do in the destruction of Canada thistles. If they neglect the milkweed business they are liable to fine and imprisonment. We know of several milkweed patches in Hayes that are coming into blossom now and the crop looks large enough to seed the county.

MASON & BERDAN.

C. L. S. C.

The Chautauqua year closed by a picnic in the park last Saturday afternoon, given by the vanquished to the victors. A most enjoyable afternoon was spent in the pleasant picnic grounds, followed by a dainty tea and closed by several spicy toasts. We shall all be ready to commence work in the fall with increased ardor.

—R. Hutton, of South Arm, committed suicide last Monday forenoon, by shooting himself with a 32-calibre revolver. The ball entered his left breast, and glancing upward broke his neck. Domestic difficulty the cause. The funeral occurs this afternoon.

—The steamer Thos. Friant has abandoned regular trips to East Jordan, and will do an excursion business the balance of the season.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co. are selling as good flour as is made in the state. Try it.

The Rifenburg Milling Co. continue to sell flour at remarkably low prices.

A NAPOLEONIC RELIC.

A Rare Decoration Found in a Boston Old Curiosity Shop.

In a queer little store, heaped with all sorts of curiosities, a day or two ago was discovered among the old pewter mugs and time-stained prints a heap of metals from the scattered collection of some enthusiast. There were several bearing the head of her most gracious Britannic majesty, with different inscriptions upon the reverse. Upon one was a sphinx and the words "Egypt, 1801." Another had been the reward of some poor fellow who endured the hardships of the trenches before Sebastopol, when the allies held the Russian foes in check during that terrible winter. A Turkish medal, referring to the same campaign was also among the lot. But the most interesting of all—and, of course, most valuable—was a cross of the Legion of Honor of the great Napoleon. These are very rare, although those distributed by the head of the Third empire with such a lavish hand are common. But the one in hand, hanging from the worn crimson ribbon, had been presented to some brave or learned man by the great leader himself. The white enamel here slightly chipped from the ends of the five-pointed cross, but the jewel was remarkably well preserved. The center was of gold and bore the head of the emperor, with a green wreath of oak and laurel surrounding the medallion. On the reverse and corresponding to the letter were the tri-colors crossed, with the words "Honneur et Patrie" encircling them. So rare are these crosses that it is thought the one now in hoston is the sole specimen in this country. There are several collectors in this city who prize such treasures, so it will probably remain here in some private cabinet.

A THIRTEEN CLUB.

A Body of Young Men Anxious to Rent a Haunted House.

If thirteen young men—lawyers and physicians—who have organized a thirteen club in New Haven can find a haunted house to meet to they will be most happy. The organization is nearly complete, the by-laws and rules have been drawn up and adopted, and the only thing lacking is the haunted house. If this can not be found it is proposed to use the dead-house owned by the town. Among the rules are almost everything superstitious people avoid. The president is to sit under an umbrella during all meetings and at the quarterly dinners. A ladder will be raised in the room and every member entering will pass under it.

A cross-eyed janitor will be secured, and one of the members whose hair is fiery red will be obliged to enter the meeting room first every time it is opened. A chairman will be seated opposite the president at every toast, and two black cats will be purchased and kept in the club room. Each member takes a solemn obligation to look at the new moon over his left shoulder, pass on each side of a post when two are walking together, walk between any couples who may be seen walking together on the street, and do everything contrary to the adopted custom. The meetings will be held on Friday evenings, and if any member has to make a journey he will start on Friday or on the 13th of the month.

PEOPLE WITHOUT A NATION.

The Only Application That Has Been Refused.

One nation, or people, will not be given space at the world's fair. The application for exhibition room made by this nation has been laid aside, and, strange to say, there is to be no objection made to the decision.

The Cree has made this application, which has been refused, the action in laying the matter aside being based upon the fact that, as a nation, the Czechs have no existence. One or two prominent German newspapers, some Australian publications and a few of Bohemia have mentioned the fact, but with no attempts at criticism, as it seems pretty well understood that the Czechs have no rights which would entitle them to representation as a nation.

The Czechs are a branch of the Slavonic race, which includes the Bohemians and the Czechs, and form the predominant element in Bohemia and Moravia, where their number is estimated at 2,320,000 and 1,352,000 respectively. They also contribute something like 614,000 to the population of Hungary, being located mainly on the northwest frontiers. To Austria Silesia the Czechs contribute 30,000, and to Prussia Silesia, 60,000, besides a considerable to Austria proper, Croatia-Slavonia. But the Czechs will not be at the world's fair as a separate nation of the earth.

Prevalence of Alcoholic Drinking.

"Alcoholic drinking is being carried to that extent today," said Dr. J. G. Brown of Chicago, "that it would seem to possess an irresistible temptation for all, but especially for young men, and not only alcoholic but cocaine is being used in larger quantities than I believe has been known at any other time. Some people say argue that alcoholic has no disastrous qualities. Do not believe in the argument. Medical science shows that it is the worst of all stimulating drinks. Its effects somewhat resemble those produced by other alcoholic liquors, and some doctors have therefore gone to the extent of declaring that there is no difference in the injury it produces. The best authorities, men who speak from knowledge acquired both by study and experiment, show that when used to excess it produces a mental and nervous condition which seldom follows the abuse of the strongest of other intoxicants. Disarrangement of the nerves, unbearable headaches, terrifying hallucinations—all these things follow its constant abuse. The ultimate end to which these things lead is apparent to the least observing perusor of the daily journals of the country."

RATHER FISHY.

A Somewhat Tall Story About a Bull-Dog Catching Trout.

Charles Johnson, of Babylon, occasionally indulges in a fish story. He told a fishy one recently to a company at the Sherman house, Brooklyn, and as those present did not even smile it may be recorded as a fact. Mr. Johnson owns a trout stream and also a bull-dog. Just what the bull-dog's connection with the trout stream was was not made clear to the reporter. Yet he could imagine a chagrined angler making his escape from Johnson's stream with the canine chewing the after part of his trousers.

On this point Mr. Johnson said notably, however, but proceeded to tell how the dog would catch the fish. The canine knew all the bogs and holes where the trout secreted themselves, and was often noticed to creep along the bank of the stream to such places and shove a stone in the water, frightening the fish from its repose. As the fish would dart out into the stream the bull dog would spring at it and very often come to the surface with the fish in its mouth. Mr. Johnson said the dog had paths beaten all around the banks of the stream where he had traveled from bog to bog in pursuing his amusement.

Two Boys.

The late ex-Governor W. W. Holden started in life as a printer's devil. One cold morning the boy was delivering papers, and as rich man's mansion he was invited into the dining room to warm himself by the fire. A loud some college boy on a visit to the family was sitting at the table, and when the little devil left this comfortable and happy perch handed him a buttered biscuit.

Young Holden walked off eating his biscuit, enjoying the college student and feeling very blue.

Time brings wonderful changes. Thirty years later the boy who gave the biscuit was defeated for governor by the bare-footed lad who received it.

—Dr. F. M. Coe, Veterinary Surgeon, has located an office in Horn's livery barn in this place, and will respond to all calls for operative surgery or the treatment of horses for any of the diseases that horse flesh is heir to. Dr. Coe has the advantage of a thorough education in his profession, and after years of practice, is satisfied that he can give satisfaction.

—Last Friday the elements seem to have been on a tear. The day opened with a remarkable electric storm, in which the Western Union telegraph office wires cut, and several telephones burned out. Following this came a hail storm, during which hail stones as large as cherries fell. To wind up with, the wind "cracked its cheeks" the rest of the day in a gale of unusual severity.

—The location of the site of the proposed new "Lindsay Park" hotel will make the Driving Park folks smile a big smile. It is well out in that direction, and will be a very material benefit to the projects attached to that enterprise. And while we are speaking of it, why should not owners of Mt. Macswiha lots smile also? That slightly pinacle is in close proximity, and our friend Mr. Way will surely want that boulevard extended skyward. Folks over on the Canadian side are in luck.

—Grand Army Day occurs at Bay View this year on Tuesday, August 2nd. General William Gates, of Ohio, unquestionably the greatest Grand Army orator in the Union, will speak at 2 p. m. Grand Army posts and men from Harbor Springs, Alanson, St. Ignace, Mackinac Island, Cheboygan, Charlevoix, Boyne City, Boyne Falls, Horton's Bay, Elmira, East Jordan and Mancelona are cordially invited, and will be admitted to the auditorium on their badge or button.

Railroad Notes.

A change has been made in the train schedule, by which the evening train arrives from the south at 9 instead of 8:30, as before.

Mr. Henry Campbell is the new conductor of the "suburban" train.

The fence gang is at work in this vicinity, and the telegraph construction still linger.

The track scales are here and will be in next week. They will be located up the track near the coal platform.

The passenger station will be completed this week. A cut of the structure was printed in this paper some time ago. It is architecturally one of the finest depots on this system. The interior is metropolitan in every respect. The main entrance is from the west side, through an open arched vestibule, to the main waiting room. The ticket office occupies the front center, and is lighted by a large bay window. The ladies waiting room and also the main waiting room, are supplied with wash-rooms and closets, elegantly equipped with the most approved appliances. The finish throughout is in hardwood, and in every detail, the building is a credit to Charlevoix and to the company.

LINDSAY PARK.

The "Dixon Farm" Resort Properly Platted.

Mr. F. W. Stevens, a Grand Rapids civil engineer, has been here the past week staking out what is known as the C. & W. M. resort plat, purchased last fall from Jos. R. Dixon, and since added to by other purchases. That portion of Charlevoix will hereafter be known and hailed as "Lindsay Park."

Although it is generally spoken of as "the C. & W. M." resort grounds, the fact is, the owners are Chas. M. Heald and Wm. Alden Smith. The plat embraces, besides the Dixon farm, the "Mather place," lying on the state road at the north east extremity of the Dixon farm; the Cruickshank lot, and the Bell lot, in the same vicinity. The latter two, although a part of the plat, are not included in the syndicate property. The entire plat embraces about 120 acres, lying within the boundaries of the state road, the railroad, and Dixon and Chicago avenues.

The grounds are divided into 400 lots, 50x125 feet in size. The division of the grounds, as shown by the plat, is a most admirable arrangement, and will eventually make that portion of Charlevoix the most beautiful within its limits. A boulevard is laid out along the edge of the terrace, intersecting Chicago avenue near the Club House, and the State road on the opposite side of the grounds. Seven 66 foot streets run parallel with Chicago avenue, and two streets that width run at right angles with them.

The second street from Dixon avenue is to be the highway to the freight depot, and will follow, nearly, the present private road to the Dixon place. Work on this street is to be begun at once, and the terrace at the Dixon place graded down and platted, and will practically be an extension of Dixon avenue to the freight house. The new portion of the street will be graveled the entire length at once.

It is well known, a prominent feature of the project is the erection of a large resort hotel. Much speculation is in progress relative to the probable location of the hostelrie. The somewhat surprising information is given that it will be erected on the Mather property. It is a triangular piece of land lying on the State road opposite the intersection of the "Mt. MacSawha road." Yet we are certain that time will justify the choice. It lies just above the railroad track, well located for a special station, overlooks Pine Lake, and will be on the proposed boulevard. Little can be learned yet as to the details of the hotel project, more than that its erection is determined upon—probably next year.

Auxiliary to those resort plans, is the purpose of General Manager Heald to improve the company's property all along the lake front. A graveled roadway will be constructed just below the terrace for general traffic in connection with the railroad. The sand waste between the two depots and the lake will be transformed into parks and graveled walks, and every spot not occupied by buildings or tracks, or used by vehicles, will be made as attractive as the genius of the landscape gardener can devise. The city water works will be extended to the grounds and be made to contribute their share to the work of beautifying the lawns and flower beds.

The work of beautifying, of course, cannot be begun, until the more practical necessities of business are provided about the company's premises; but another spring will see the inauguration of the projects we have outlined, and the well known reputation of the C. & W. M. management is a sufficient guaranty that everything will be done on a scale of generous proportions.

It is self-evident that "Charlevoix the Beautiful," will be made more beautiful by the genius and at the head of this enterprise; and that it may prove profitable to them as well as to us all, is the earnest wish of every citizen of Charlevoix.

TRUE—A POEM IN MONOSYLLABLES.

The fair hall blazes which lend the sun
Thro' lace at windows of stain
Thro' lace at windows of stain
Thro' lace at windows of stain

In yon hall, now illumed and lighted,
A gay ball is held at midnight
All laugh and sing, and dance and play
The fair hall is dazzled and dark gray

Where are the flirts, the belles, the beaux,
And mamas, and papas, and dowagers?
Which intrigue the ground, the glass, the bowers
Which ogle, which sigh, which whisper

Home with the sweets call home and light
Home at the eve and late night
Life spin down into the good night,
Life spin down into the good night.

On the top bough of our orchard the gale
Sits all night and sings a sad tale
A song, that is full of death and gloom,
Dirge, all mournful to sing.

Above all the bright stars the moon
Its pale silver beam, and serene
So calm, so still, so cold, so sage,
Still the Judas-fold dead.

Yet here, where the fire-fly sends out its light
The dew-bed on the wilted bean
Life, and Death in the fair fair scene,
And Death in the fair fair scene.

As sure as the bee, when all the bush
Is such, sings, and the bird
Life, and Death in the fair fair scene,
And Death in the fair fair scene.

Oh, though the friends Lenore held dear
Are but as a dream
I feel my guide, Lenore are here,
My hope, my light, my comfort.

A FAMILY OF BURGLARS.

In a large town in the North of Ireland stong burglaries had taken place and been committed and many deaths been occasioned by the burglars, so much so that the police had to send down detectives to investigate the affair.

The fact is, the people who had committed these depredations, were well up to their business, so cunning and shrewd, as well as bold and daring, that it was very hard to trace the culprits anywhere to which a clue could be gained to fix a reasonable suspicion.

At last the detectives seek work out at midnight, and then, as usual, in a day or two, changing between one transport and another, and consuming a period of weeks, but the dark business, so cunningly contriving that no master of a house felt precisely safe behind his locked and bolted doors, while ladies everywhere become nervously timid and afraid of their own windows.

Yet no clue of these latter, as far as we know, could be secured, or even a sight of a midnight robber.

Money, watches, jewelry of all kinds, and valuable plate were stolen from many places and rarely any thing else.

Of these valuables not a trace could subsequently be found, showing that the scoundrels were too well off and too rounding to dispose of them in the usual channels.

When I was sent for to try my skill in detecting out and bringing the guilty parties to justice, and had everything explained to me, I agreed to enter upon my task on condition that every other detective should be recalled, that it should be given out that the mystery was too deep to be solved; that it should not be known I was anywhere in the neighborhood, and that I should be left to take my own time and pursue my own course, with money enough at my command to carry out my plans, I undertook the task.

I started out with the theory that these burglaries, when actually operating, exactly where valuables were concerned, and what they had to do in get possession of them; that they had no settled money dealing, consequently their plunder till it could be disposed of at a distance, was in their hands, or near at hand that to find the operators I must look for them high and low in low life, rather than in low city, gas I might adopt.

In the guise of a gentleman I set out to get acquainted with some of the low, but well dressed, and decided myself as Frank Henderson, of London.

After that I soon managed to let it be noticed that I had been an officer in the army, that I had only retired on coming into possession of a large fortune left to a deceased uncle and that I was now traveling, partly for pleasure and partly to see if I was as astute, my uncle having also left me a competency of his design so that I should buy land and settle down.

Of course I requested all that to be kept a profound secret because I wished it to be known to my friends. It was made known far and wide to every man or woman who heard of it telling it to some other man or woman as a profound secret.

In the course of the next two or three weeks I found quite a number of the best known burglars, made their acquaintance, and received numerous invitations to visit them at the houses of the notorious gentry.

During the next month my visiting list became so extensive as to include all the leading families in the place and as I rummaged goods of all kinds, I soon became conversant with all the prominent gentlemen connected with those families during the preceding years.

Among a great many facts of more or less interest—but which, as they have no connection with my story, I shall not here rehearse—I learned who were old families and who were new; who were rich and who were comparatively poor; who had property to sell and who had not; and who had money and who had none robbed during the past two years.

Among the newcomers, who had taken up their residence in the town since that period, was a family of the name of M'Loughlin, consisting of a venerable mother, her married son and his wife, another son, and two blooming daughters.

Carefully enough, their house had been broken into and robbed shortly after their arrival, and as a considerable sum of money and much valuable jewelry had been taken, the matter was, to heart of the family, had at once offered a large reward for the detection and punishment of the villains, but to no avail.

John M'Loughlin was a man of about thirty-five years of age, considerable of good address, and had, it was said, an ample private income.

His wife was handsome, accomplished, and refined, and so were his two charming sisters, both ladies, the girls, high-bred, aristocratic looking, as well as very pretty.

Indeed, the family was a fine one, and I was delighted at the prospect of being able to make the acquaintance of some of them, and to be introduced to them, if I should find it necessary to do so, in the course of my duties

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor.

CHARLEVOIX, JULY 29, 1892.

For President—
BENJAMIN HARRISON.
Of Indiana.

For Vice President—
WHITELAW REID,
Of New York.

It "grandfather's hat" had been made in Europe, democrats would have more respect for it.

The President last week signed the pension bill and the river and harbor bill, and both have become laws.

Hitch is ahead yet in the state, and will unquestionably go into the convention with a clear and positive majority of delegates.

Affairs at the Carnegie mills have become quiet. The Pennsylvania troops, 8,000 strong, took possession, and the place is under martial law.

On the 12th the House perpetrated one of the greatest political surprises of the year, by knocking out the free silver bill. This ends all possibility of free coinage legislation this session.

Every political newspaper in England, Tory or Liberal, stands squarely up for Cleveland and Stevenson, and never loses an opportunity to ridicule Hargrove and Reid. It must mean something.

Charlevoix county will through her delegation, cast her vote for Pingree in the state convention. Three of the delegation are avowed Pingree men, while the fourth has been known as a Hitch man, but—

The most intensely interesting event of the month in the liberal victory in the English elections, by which Gladstone again comes to the front, at the ripe age of 83 years. The "grand old man" will now be called upon to assume the premiership, and form a new cabinet.

William A. Pinkerton, the head of the Pinkerton detective bureau, which sends out "things," "hired assassins," etc., to shoot down unoffending citizens, is a dyed-in-the-wool democrat, a rabid Free Trader, and an enthusiastic supporter of Grover Cleveland for President. The Chicago News Record is a serious free trade journal, is authority for this information. The same journal declares that 90 per cent. of Mr. Pinkerton's employes are democrats. It is really too bad that the democratic editors should abuse their fellow partisans and co-workers, like Pinkertons, so outrageously.

The Democratic papers are doing their best to make political capital out of the unfortunate complication between the Carnegie works at Homestead, Pa., and labor. If they would confine themselves to facts there would be no cause for complaint, but they economize truth in a manner that would discount Annanias of old. They concede that protection to American industry built up that extensive plant, but claim that Carnegie and others who have great wealth, owe it all to the cries of starving children for food and raiment." This is pure demagogy. Homestead is a creation of the Carnegie works. It is noted as a prosperous city, made up of beautiful and comfortable homes. The Detroit Free Press has been one of the papers that has played the part of the demagogue. Yet it recently printed a telegram from Homestead stating that over sixty per cent. of the Homestead workers own their own homes." Samuel Gompers, president of the American federation of labor, which is affiliated with the Amalgamated association of iron and steel workers, which caused the trouble, says in speaking of the strikers, "They are well organized, well disciplined and their treasury well filled. The company has never before had to deal with such a fine class of workers. They are intelligent, and most of them are thrifty and own their own homes." Such testimony is worth columns of the ravings of the demagogue, free trade editors. There are always two sides to every question. The management of the works claim that what they demanded only effected 325 out of the more than 4,000 laborers employed, and that, owing to a large investment in improved machinery which largely increased the output, it did not mean a reduction in the wages of those, and furthermore these 325 were earning wages running from $6.00 to $10.00 per day. There has been no claim made that the Carnegie falsified, or desired to pay less wages than other establishments engaged in like work.

Northern Michigan News.

The Howard City Record announces a female base ball nine as an attraction.

The first train made its appearance at Bear Lake Sunday, July 10. The passengers consisted mostly of R. R. officials and employes.

Some extra fine trout of both the rainbow and speckled varieties weighing 2½ to 4½ lbs. were taken from the Boyne river last week.

The Driving Club at East Jordan, are taking steps to have their grounds and track put into first-class shape for the fair and also for other races.

Hev. W. E. Dodge of East Jordan, with his family, is expected to depart this week for his new field of labor at Montcalm, Cal., where he has accepted charge of a church.

The facilities afforded by the G. R. & I. this season for quick trips to Bear Lake are admirable, and there will be thousands who will spend a day on that beautiful stretch of water this season.

The Indians will hold their annual campmeeting at Kewadin, beginning July 26. Several of the Indian preachers will be present, besides several white preachers. A grand good time is predicted.

Alfred Wardrop, of Bear Lake, working on the old Chambers farm, five miles east of Boyne Falls, was so severely gored by a cross bull last week that he has been confined to his bed ever since under the doctor's care.

Preparations have already been begun by the K. of L. of Boyne City, for the celebration of labor day there. All the labor organizations of the county are expected to be present and we are informed the G. A. R. will be invited to participate.

The election to decide whether the village of Petoskey should loan the sum of $15,000 "for the purpose of extending, repairing and improving the system of water-works" was held Wednesday and resulted in an affirmative decision. Whole number of votes cast, 101; of which 91 were "yes" and 10 "no."

The Secretary of State wanted the report of a northern township and received the following: "Mr. Hacker, Esq: Dear cir there is not an acre of improved land in the township and not a rod of hiway nothing but a wilderness there is 4 cows 2 calves and 5 pigs and about 20 chickens. Yours respectfully, S——S—— Supervisor. P. S. there is a few weovels and bears but they are so wild I cannot count them.

Petoskey Democrat: Ex-Gov. Alpheus Felch and daughter Mrs. E. H. Cole, and grandchildren, Miss Cole and L. T. Cole were at the Arlington yesterday. They are on their way to Manistique and Marquette, where they will spend a month. Gov. Felch has been one of the most prominent and useful men in the state. He was a member of the state supreme court from 1842-1855, Auditor-General of the state in 1842; Governor from '46-'47; and U. S. Senator, '47-'53.

Grand Traverse Herald: There has perhaps never, in the farming history of Grand Traverse been so fine a season, all considered, as the present, to date. During the late spring and early summer frequent, but not too frequent rains started all crops finely, and then when having time came, ten days ago, the skies cleared, and for more than a full week scarcely a cloud was seen, the weather was very warm, and every farmer improved the time. There has been no frost, and all crops are in most excellent condition. Fruit is heavy beyond all belief. If we set back conies now it will be the best season Grand Traverse ever knew.——M. L. Ayers, of Old Mission, brought the Herald, Tuesday, a little branch from an early Richmond cherry tree, containing 15 inches length, 172 fully perfected and ripe cherries. Mr. Ayers has brought to town 65 bushels of fruit from this tree, and says there is at least three or four bushels yet on the tree. This one cherry tree will net him $20 to $25 this season.

Amusements.

Charlevoix is greatly favored this season in the class of entertainments that Dr. Lewis is securing at the Grand Opera House. Last evening Newton Beers, a romantic actor of national reputation, who has become famous in "Enoch Arden," appeared with his excellent company in "Lost in London." The audience was just what it should have been on that occasion. The company is a strong one and the play was presented in a masterly manner.

One of the greatest attractions of the season, Mr. Francis Labadie and Miss Hattie Howell, supported by 12 well known dramatic artists in a repertoire of standard and classic plays, opening in a grand production of Mrs. Lowells beautiful drama "Ingomar." Every performance given by the Labadie-Howell company is guaranteed to be first class in every particular. If any dissatisfaction prevails in any will cheerfully refunded, at Opera House, July 25th-26th and 27th.

"Ingomar, the Barbarian" at Opera House July 25-26-27.

From Greenville Co. Pittsburg Leader: The Francis Labadie company in "Ingomar," or the "Greek Slave," gave a splendid entertainment last evening in Laird's Opera House. The house was packed and all were well pleased with the show. The two stars were repeatedly encored and had good support. The college band discoursed some fine music and received hearty applause. Everybody was well pleased with the show and many expressed a wish that Mr. Gamble will appear again, when he will receive hearty support from our citizens." At Lewis Grand Opera House, July 25, 26 and 27.

On Saturday evening, July 30th, will appear the Detroit Philharmonic Club, and Master Cyril Tyler, the marvelous boy soprano, under the auspices of the M. E. and Congregational churches. The cause for which this entertainment will be given should be sufficient to fill the opera house, but the superior musical attainments of this famous organization should of itself warrant a large attendance. Probably no musical combination in America have received greater encomiums from press and public. Secure your seats early.

Detroit Tribune: Little Cyril Tyler, the ten-year-old boy soprano of Grace Church, is being made a pet of in fashionable circles. He is a sweet-winning little fellow, and when not singing is a thorough child, enjoying his toys and playthings like any other boy of his age. The other day he was called from arranging a lot of cigarette cards to sing "Angels Ever Bright and Fair" for some callers. Throwing down the cards, he sang the melody with utter unconsciousness of its being anything at all marvelous, and when finished he picked up the pictures and was, with all a child's interest, absorbed in them in a moment. Those who heard him were in tears, and one of the ladies exclaimed, "He is as sweet and bright as the angels he sings of."

Skerlek Family Circus is billed for Charlevoix next Saturday, July 23d. The show is well spoken of by the press. A Neenah, (Wis.,) paper says of them: "The Skerlek Family Circus has a fair attendance last evening, a big house considering the rain. The show was first class every way, and all who attended were well repaid. The trained horses and acrobatic performances were pronounced the best ever seen in this city. They perform again to-night."

The Skerlek Family circus in Charlevoix next Saturday, is spoken of as a good show, and should draw a crowd. Bring in your fan flies.

A RACE WITH DEATH.

A Naked Wanderer Faint Runs Through Torturing Beds of Cactus.

Early one morning lately the sun-baked form of a man was found on the Cahuenga branch of the San Fernando wagon road, about twelve miles from Los Angeles, just South of Burbank and near the Los Angeles river, says the San Francisco Chronicle. A number of people soon gathered around the body, and after holding a hurried consultation the remains were covered with pieces of old carpet and sacks and Coroner Weldon was notified. The coroner and his assistant hurried to the spot and began an investigation.

The body was lying in the middle of the road, and for several hundred yards from the spot where the body was found the dirt was plowed up, showing that the dead man had fallen down a number of times and had pawed around in the most frantic manner. His last struggle took place when he died, and from the looks of the ground it must have been terrible. The poor wretch had plowed his head into the ground until it was horribly mashed and his arms and hands were badly bruised and scratched, but the strangest part of the thing is that there were no indications that a second person was present.

There were no other tracks in the vicinity than those made with the bare feet, and if he fought with any one the person must have been no homebreak. An examination of his pocks showed that he had passed through several beds of cactus for his legs and body were literally full of cactus thorns, and the blood spots have flowed freely from his numerous wounds until death relieved him.

No one in the neighborhood could identify him. On the way back to the city the coroner and his assistant stopped every one they met and had them view the face, but no one had ever seen the dead man before.

Shortly after the coroner reached the city he received a message that the man's clothing had been found. The officers at Burbank followed the dead man's tracks about four miles from where his body was found, and discovered what at first appeared to be a newly-made grave. The dirt was thrown up in the shape of a grave, and it had evidently been made only a few hours before. In opening it they found a suit of clothes which evidently belonged to the dead man.

He had no tools with which to dig a hole, for the soil was terribly hard and show that in digging the hole like a dog and then piled his clothes in it, inclosing his hat and shoes. The ground is hard clay, and it must have taken him several hours to dig the grave. He then covered his clothing and rounded up the earth like a mound. It is supposed that by dint of hard labor, he passed through pieces it and would cause a man with thick clothing, and heavy boots to stumbler and turn back, and it is a wonder that he did not drop with exhaustion and loss of blood and pain long before he did.

HOW KINGS RAISED WIND.

In Old Times Methods That Now Prevail Were Not so Fatal.

The Plantagenets were very rough and ready financiers. When Richard I. took it into his head to try crusades with Saladin, he raised the needful by turning the crown masons and the fortresses of Roxburg and Berwick into hard cash, selling offices to the best bidders and did not hesitate to avow that he would dispose of London itself if a purchaser were forthcoming.

Strange enough, Cœur de Lion never seemed to have thought of doing the same by his native isle. Henry III. was the first English monarch who had recourse to that unpalatable expedient. The idea indeed did not originate with him; for it is recorded that when some persons of substance in Apulia suggested the replenishing of the royal coffers by selling the crown plate and jewelry the king blushed double at the the likelihood of finding purchasers, and being assured that the citizens of London would gladly accommodate him, literally exclaimed: "On my word if the treasure of Augustus was brought to sale, the citizens are able to be the purchasers. Those stewards who assume to inclose the tomes of barons, abound in everything, while we are reduced to necessities."

Notwithstanding his indignation, says the Jewish Review, Henry, like other men in his predicament, was willing enough to deal with the following usurious transaction, which he pursued once he abused, and so in 1248 he sold the citizens of London all the plate and jewelry he had not already mortgaged to the merchants of France. The relief afforded was, however, only a temporary one, for seven years later we find him demanding 8,000 marks of the Jews, and answering their remonstrance against the exaction by pleading that he was a beggar, spoiled and stripped of all his revenues, without a farthing wherewith to keep himself and therefore must have money from any hand and by any means.

Labor Saving Machinery.

Flogging is so indispensable in Russia that some inventor has perfected a machine which saves the human arm the infamous labor of blows. Under the flagellation the machine turns and arrears are to become speedily collectable.

Schools of St. Petersburg.

In the scholastic year 1890-91 St. Petersburg had 223 primary schools, with 12,760 scholars. Last year the number of schools rose 267 and the number of attendant pupils 15,512. This includes 134 female schools with an attendance of 5,704.

Identified by a Dog.

A strange case of cadaric intelligence has just been noted. Recently the dead body of a man was discovered on a railroad track near Stockton, Cal. The remains were so horribly mangled that identification was declared impossible. At this juncture a dog came along and scenting the body at once by his actions showed that he recognized it as his master, a well known sporting man of that section. Later in the day identification was rendered complete.

A Little Girl's Experience In A Lighthouse.
Mr. and Mrs. Listen Tremont are keepers of the Gov. Lighthouse at Sand Beach, Mich., and are blessed with a daughter, four years old. Last April she was taken down with measles, followed with a dreadful Cough and turning into a Fever. Doctors at home and at Detroit treated her, but in vain, she grew worse rapidly, until she was a mere "handful of bones." They she tried Dr. King's New Discovery and after the use of two and a half bottles, was completely cured. They say Dr. King's New Discovery is worth its weight in gold yet you may get a trial bottle free at F. G. Hines & Co.'s Drug Store.

STRAINED SITUATION.

TREATMENT OF THE SUFFERING PINKERTONS.

The Works Will Start Up Soon Without Union Labor—The Big Issues Kept Out of Work—Results of the British Elections.

THE LOCKSMITHS.

On the 7th, the Amalgamated Association, in accordance with the Homestead conflict, and the recent events transpiring the investigation of the Pinkerton system was inaugurated by Joseph Parker, ex-president of District Nine, Pittsburg, and others upon the Homestead affair, and the use of the Pinkerton men in the late battle, for the Government exhibit at the World's Fair and Elliott, of the United Brotherhoods were present.

BOSS ON THEIR NERVE.

LATE Homestead, Pa., dispatches say the situation is very like that of several thousand persons watching for several thousand cards to appear. There is also prospect that the well-informed order of "Rats," or Pinkerton men, who are expected to be eighteen days, will be given an opportunity to use their large again. The will to change be exhibit will be the regular State militia, and the most Carnegie officers and their allies, who make up the resolution and carbonites have gone now to the front and that they will give battle to any and all opposition. The Carnegie people will leave everything behind which may be a body of determined men, and the mill and challenge the people of every man who ventures too close to an imaginary dead line, a barbed wire fence away from the mill fences. Three thousand men are now distributed all over the town, and so carefully are these lookers-on spread that not a soul can enter or leave the town without giving an account of himself. The Carnegie people are desperate battle between the Pinkertons men on the two bridges and the cut off emplacements ended, after a contest of fourteen hours, in the surrender of the premier of the Pinkertons men. At the attack in the afternoon on the day of the assault, while bombs and lighted waste balls were thrown on the barge, a Pinkerton man appeared on the deck and waved a white handkerchief. This was the signal for the surrender. Jack Leslie, a Pittsburg boy, is hopper, rushed to board and tried to keep the workmen off. He was powerless to do so and the cheering workers, with guns in hand, rushed on board. Then the landing of the vanquished commenced. It looked over an hour. They came sneaking singly and in parties, and as they reached the land the men were pounced upon by the men with clubs and rifles, knocked and treated to a good deal of rough usage. Some hurried night, for the ammunition street to both sides. Some ran down street on both sides, and were hunted by each in charge of two armed men, still cows and clubs were used on them and these some of them down. The Pinkertons lodged in Carnegie office had their shot wounds in their heads and arms bandaged and sent their ways their out. Several were shot in the groin and thigh, and one man could scarcely limp along. They were finally put into the Union House, and the wounded attended to.

FIGHT WITH FIRE.

CARNEGIE, Pa., Thursday afternoon. Quiet, the Thursday afternoon, the Pinkertons, the Carnegie people, the Carnegie men, the Pinkertons men, the Carnegie men, the Pinkertons men, the Carnegie men, the Pinkertons men

THE REGATTA.

The Annual Meeting of the Little Traverse Boat Club.

On the 14th the Little Traverse Boat Club held its annual meeting at the Bayview house, in this place, and it was well attended.

Railroad Commissioner Chas. H. Whitman was called to the chair. The election resulted as follows:

Dallas Boudreau, president; F. M. Quantiance, 1st vice-president; E. Shay, 2d vice-president; Ed. D. Bixby, secretary; Geo. W. Miller, treasurer; C. H. Winans, commodore; Col. H. V. Freeman, 1st vice-commodore; C. L. Conkling, 2d vice-commodore; Glenn S. Allen, captain; Ross C. Whitman, ensign.

The regatta will last three days, Aug 2, 3, 10 and 11. There will be sailing races on Lake Michigan for the largest yachts and on Pine Lake for the others. There will be 5 classes, ranging from 14 to 45 feet waterline, including sloops, cutters, schooners, catboats and Markhams. No entrance fee is asked, and prizes to the amount of $1,000 will be offered.

Besides the sailing races there will be every character of rowing races. Commodore Chas. Catlin, of the Catlin boat club, Chicago, will be present, with his boat crew, and there will be crews from a number of the leading boat clubs. Hanlon, the champion oarsman of the world, is expected, and his brother will row against Case and Henderson. Races between amateurs, ladies, gentlemen, boys and girls, in row boats will be interspersed, and are sure to excite great interest.

One of the novel features of this regatta will be an observation train, by which spectators can follow the boats over a two mile course. And to make it still better a long train of flat cars will be fitted with seats, and spectators will be pulled back and forth along the course, so that people can watch every effort of their favorites, and cheer them on.

In the evening there will be band concerts and on the second evening a magnificent display of fire works, in the shape of a sham battle in which dozens of steamers and tugs will be engaged. There will also be tub races, swimming races and a host of other attractions, so that all will be entertained the whole time.

LIST OF COMMITTEES.

The following committees were duly appointed:

Membership committee, Dr. C. E. Briggs, S. M. Moore and C. M. Crosby.

Regatta committee, Hon. Chas. H. Whitman, R. A. Lee, N. Blanchford, Col. Stevenson, C. R. Stevenson and C. H. Blake.

Entertainment committee, Glenn C. Allen, E. C. Ware.

Reception committee, Cos. A. F. Pettibone, I. D. Bixby, A. L. Conger, E. C. DeGoge, F. M. Hodge, W. H. Benham, Judge A. J. Blair, Hon. C. S. Hampton, O. M. Allen, Col. Dunbar, C. M. Cristy, A. D. Cruikshank, Jas. LaFleur, W. E. Hampton, Willard Smith and James Kehoe.

MASON & BERDAN.

Norwood Notes.

Theo. Plathner of Milwaukee, was in town last week.

The Aurora Borealis Saturday night was the grandest sight of the kind we ever beheld, way beyond our power of description.

The ball game Saturday afternoon between the Bay Views and a picked up nine here resulted in a very interesting game, with a score of 13 to 14 in favor of the East-port nine.

Mrs. VanSicklen and children, left for Burlington, Vt., Tuesday morning.

The band boys lawn party took place Wednesday evening. They have another soon, watch for the date.

A new boy arrived at Fred Stafford's Sunday, and Fred's face is as long as a rail.

S. H. Chase was up over Sunday and Monday, and ordered an ice gam new playhouse for the children. Anything to amuse the children with him.

Miss Kate L. Meech is here from Lake Forest, Ills., for a couple of months.

W. L. Hammond and wife, of Traverse City, will arrive Friday and resort with us for a few weeks. Mr. Hammond is cashier of the First National Bank.

Hastings from Hayes.

The Charlevoix Indian camp meeting will be held at Oyster Bay, commencing August 23. Moses Cooper has leased land to the Indians for a period of five years, for camp purposes.

Mrs. Eugene Bielwin and children are visiting friends in Hayes.

Harvey Webster had his right hand badly mutulated last Wednesday at the Undine mill. The index finger and thumb will probably be saved, the other fingers were entirely severed.

Hewett & Dodge will put in a meat market at Bay Shore for the purpose of wholesaling beef.

The operator for Bay Shore has arrived and wires and battery are being put in the building. By this time everything is in readiness for ticking.

Winter wheat is almost ready for harvesting and will be a great crop.

The rain and wind last Friday shook off some of the surplus fruit, otherwise no damage was done.

Undine.

F. H. Whitford is quite sick.

R. Cram and wife were visiting at Haslein's Saturday and Sunday.

M. Cram and wife and Ben Norland and family were visiting at Fred Smith's Sunday.

Mr. Bellinger and fam'y, Mrs. Newberry and daughter, were visiting at Undine last Wednesday.

Miss Annie Smith is home from Chicago for the summer, and Mrs. McMan is visiting her brother, Fred Smith.

Mrs. Kate Zessie went back to Detroit Monday.

"The Charlevoix Summer Home."

The annual meeting of the Charlevoix Summer Resort Association began yesterday afternoon at Moses Hall, and will be continued to-day.

Yesterday action was taken which changes the entire system of organization, and abolishes the stock of the concern. The action re-incorporates the association under the name of the "Charlevoix Summer Home."

MAN'S FINAL COLLAPSE.

Seven Different Ways as to How the End May Come.

The probable fate of the last man is a subject that has often been discussed. Of about a dozen solutions of the question, seven of the best are summarized below.

1. The surface of the earth is steadily diminishing; all the landed portion will at last be submerged and the last man will be drowned.

2. The ice is gradually accumulating at the North pole and slowly melting at the South; eventually the earth's center of gravity will change, and the last man will be killed by the rush of movables when the catastrophe finally comes.

3. There is a retarding medium in space, causing a gradual loss of velocity in all the planets. The earth, obeying this law of gravitation, will be drawn nearer and nearer the sun, until at last humanity will be roasted from the face of the globe.

4. The amount of water on the earth's surface is slowly drying up. Finally the earth will be an arid waste like the moon, and the last man will die, pleading for a drop of moisture with which to wet his tongue.

5. A gigantic planet is likely to tumble into the sun at any time. In that event our great luminary would blaze up and burn the earth and other planets in its train to cinders.

6. With the beginning of the year 2000 A. D., the human family will begin to retrograde, and within 1,000,000 years from that date man will not be higher in the scale of nature than the plant louse of to-day. In this case there will be no "last man."

7. The sun's fires will gradually burn out and the temperature will cool in consequence. The earth's glacial zones will enlarge, driving shivering humanity toward the equator. At last the habitable space will lessen to nothing and overcrowded humanity will be frozen in a heap.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN WAR.

The Advantages of Employing Pigeons for Carrying Messages.

Considerable attention has been given in recent years to the methods of carrying on communication between points in time of siege. In a recent issue of La Nature a French investigator strongly recommends the use of carrier pigeons for transmitting messages, and gives a map of Europe with the projected stations for pigeon service marked. During the siege of Paris this method of communication was carried on, and a distinct pigeon post was organized, the letters, at a cost of 10 cents a word, being sent into the city with a great degree of rapidity.

The letters, which were limited to twenty words, were set in type and, after a reduced photograph was made, the film was removed from the glass and inclosed in small quills, which were then attached to one of the tail feathers of the bird. So complete was the organization that many thousand letters were sent in this way. There is no special skill required for this work, and any amateur photographer conversant with the wet collodion process could, with an ordinary camera and lens, reduce a whole page of a newspaper to such dimensions as would enable it to be dispatched in the manner described.

FORTUNES IN THE MOON.

Old Superstition for Ever Dispelled. Orb Is Made Responsible.

Children, especially of the South, have many ways of telling fortunes by the moon. The most popular one is this: When the new moon is seen for the first time, three steps are taken backward, and these words repeated: New moon, true moon, true and bright, If I have a true love, let me dream of him to-night.

If I'm to marry near, let me hear a bell ring;
If I'm to marry far, let me hear aow low,
And if I'm never to wed, let me hear a hammer knock.

Then the flight of a turkey buzzard is always noted, especially if flying alone, and the bird is addressed thus:

Hell tail, lone turkey buzzard,
Fly to the East, fly to the West,
Let me know by the flap of the wing
Whether for me thy lot was to end.

The bird's direction of the flight is noted also the motion of the wings. If they flap it is considered a true sign that the lover or sweetheart is true.

Pile a Long Pair Want.

A new "letter card" has been issued by the British postoffice. It is a copy of our letter sheet idea, and is spoken of as filling a "much felt want." The idea is to make it possible to send short notes without the publicity of a post card and at less cost than a letter. The letter card simply folds once across the middle, and the edges can be gummed down. The space available for writing is 6¾ by 4¾ inches.

The Injunction Withdrawn.

On Monday Orlando Blair withdrew the injunction served last week to restrain the issue of the Charlevoix bridge bonds. The bonds were delivered Monday.

—Mrs. F. J. Schoolcraft, of Port Huron, is a guest of Mrs. F. M. Sears.

—Watch for the advertisement of the Charlevoix Boiler Works next week.

—Mrs. J. T. Siddings and Miss Margaret Gale, returned to Albion Monday.

—Mrs. O. A. Sears and her daughter, Sue, will sail for Europe about August 24.

—Misses Sarah and Eva Aldrich of Chicago, joined their sister Lizzie, here Monday.

—Rev. Mr. Hood, formerly the Congregational pastor here, was in town last week.

—Remember the ice cream social at the Baptist church to-night. Come and bring your friends.

—Ball game 15 to 12 in favor of old team. Honey Emtrey and Jon Smith made home runs.

—"Damon and Pythias" at Lewis Grand Opera House tonight. A great play by a good company.

—The Juvenile Temple will meet Saturday at 4:30, July 30th. All members presence is requested.

—Fred Hathaway, of Chicago, is here again for the summer, and is domiciled at the Fountain City house.

—W. G. Campbell and wife, of Port Huron, are here for a few weeks the guests of their daughter, Mrs. F. M. Sears.

—H. H. Perkins, a pioneer citizen of Boyne City, died at his home last Sunday, after a prolonged illness of dropsy.

—The tug Aldrich, of St. Ignace, arrived here Monday, to be hauled out at Washburn's yard, for a general overhauling.

—There were a half-dozen glass cases left by someone on the 4th, at the church rooms. Owner can get them by calling on Mrs. A. Fox.

—James Rogers and Chas Wheeler, carpenters, have formed a partnership under the firm name of Rogers & Wheeler, and solicit patronage.

—The common council last Friday evening elected Jos. E. Dixon engineer and inspector of water works construction, at a salary of $100 per month.

—Miss E. C. Hillm's art collection, which attracted so much attention last summer, will again this season be displayed in Mason & Berdan's window.

—Saturday evening at Lewis Grand Opera House, the Detroit Philharmonics and Cyril Roderic Tyler, the boy soprano. The biggest event of the season.

—Mr. E. Gallagher, late of Beaver Island, is the foreman of the water works gang. A force of seventy-five men will be employed after to day or to-morrow.

—Mr. D. F. Barnes, who was here this week starting work on the water works plant, is the young gentleman who four years ago came within 31 votes of defeating Mark S. Brewer for congress in the 5th district.

—Master Cyril Roderic Tyler is the only boy singer that can justly be called the successor of Master Blanchford Kavanaugh. His wonderfully sweet voice will be heard at Lewis Grand Opera House on 8 Saturday night.

—M. S. Moulton is now fairly settled in his new quarters, in the building lately vacated by Mac Todd. The veteran jeweler has a fine line of jewelry, watches and silverware, and solicits a share of the trade. In the display we notice several novelties in silver that are worthy of inspection.

—The row of young women that occupied the gallery at Lewis Grand Opera House last evening made themselves the equals in rowdyism of the young men who have on previous occasions disturbed audiences by their loud talk during the performance. They deserved a reprimand from the stage.

—Don't fail to hear the "kid" sing Saturday night.

—Mrs. Ella Hazle, of Alden, Mich., is visiting her brother, Capt. O. E. Wilbur.

—Hon. John Nicholls and wife leave to-day for Whitewater, Wis. Mr. Nicholls will return next week, but Nicholls will remain away several weeks.

—The fire department was called out twice Saturday, and the Silsby came to the front with steam up only to return without service. The third alarm was caused by an inefficient fire at the Charlevoix Lumber Co's mill, and within two hours Dr. Lewis' house caught fire in the cupola from a spark. No damage to speak of.

—The people of Charlevoix should fill the opera house Saturday night, as an indorsement of the efforts of the church people to secure for them an entertainment of such rare excellence as the Detroit Philharmonic Club. It is not often that Charlevoix is so highly favored and our people should prove that they are capable of appreciating musical art. Secure seats early.

—The Petoskey Driving Park Association announce that the races of the 2d, 3d and 4th of August will eclipse any race meeting yet held in Northern Michigan. Seventy of the best horses on the turf have been secured. All trains on the C. & W. M. will stop at the fair grounds, and rates of 1¼ fare for the round trip have been arranged on all roads. The purses foot up $1,700.

—Mr. Fred H. Maynard, of Grand Rapids, has leased a cottage on the Charlevoix Summer resort, and will spend most of the summer here. Mr. Maynard was a prominent candidate for attorney general at the recent Republican State Convention, but comes up, after his defeat, full of zeal for the ticket and as full of confidence in its election. Mr. Maynard's family is here with him.

—Boyne Citizen: A grand regatta is to come off on Pine Lake, at Charlevoix early in August. Young Hanlon will be there and make an attempt to lower his record. Charlevoix is certainly doing herself proud this year and to the credit of sports is leaving her neighbors far in the rear. After the storm comes a lull. We hope, however, such will not be applicable to Charlevoix. (?)

—The regatta, which occurs here August 9th, 10th and 11th, will unquestionably be the greatest aquatic event in the history of Northern Michigan. Pine Lake will be made the scene of the most exciting contests that have ever disturbed its sparkling waters. From all directions the lovers of the most exhilarating sport in the entire list of sports, will assemble in Charlevoix to make the occasion one long to be remembered.

—We must soon bid farewell to our good and reliable old friend the steamer Thomas Friant. For nearly a decade the Friant has been one of our main reliances in the matter of transit, and well she has done her work. But "Othello's occupation's gone." The railroad has captured her base of supplies and she must quit. Capt. Van is in Chicago looking up work for her, and, while she may be here a month or two, we have seen almost the last of her.

—After a month of masterly inactivity, the contractors, on Tuesday morning, began work on the water works. The pipe is scattered, and excavations are being made. Nothing has been done on the wells. Mr. Z. Mason, who so unceremoniously and dishonorably violated his contract here, and proceeded to another at Petoskey, is still at work there, and there is no certainty about our wells being put down until Mr. Mason has skimmed around for more wells. There is a pretty general opinion prevailing that Charlevoix has been "monkeyed" with all around in this water works matter, in which opinion the SENTINEL concurs.

—A letter from our old friend L. E. Allen, states that he has successfully completed his big contract of dredging the St. Clair Flats canal, notwithstanding the fact that the big dredge combine told Gen. Poe that he had "neither brains, money or pluck." The dredging was for a distance of 2½ miles, 300 to 400 feet wide, removing 200,000 cubic yards and deepening the canal to 19½ feet. Mr. Allen used two dredges, and did the work under great perplexity and in constant danger of being sunk by passing craft;—in fact he was struck four times, and had many miraculous escapes. It was a wonderfully hazardous undertaking, but Luther came out on top. The next contract will be for the same depth and for a distance of five miles, and to the depth of 20 feet, and Mr. Allen will bid for it.

—Milwaukee Wisconsin: The schr Z. L. Shamona was docked at the Milwaukee Dry Dock Company's west yard yesterday and found to be in very bad shape. Her keel was twisted and logged as the result of the punishment received while lying at the Leland pier during the recent gale. There are no breaks observable, but her seams are open and butts started. Temporary repairs only will be made at present. It cost $500 to tow the Shamona here with a steam pump on board.—Capt. Jerry Williams has purchased the schooner Surprise from Capt. Harry Channon; consideration, 3,500.

—Boyne Citizen: Charlevoix people never do things by halves. They made up their minds to secure the County Republican convention and sent up a small delegation of hustlers for that purpose. They got it! Where had our Republican shooters of last spring vanished to, or were they in with Charlevoix? We admire the good generalship of the party in the western of the county. The leaders are not at swords points one with another, but work with two objects in view, viz: The success of candidates of their choice and the culmination of everything in the county at Charlevoix. Why, those people are even preparing to lure from Boyne City its county seat and from East Jordan the county fair. The former they may carry off while our citizens sleepeth, but at East Jordan they will meet "foeman worthy of their steel."

—It comes from good authority that the local train service will be made permanent. Within a month the Ironton branch will be completed and the suburban service be extended to that place, making two trips per day. And while we are talking on this subject it is also quite certain that within a year the Ironton branch will be extended to East Jordan, and the service extended to that point, at least two trips per day. This will give East Jordan a first class outlet, and bring that brisk little town into more intimate connection with the metropolis of Charlevoix county, and the rest of the world. We are so certain of this that we feel justified in congratulating our sister town in advance, on their good fortune. Long may she wave.

—The Labadie-Howell dramatic company opened their engagement at Lewis Grand Opera House Monday night with "Ingomar," following it Tuesday night with "Don Cesar de Bazan." These productions were both in the repertoire of the late Lawrence Barrett, unquestionably the peer of Booth. They are classic, abounding in grand situations and thrilling climaxes, and cannot be handled by "barn stormers." Never in Charlevoix was "the mirror held up to nature" more effectually than by this company on these two occasions. Mr. and Mrs. Labadie interpret the characters of "Ingomar" and "Pauline" faithfully and with a grace and effect that thrills the lover of dramatic art. A more charming actress than Mrs. Labadie (Miss Howell) has never smiled upon a Charlevoix audience. Mr. Labadie as "Damon" last night was an elegant presentation of a strong character. The two stars are ably supported. They appear to-night in "Damon and Pythias" under the auspices of the Knights of Pythias.

Mrs. Aldrich of Chicago, will sing a solo at the M. E. church next Sunday morning. She will be accompanied by her son in a flute obligato. Mrs. Aldrich will be remembered by many of our citizens for her beautiful solos at the Congregational church last summer. Mrs. W. H. Gay, a prominent soprano of Grand Rapids, will sing a solo in the evening. Mrs. Gay is a very pleasing and cultured singer, and the music director predicates a treat. Prof. Arthur Nelson, the regular organist of the church, will accompany both soloists.

Boyne.

The Rt. Rev. Daniel S. Tuttle, D. D., Bishop of Missouri, will hold divine service and preach in Lewis Grand Opera House at Charlevoix, on Sunday July 31, at 10:30 a.m. and 7:30 p. m. All who have heard the learned and eloquent bishop will not fail to embrace this opportunity of again hearing him; and those who have not heard him should not miss it.

Attention Comrades.

There will be a special meeting of Baxter Post, on Saturday evening, at E. H. Green's law office, to make arrangements to attend G. A. R. day at Bay View, on next Tuesday, August 2d, 1892.

LITTLE BOY BLUE.

The little toy dog is covered with dust,
But sturdy and stanch he stands;
And the little toy soldier is red with rust,
And his musket moldered in his hands.
Time was when the little toy dog was new,
And the soldier was dashing and gay,
And that was the time when our little boy blue Kissed them and put them down.

"Now don't you go till I come," he said,
"And don't you budge or shake,
Lie quietly all in the corner of the bed,
And I'll be back in the morning early;
And so he went down on an evening gray
A-whistling our lullaby tune.
And they were the last words that we heard
Our little boy blue ever spoke.

Ah, yes, he lies in the Poor Farm shed,
Much in the same of them;
Much in the same of the world, I dread,
The world he left behind.
And they neither see nor smiling throw long years
In the grave of the little boy blue.
What has become of our Little Boy Blue
Since he kissed them and put them down?

A MODERN INVENTION.

Adam Grunstein was known the world over as the greatest inventor of his time. The difficulties he overcame in his early years before him. He was a great, practical inventor. He could read but could not understand, the many treatises that stood on this bookshelves, written by learned university men. But Grunstein knew the value of the hard reading between the lines of these books. He also knew the value of a thought, of a suggestion, and he had several or thing in his employ—as small wages—Grunstein was and above taking suggestions from anyone, and he was a good listener, although in his heart he rather despised anyone who could claim a greater power in any of the lines that he could admittedly be—of what—was useless to him, or, rather, was not present use some practical form, which, with him, meant a form that would bring him money-making. The idea might have belonged to somebody else, but the patent always belonged to Grunstein. Hundreds of men had being a shrewd business man, and, consequently, he was rich beyond the dreams of avarice. His name on an invention would float a company for fabulous sum, and he was called the name of an oil or the rising Lord Mayor of London.

People said that Grunstein's success was due to the fact that he was such an indefatigable worker. Twenty-four hours in a day seemed hardly enough for Grunstein. He frequently borrowed a few hours extra from next day. He was often at his desk on his work that daylaw found him still at his desk.

Grunstein's method of attacking a problem was to get himself that in possession of all that was already known of the subject and begin from the point where the last man left off. He would take one of the books written by a scientific man on the question, hand the volume to a trained assistant with a memorandum, and say, "Here Symondson, put this into English for me."

Symondson would take the treatise and a typewriter girl and translate the formula into terms Grunstein could understand.

When the inventor mastered all the details he needed he would turn his practical assistants to the testing of metals the arrangement of cells and general experimenting until some one hit on the right combination. Then his financial agent, in London turned a company and more wealth flowed into the already full coffers of Grunstein.

The inventor was one of those men who have never known a day's illness. This made him somewhat impatient when any trivial pain troubled him. Then it happened that one night, when working late, he realized that a slight pain, which he dimly remembered having been with him for days past, was becoming a little more persistent. This annoyed him. He spoke of it next day to a learned assistant, and that gentleman gave him the obvious advice that he should consult a physician.

"I don't know any doctors," said Grunstein. "Find me one, Symondson, and I have spoke no more about it. I have no time for such trifles."

Nature, however, sometimes insists on a man's time. Pain is a most obvious and persistent visitor. It waited on the busy Grunstein. He was so great an Grunstein himself, being a somewhat man. Then

"I don't believe I have time to-day," said Grunstein, sitting up in his chair, "but I'll make time. Call a cab, Symondson."

"I say," replied the doctor, "that I want. If you wish to see me you will have to come to my consultorium at my house. I never come unless on a body arrived."

"My time is too valuable for that."

"Just as you please," said the doctor. "My fee is quite as valuable at yours."

"I doubt it. How long will this examination take?"

"I don't know."

"Well, let us have it over," cried Grunstein, jumping to his feet at the doors of his room. He was not accustomed to being spoken to in this tone. Dr. Boyce made a similar lengthy examination. Then he looked Grunstein in the face gravely and named the disease.

"Put it in English," said the inventor, using his favorite phrase. "What does it mean?"

"It means that at most you have had six months to live."

"I don't believe you," he said quickly.

"I deeply regret, to say that it is true," answered the doctor, very quietly.

The softened tone of the man who had been so curt before, the tenderness in his voice, had more effect on Grunstein than the words he spoke.

"Old man, tell me what about this."

He, Boyce looked at his watch, which action called forth an impatient gesture from Grunstein. Then he sat down.

The ruddy face of the inventor paled a little.

"Now, tell me all you know about this disease. Will it come on suddenly? Have you prescribed an electric button, afterwards unbolting the door. A stenographer came in.

"Write down what the doctor says—unless my questions and the answers."

"Typing," Dr. Boyce, he continued, "Now tell me all you know about this disease. Put it in Latin if you, Mr. Latin terms, if you please."

Dr. Boyce talked and the stenographer writer. Will interrupt, typing a sharp question now and then.

"Shall I help you put him on the tables?" asked an assistant.

"No, put him on the operating table. It is too late."—Free press.

A Missing Continent.

The remarkable discovery made by Englishmen in the Indian jungles some sixty years ago is described by Mr. Campbell, who thus attend, returned from a hunting expedition to camp one afternoon in May, the warmest time of the year. His garb and appearance were expects in medicine. He was a man who lived never yet failed, but he spoiled now and then when he remembered who he was racing with and what the stakes were. Dr. Boyce gave him every assistance. At last he said to Boyce, "In two days' time I must have a patient to experiment on. I think I have found the remedy, but I must have a practical test.

"There is a lateness man just discharged from the hospital, suffering as you are. The disease is not common."

"Discharged! Why?"

"Because nothing can be done for him. He wants to die at home."

"Then send him for me. It can make no difference to him, and I may cure him."

The laboring man had a talk with Dr. Boyce, who gave him some pay.

"I will not be experimented with," he said to Grunstein, "unless you make provision for my family in case I should die."

Grunstein listened, but finally consented. He had more money than he cared.

The man died under the knife, and "I think," said the doctor, "for the first time admitting that there was something in his medicine that you are working in the right direction."

"I know I am," said Grunstein, briefly. "Get me another patient."

"Easier said than done."

"Telegraph everywhere. Pay! stint money. I have plenty of it."

"You were certain of it last time."

"I was not. I am now."

"Why?"

"Well, if you must know, it is because the papers only arrived a moment ago. I have patented the remedy. Here, read it. Anyone but a fool would know that. I don't propose to have you profit by my labors, Dr. Boyce."

The Doctor shrugged his shoulders, and

"He is coming out of it," said Dr. Boyce, with his finger and thumb on Symondson's wrist. "He is at right he will recover."

The inventor did not answer, and the Doctor turned his gaze from the man on the table to be sent in this chair.

Grunstein's eyes were wide open, and they had a look of horror in them.

"You promised me six months, Doctor," he said, in a hoarse whisper.

The Doctor sprang from the awaking patient to the inventor.

"Don't be alarmed. Don't excite yourself," he cried.

"It is only four, and you promised me six. You—physician!—or—sir."

"What is the matter?"

"Shall I help you put him on the tables?" asked an assistant.

"No, put him on the operating table. It is too late."—Free press.

FIGHT FOR ITS LIFE.

WHAT THE REPUBLICAN PARTY MUST DO THIS FALL.

Democrats there to Power Will Be a Possibility. Pro—The Issue Welcomed by All Republicans—The «Steady Policy of Reciprocity.»

Importance of the Issue.

Democrats are fond of pointing to the Cleveland administration as proof that a member of their party may be put in the presidential chair without Mexicanizing the country and causing general ruin. Tried in true, when there is a Republican senate to hold him back and Cleveland was in this way, so completely handicapped during his term that he could do comparatively little harm. He succeeded in vetoing a number of bills, and, demanded such things as the complete stoppage of silver coinage, the retirement and cancellation of the greenbacks and the destruction of the gold and silver certificates, together with a reduction of the tariff that would force our Northern labor to the twine. But fortunately a Republican senate stood between the Cleveland administration and the accomplishment of this disease. It was virtually without power to do anything but circle the spade. The celerity and enthusiasm displayed in vetoing bills was not approached by the rebel men to office showed how the Cleveland administration would be the one to which the Democrats would treat the country if they should ever get the chance. The Democrats in Congress passed a number of bills, and, in the case of the Mills bill, even succeeded in forcing a hunting-cup of half-dressed buffalo leather, but his hogs stood in long leagues of decision, a pen of leopard-skin buckled round his waist, supported on one side an ammunition pouch of the same material, and on the other a long hunting knife with a lockbolt handle notched in a manner that would terrify the sting at his back, and a long-spear grasped in his right hand.

Then I stay the half-dressed skull of a wolf protruding its grinning jaws from under the dap of one hooter, and the tail of a rare species of leopard hanging over the line of mark, dangling from the other, and you will have some idea of my personal appearance.

"If the moment I halted in front of the mess-tent I had never bestowed a thought on the Holstein-Gomez-like figure I presented, not the impropriety, in a military point of view, of thus appearing in camp to report myself to a superior officer.

Taking Chances.

It was a salient and fashionable sentiment, as was the fashion in the early days of Deadwood.

A barbaric stranger entered and walked up to the bar and said:

"I have a hundred a month of lead for two days."

"Yes, just so," replied the proprietor as he looked over him.

"Lead looks and really to do some thing desperate?"

"Any thoughts of suicide? kindly put the fashion?

"But your life I have. If I don't strike something to-morrow I shall blow my brains out."

"And what are the prospects of your striking something?"

"Yes, just so," replied the proprietor as he looked over him.

"Lead looks and really to do some thing desperate?"

"Any thoughts of suicide? kindly put the fashion?

"But your life I have. If I don't strike something to-morrow I shall blow my brains out."

"And what are the prospects of your striking something?"

"Not one chance in a hundred. Can you spare me a week of wealth?"

"Look here!" said the jubilee, after a moment's thought, "I have the interest here and can make a request gun out about $20. I'll take you on a guess."

"How?"

"I'll put up now, and if you fail to hit it to-morrow you're my mutton, and mine is lusbious and fat. You in?"

"Yes, and on the dead square."

"Very well, sit down over there. Waiter, a bowl of soup, three pounds of raw beef, and bread and coffee for this man, while I give you the points of the game he has to win, he wants his grave to local."—New York Herald.

"What?" cried Grunstein, setting the chair by the side of the table. "Yes, you are the man I want. I will cure you."

"Why don't you cure yourself?"

"That's what I'm going to do."

"Cure me first, Symondson."

Peoples Party Convention.

Pursuant to a call, a convention of representatives of all the labor organizations of Charlevoix county met at Boyne City on Saturday afternoon, the Peoples Party, nominated and adopted the following ticket and platform, which is the first nominal complete county ticket in Charlevoix, on Tuesday, August 9th, 1892, at the Peoples Party Convention to be held at Boyne City, Highlands and Ironton, respectively, and legislative convention at Boyne City county seat.

For county clerk, Lars Lundquist.

Peoples Party Platform.

We, the Peoples Party, in convention assembled, do hereby adopt the following platform of principles:

1. We demand a system of graduated income tax.
2. We demand the enactment of a law to prevent the issuance of bonds by municipalities.
3. We demand the enactment of a law to prevent the issuance of bonds by municipalities.
4. We demand the enactment of a law to prevent the issuance of bonds by municipalities.

9. We demand the enactment of a law to prevent the issuance of bonds by municipalities.
10. We demand the enactment of a law to prevent the issuance of bonds by municipalities.

The Democrats hope to obscure their free trade plank by raising a big enough rocket in their free silver bill. There is no force bill in mine in this campaign. Protective tariff, honest money, and a free ballot and a fair contest are issues.

Grover is his party "I am not seeking the office, gentlemen, but if you do not take me you ruin the party." Billing says, I said I never would take a second term, but I did not know then that I would grow so big that there would be no Democratic party if I were to be taken out."

* * *

The appropriations of the present Republican Democratic Congress exceed those of the "Billion Dollar Congress" by $200,000,000. What will Grover say? He has repeatedly spoken severely of the Congress of Republican extravagance, and he is supposed to be consecrated to the cause of economy.

Senator Quay's latest prediction: "Mr Harrison will carry every state that he carried four years ago. He will carry all new states admitted since then and he will carry West Virginia. That more than means his election. It will be a break in the South or a healthy character and there is no doubt of his success."

* * *

The Democratic cry of "Retrenchment and Reform" is disclosed to be a humbug. It was known to be a humbug when the democratic platform took it up. They knew that the only place where retrenchment was possible was in the pension appropriations and they also knew that no reduction there were possible while there was a republican president and fact was, standing it against the entrance of the ratio.

When Animals Are Ill.

Animals when sick are the most helpless and appreciative of all creatures, and the "way of administering relief and medicine in many of the instances is as novel as it is effective. The most savage and revengeful animals during spells of severe pain are as docile and tractable as a child. Relief must come to them in a human being and come quickly, and they seem to know it. The most vicious horse when groaning with pain would allow a mere child to administer relief, and many of the wild animals when in sickness seem to forget their savage instincts. It is neat to hypnotize by a glass of water, oil any liquid or powder, and the only proper way is to mix the medicine with butter, lard, or some greasy substance and smear the mixture from time to time upon their noses. They at once begin licking off this unnatural substance with their tongues, and in a few moments an affectual dose of the most nauseous compound can be administered.

How to Set Under Water.

A lean for spring under water is described as producing an effect which is both astonishing and delightful. It gives distinct vision to objects from twenty to thirty feet below the surface, and which are usually out of perfectly eye-range. The eye's loss of extended vision when under water is owing to the fact that an entirely different focus is required. The spectacles which can adjust this focus are made by putting two thick glasses, back to back or with the concavities outward. Try it and be surprised.

Good Soap Bubbles.

Prof. T. O'Conor Sloan, in the course of a scientific lecture the other day, told his young auditors how to make soap bubbles. In substance his directions were: Take a lamp chimney—one which is straight up and down—dip one end in a solution of soap and water until a flat disk of film covers the end. Blow gently till the bubble is started. Then remove the chimney about two inches from the top and continue blowing gently. In this way great bubbles can be blown without exhausting the blower. The addition of a little glycerine to the soap and water is very advantageous.

THE FLY'S PARASITE.

The Fungus Which Feeds on Its Body and Kills It.

The little fleas, which do no mischief, have other fleas to bite them.

So, too, the house fly, which is such an annoyance himself, is frequently put beyond reach of doing further harm by a parasitic fungus which destroys them by hundreds of millions. You have frequently seen the remains of a fly firmly glued to the window pane, apparently just on the point of taking flight, but in fact so dead as Cæsar. He stands on his six legs, which seem to be lengthened to an extraordinary degree, his gauzy wings raised high above his back—but he never flies. Examine him closely and you will find that his body is badly shrunken, he looks as though he had been fastened there weeks ago and left to die; however, he may not have been there more than a few short hours. He appears to be the centrepiece of a circle on the pane, the whole halo being perhaps three-quarters of an inch in diameter. This halo, which is nearly always of a milky hue, is the overplus of the fungus spores which caused the fly's death. The spores of this, like those of other parasitic fungoses, are excessively minute, and microscopists tell us that there are untold millions of them in the air, especially in autumn. These strike the softer or softer parts of the fly and immediately send out their tubular "feelers." When once this fungus gets a hold on a fly he is doomed, and it is only a question of time when he will be glued to some object, as mentioned above.

GROWTH OF THE HAIR.

How It Is Affected by Certain Kinds of Food.

The influence of diet upon the growth of hair is the subject of a paper, in which the writer says: "Several cases of shedding of hair after influenza have confirmed my opinion that diet has much to do with the production and with the cure of symptomatic alopecia. Hair contains five per cent of sulphur, and its ash twenty per cent of silica and ten per cent of iron and manganese. Solutions of beef or rather part of it, starchy substances, and even milk, which constitute the diet of patients with influenza and other fevers, cannot supply these elements, and atrophy of the root and bulbs of hair result. The color and strength of hair in young mammals is not attained so long as milk is the sole food. As to drugs, iron has prompt influence. The tools which most abundantly contain the above named elements are the various albuminoids and the oat, the ash of that grain yielding twenty-two per cent of silicon. I have often found a dietary largely composed of oatmeal and brown bread greatly promote the growth of hair, especially when the baldness was preceded by constipation and sluggish capillary circulation. Those races of men who consume most meat are the most hirsute."

AN INTELLIGENT CANINE.

Story of a Vermont Shepherd Dog Driving Cows.

Here is a story of a Vermont sheep dog which Scotchmen will find in hard to match.

Captain Cox of Bradford, had a "shepherd dog" which was substituted to bring home the cows at night, always separating them from the other cattle, and never allowing any but milch cows to come up.

One day Captain Cox—accompanied the dog in driving the cows to pasture. At one place on the road the Captain was surprised to see the dog desert the herd and take to the woods by the side of the road. The Captain went on with the cattle, which were walking briskly in advance.

When a quarter of a mile they came up to a break in the fence, of which the Captain had no knowledge, leading into a field; and here, in the gap of the fence, sat the dog in a matter-of-fact way, standing it against the entrance of the cattle.

What else could his master suppose than that the dog was aware of the gap in the fence, and knowing the best way to slip the cattle, made a detour, through the woods to the place to prevent the cattle going into the field?

Short Shift for Dynamiters in Idaho—Pacific Express Company Agents Lose Sleep in the Prison Gang—Remarkable Indictments Name Their Tickets.

The Lawmakers.

Writs Fare legislative jinks in the house of representatives at Washington the week passed the bills relating to the Engish war, which provide that the United States agrees to prohibiting the sale of munitions of war to the belligerents and that Congress will not permit the use of American ports as a base of operations against the British navy. As the senate will take up the house measures appointed the committee of the senate on foreign relations to which the bills were referred, and the hearings will begin at once. The committee will hear a number of prominent men who have been invited to attend sessions. The Senate is considering the measure for three purposes—financing and aiding the merchant marine, providing for the purchase of gunpowder, making the local navigation laws of the United States applicable to American vessels engaged in the coastwise trade in the Panama canal zone.

Dynamiter Shot.

MARTIN, Idaho, Dynamiter Frank Edlesko, said to be a member of the Industrial Workers of the World, was shot and killed by a guard in the state penitentiary here Tuesday morning. Edlesko, with two others, was working in the prison yard when he made a dash for the wall. The guard called upon him to halt, but he continued his flight and was shot down. Edlesko was serving a sentence of from one to five years for the dynamiting of the Bunker Hill & Sullivan concentrator at Kellogg last October. The other two men were not shot at.

Express Company Men Lose.

Twelve Pacific express company agents who were convicted in the federal court at Portland, Ore., of conspiracy to defraud the company by shipping packages of liquor into Idaho, dry territory, were sentenced to the county jail for from one to six months and to pay fines of $500 each. The men had been convicted on 1,000 counts charging them with having violated the Idaho prohibition law. The men were given the maximum sentence allowed by the law. The men are: Ralph Ackerman, Portland, Ore., manager; Ralph Ackerman, Jr., Portland, Ore., assistant manager; Ralph Ackerman, Sr., Portland, Ore., assistant manager; Ralph Ackerman, Sr., Portland, Ore., assistant manager; Ralph Ackerman, J

U. S. army target practice is to be abandoned on Mackinac Island, and a range established on Bois Blanc.

Richard P. Hubbert, for 39 years a resident of Mackinac Island, died at St. Ignace on Thursday of last week aged 72 years.

Boyne Citizen. The editor is under obligations to Mr. John Stacer for a large basket of very fine red cherry currants. Fine berries than those we have never seen. Also to Mrs. Thos Mellor for a nice pail of the same.

The Omena Hotel Association has sold to Mr. Frank H. Graves, of Grand Rapids, one hundred and fifty-two acres of land on New Mission Point. It is the intention of Mr. Graves to fit up the grounds in a very attractive manner for summer resort purposes.

The hardwood lands of Michigan are today the Indianas of the future to the lumber, large or small, as well as the settler, and the poor man seeking to make a new home. These hardwood acres are to the poor man what a father is to a child whom he supports and lets him have all he makes, for while he is carving out a home, the land will give him a good living, and if he is wise, when he gets the farm cleared he is comparatively rich, over and above his farm of some hundred or two acres of the land that the Almighty ever left out of doors, in a climate that is nature's own sanitarium, and his hardwood which he has been able to sell at a good profit has made him so.

Harbor Springs Artesian Well: The old Catholic Church at this place will soon be a thing of the past. The weather-worn structure will, in a few days, be torn down and a handsome and more commodious edifice will stand in its place, a towering monument to the memory of the early Jesuit missionaries who, unaided by instrumentalities, perils and dangers, explored a strange land, established missions and recited to pagan Indians, who listened with childlike wonder, the story of that tragic drama which was enacted on Calvary 1800 years ago. The exact date of the establishment of the Catholic Mission at this place, which formerly went by the French name of L'Arbre Croche (Crooked Tree), is not known but it was during Fr. Marquette's time, over 200 years ago.

Harbor Springs Arbutus Well: Lavender Burnett arrived in the village on Tuesday evening on a short visit. Lavender left here about five years ago to enter the Agricultural college, with but little money in his pocket, but possessed of lots of pluck and ambition. He has worked his way through college and graduates next month, much to the pleasure of all his old friends and acquaintances in Harbor Springs. Not only has he won honors as a bright scholar but he has covered himself with glory in the athletic arena. He has captured nearly fifty prizes and has won thirty nine medals, including the handsome champion-medal gold medals, as an all round athlete, and though he is undoubtedly proud of his record he is very modest about it. After graduating it is his intention to go out West, probably to Montana. He has the well wishes of all Harbor Springs people for future success and prosperity. We make the prediction that success in caring hard losses by coming the public will likely hear from him in the base ball world in the future.

In Favor of Good Music

Under the auspices of the M. E. and Congregational churches of this village, the Detroit Philharmonic Club, without doubt the finest string quartett in the country, will appear at Lewis Grand Opera House, July 29th. They will be accompanied by Cyril Roderic Tyler, the phenomenal soprano, 10 years of age. It is a far too common habit to indiscriminately exaggerate and eulogize every company placed upon the concert stage, as our disappointed expectation bear testimony; but in recommending the above club we are doing it with the full confidence of giving real gratification and pleasure to all our music loving citizens. As a test of the musical ability of the club, it can be said that wherever they have appeared, the people have desired an early reappearance. As the churches have been at considerable expense in hooking this company for Charlevoix, we confidently appeal to them to help us in our endeavor to raise the standard of amusements. For details and prices see posters and handbills.

Yours Cordially,
W. H. MacKinnon,

Norwood Notes.

H. P. Parmelee and A. L. Conger of the Kalamazoo resort, walked down to Norwood on the beach last Wednesday, gathering many fine specimens of ——pods, is all we can make out of it.

The fund boys lawn party in the pleasant grounds down at O. D. Wood's farm, in flanks, was largely attended. Thirty-two dollars the boys cleared. Thank you.

I. R. Trask, (the largest in size as well as in business,) of St. Louis, has been for the past week a guest at Geo. H. Vanfelt's.

Norwood is now a money order office also the finest resort in Northern Michigan.

I did you notice that smile on John Merriam's phiz? Well its there and there is also a boy up at his house that arrived last Saturday morning.

Mrs. E. R. Harris and Miss Agnes Green visited Petoskey and Harbor Springs Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. D. C. Chamberlin has been in town for a few days.

Mrs. Belle Carter and daughter and Mrs. Johnson of Detroit arrived Sunday, on a visit for a few weeks.

Addie Sinclair, now of Newberry, an old time Norwood boy, was in town the other day.

S. B. Chase, with a party of young ladies from Chicago, arrived Monday morning, and will for a few weeks enjoy hospitality at the "Owls Nest."

The band boys will give an excursion to Traverse City on the steamer Columbia in the near future. Get ready and go.

Charlie Wilson and wife of Chicago, are visiting at Parker McIntyres.

Hastings From Hayes.

Fred Sneathen purchased the first self binder harvester brought into Hayes.

Jacob and Willis Chew have black walnut trees growing on their farm that are bearing this year.

Moses Cooper found one of his horses thrown in the pasture in such a manner it could not get up, and in its struggles it had pounded its head on a rock, almost into a jelly. It was in a terrible condition, but will recover.

Our highway commissioner has purchased a quantity of tiling for culverts, also a two-wheeled scraper for grading purposes. Just have patience and Hayes will have good roads.

Rev. R. Bowman has been visiting his mother and brothers the past week.

D. O. Eley saw a quail in his field last week, a genuine Tetrao u.; Tetrae. It is the first we ever heard of them in this country.

A large part of the winter wheat will be harvested this week.

From Marion.

Miss Ella Trimble is attending the Bay View seminery.

Glen Welling has gone to Minnesota.

Hay crop is abundant, and all kinds of grain looks well.

Miss Stevenson and school will gave an entertainment at the Barnard school on Thursday evening July 28. All invited.

ORIGIN OF BUTTERFLIES.

A Story That Might Apply to Some of Our Statesmen.

An old story tells that when Jupiter and Juno were married the wedding was solemnized with great splendor. A feast was given to which all the gods were invited. Many princes and fine nobles from the earth were invited also.

Among the rest came a Persian Prince named Chrysalus. He was "rich in golden attire, in gay robes, and with a majestical presence." He was attended by a train of gorgeously dressed followers, lords and knights and fine gentlemen. But with all his state and riches Chrysalus was but a foolish fellow, with an empty head and a silly speech. And it is very likely that the ostentatious parade of his rank and possessions only served to make the fact of his lack of wit more apparent and more absurd.

Seeing a prince come in such pomp and state, all the gods rose to do him honor. They hastened to give him a lofty seat and to welcome him in their midst. But Jupiter, who was no dolt, a man of fine perceptions, no sooner looked at him than he "perceived that he was a light, pleasant, silly fellow." In his wrath that such a man should be found in such a high place, Jupiter suddenly turned him and all his proud followers into butterflies, and condemned them to now about forever amusing themselves, but fulfilling no good purpose.

"And so they continue still, roving about in pied coats, and are called Chrysalides by the wiser sort of men—that is, golden outsides; drones, and things of no worth."

TREMENS IN TEA.

Australian Bushmen Drink So Much They Get the Jim-Jams.

In the interior of Australia all the men drink tea. They drink it all day long and in quantities and at a strength that would seem to be poisonous. On Sunday morning the teamaker starts with a clean pot and a clean record. The pot is hung over the fire with a sufficiency of water in it for the day's brew and when this has boiled he pours into it enough of the fragrant herb to produce a deep coffee-colored liquid.

On Monday, without removing yesterday's tea leaves, he repeats the process. On Tuesday da capo and on Wednesday da capo, and so on through the week. Toward the close of it the great pot is filled with an acrid mash of tea leaves, out of which the liquor is squeezed by the pressure of a tin cup.

By this time the tea is of the color of rusty iron, incredibly bitter and disagreeable to the uneducated palate. The native calls it "real good old pisst and rails" (the similie being obviously drawn from a stiff and dangerous jump), and regards it as having been brewed to the very pitch of perfection. Doctors tell of cases resulting from this abuse which clearly border, in their manifestations, on the signs of the delirium tremens.

Live Fish in the Mails.

An interesting experiment has been made in connection with the transportation of tropical fish to this country. Acting upon instructions from Dr. Gunther of the British museum, the eminent authority on fishes, the superintendent of the Botanic gardens in the island of Trinidad some months ago dispatched to England a small glass vessel containing about a dozen specimens of a small fresh water fish, a native of the St. Anne's river, in the island. The little brood arrived safely in London, and was deposited in the Zoölogical Gardens, who is delighted with the success attained, which only shows, he says, what might be done, with due care, in transporting tropical fish to England. It is probably the first time that West India fish have been transported alive to Europe. These are thriving and reproducing their kind very freely in the tanks at Kew, where Dr. Gunther lives, so that it is possible they may become naturalized. In connection with the propagation of these fish is the curious fact that, when placed in company with the common gold fish, the latter fall to increase in number, through the voracious nature of the little tropical ones.

Trees in the United States.

The last census shows, among other surprising things, that there are more than half a million almond trees actually bearing in the United States; that there are hundreds of thousands of bearing cocoanut trees and more than a quarter of a million olive trees, producing fruit equal to the best Mediterranean varieties. There are more than half a million bearing banana plants, 200,000 bearing lemon trees, 4,000,000 orange trees, and 21,000,000 pineapples. The value of tropical and semi-tropical fruits grown under the American flag is nearly $20,000,000.

Dublin.

Geo. Bacot had the misfortune to lose a young colt Saturday night.

Flavy Smith returned to Grand Rapids Wednesday.

Annie Bacot who is very sick in Detroit, where she has been visiting.

Mrs. Fred Smith, Mrs. McMahon and Miss Amie Smith were the guests of Mrs. Maurice Cram Sunday.

Mr. Tyler of Bear Lake, and Cornelius Henry of Dexter, were visiting at Sally Cram's Monday.

—Gov. Winans has called a special session of the legislature for August 5th, at noon, to consider apportionment matters, in view of the supreme court decision.

—Mrs. Frank Churchill, of this place, last spring dislocated her ankle. It has constantly troubled her and lately gangrene followed. Dr. LeFevre last week amputated it below the knee.

—Western Union telegraph wire "No. 2" was put into Charlevoix office Monday, and we are now connected with Petoskey and all other C. & W. M. towns between here and Traverse City.

—A gentleman who is a friend and admirer of Charlevoix board it reported in Petoskey that diphtheria was epidemic here. There has not been a case here in more than six months and then only an isolated case. Next!

—A. H. Caldwell, of East Jordan, is purchasing a home in Charlevoix, and will reside here; a circumstance due to the fact that Walker D. Mathiassen, the lumber inspectors, by whom he is employed, have removed their headquarters from East Jordan here.

—The Seventh Day Adventists of Northern Michigan will hold their annual camp-meeting at Traverse City, Aug. 22-28. Prominent speakers of the denomination will be present. A hygienic cooking school will precede this, beginning Aug. 16. All those interested in health and temperance work are invited to attend. Instruction free. Reduced rates have been secured on the Traverse Bay lines at one fare for the round trip. Reduced rates are also expected on all railroads leading to Traverse City.

—One day last week Assistant U. S. Atty Berdan and his friend Dan Chambers went down to Ellsworth on a fishing expedition. They had good success, and took the evening train home. By the same train came J. L. Price and Lou See from Rapid River; also a resort party which had deposited their baskets of unused picnic luxuries in the smoker, and gone back to the chair car. When Ellen and Dan entered the car they espied Jay and Lou asleep, while near them were the baskets. As they were about the only passengers in the car, of course the conclusion reached by Ellen and Dan was that the baskets belonged to their fellow townsmen. Ellen winked at Dan and jerked his thumb in the direction of the picnic effects. Dan returned the wink, and together they went into the depths of the baskets. While engaged in this clandestine occupation one of the owners entered behind them and remarked: "Gentlemen, you will find some fruit cake in the bottom of that other basket." The boys swooned, and Jay and Lou awoke from their snooze. Explanations followed, and, in their order, refreshments of another kind were made to cement the acquaintance thus formed.

Happy Home Club Meeting.

There will be a citizens' meeting held at Bartholomew's Hall on Friday evening, August 5th at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing and establishing a branch organization of the "Happy Home Clubs of America" in this city. Ladies are especially invited to be present, and are earnestly requested to bring their husbands with them. The objects and purposes of this commendable organization will be fully and satisfactorily explained at the meeting.

Every moral man, every business man who is interested in the welfare of this community,—and every lady in this city, will be deeply interested in having a Happy Home Club established here as soon as they correctly understand the objects and workings of this magnificent order. Briefly stated, this order has three principal objects.

1—The absolute and guaranteed cure of the insatiable appetite for intoxicating drinks, if the person afflicted will take the treatment. Many who are not drunkards need, and have taken this cure. (This cure, by the way, is not the Keely cure, nor has it any connection whatever, with any other cure for the liquor habit.)

2—A co-operative life insurance, for both men and women who can pass the requisite medical examination. But it is optional with the members of this order whether they take the insurance or not. However, none but members can get this life insurance.

3—To promote the social, moral, intellectual and financial welfare of every community in which a Happy Home Club is established, through the social and moral influence of its membership, by reclaiming the victims of alcoholism, and in raising them, in many instances, from degradation to manhood and worthy citizenship; and by bringing the sunlight or hope and happiness to many homes that are now enshrouded in sadness and desolation through the disease of drunkenness, or the uncontrollable appetite for alcoholic stimulants. Although no pledge of total abstinence is required of the fraternal or social members of this order, the Happy Home Clubs of America are destined to eventually solve the temperance problem.

Meeting on Friday evening, Aug. 5th is free. Everybody invited to attend. Speaking by John E. Mills, David Inwards and others.

Norwood Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Nessen of East Jordan, were in town over Sunday.

A good many went to Charlevoix Saturday evening to hear the Detroit Philharmonic Club.

Mr. Hammond and wife and Mrs. Adams returned to Traverse City Monday morning on the Columbia.

Will Superneau and Bob Stafford are working at Ellsworth, where they can see the cars every day.

Miss Agnes Green returned to Battle Creek, Monday.

Miss Anna D. Carrow, of Cross Village, has been engaged to teach the primary department of the Norwood school.

Miss Grace Hathaway with a friend, Miss Hastings of Conway, arrived Monday for a short visit at H. S. Babcock's.

Two of the bottles thrown overboard from steamers on the lakes, in the service of the weather bureau have been picked up near here, and sent on to Washington for use in determining the currents of the lakes.

Earnie Ferguson with a party from Chicago, arrived on the Petoskey Monday.

Mrs. N. N. Card of Clarion, arrived for a short visit with her mother, Mrs. Daniel Stafford, of this place.

Frank Smith had the misfortune to have his valuable stallion, Sunday night. Monday morning on going to the stable he found him lying dead, with no apparent cause for his death, as he was perfectly well the night before.

Chas. Brown has sold his handsome driving horse to Amos Richardson.

Just think of it! G. V. Nash and William Harris are up the Jordan fishing this week.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lulu Jamieson

CHAPTER III—Continued.

"I laugh; it is worth laughing at the set stare," she said. "If you entertain any fears for your political constituents I advise you to return to the village."

"I think as a little dog of explaining your words to deaf me, but I have no time to spend the day in idle conversation." Turning the sun now. Blessed sight! Cattle coming home, and people there where it is lovely. May I ask, if it is positively unlawful to sit here. If you should be at all inclined to tell me Dora lapfuc, for there isn't a man of pale and reptile in the whole village. I'm bad to be warned in time.

"It will be more prudent, my dainty, admitted Margaret, allowing him to move the shell in speechless. Dora was saying I was the wanton as well."

"That's a good sign. We know they are there, which is just as good. Do you know, I've been thinking of you all night. Healthy, I had a strange dream in which you figured. It is lonely up here and some influence connected me to fall asleep. Dear Dora, she's good, pious and very conscious. It was all very bad, I confess, you thought I'd gone and fallen asleep. Miss Margaret, Please tell me if that is your name. I have been curious to know."

"Your curiosity is one's satisfied. My name is Margaret."

"Thanks. I've always had an odd fancy for the name. It seems to mean so much in a few letters. Dora's name isn't at all."

"Not at all," responded Margaret quietly, for she was curious enough. I thought I was."

"Perhaps, in your fancy, I do, only wait after we are like yours."

Margaret's eyes were cast down and filled with a suggestion of petulance. "I'm sorry you don't like Dora. Variety is the spice of life; so please don't suppose me silly enough to adore what's."

"Oh, this one's tolerable enough," he replied, and smart, too; I dare say she's managed to be fairly good and my expense. Perhaps she's gloating over me at this moment. Do you know, with every effort perfect the pain."

"Hardly perhaps. How unnecessary! a perfect creature would be, and what a nuisance to have to come down to a lower sort. You unnecessary when present." "Like me, for instance. I am unnecessary you are. For the truth is I don't be one, as I said, if dream shadow don't change."

He leaned away from Margaret as he uttered the last words and began to make sweet love to the lonely shadow.

She watched his movements, but her mind was following the engineering work of Dwight.

"Let me pray to do all still and allow your life to stay thus!" she asked, after a moment's pause. "Remember to-morrow you have an opportunity to make a future for yourself. Why don't you take advantage of it? Do admire a man who can fight against obstacles, and who wins for himself a great name and a high position, not because of, but in spite of the accidents of fortune. And I certainly cannot understand how any person with ordinary talents can go through life with no ambition above amusement. I grow disgusted with myself."

"It is just as I expected," replied Brian, endeavoring to speak lightly. "You're strongly angled."

"Thanks. I consider your remark a compliment, though not may not mean it so much. I don't admire weak-minded men or women. I am glad to have ideas of my own, and not to be swayed by every passing word. You know I am angry. I suppose you consider me vainly amusing, but I think myself vastly unsensional. There is something in the air, I have say, or in the country. I am excitable mischievously."

"Did company without doubt," he agreed. "I never pretended to amount much, and I know I never should. That is why I never considered it worth an effort."

"Stop part! we are quickly, some instinct prompting her sympathy, "you born so much better than I thought. It is not too late to begin, neither is it over too late to begin. Mr. Hotaling, I don't doubt you intended to go to port or starboard, but I know you mean to do right."

Brian did not follow this advice. Instead, he spent the evening in a high state of discontent, and went to bed at half-past eight.

Continuation to South America.

The South American system of education have been framed upon the plan of ours, and in several of them even more radical measures have been adopted to increase the intelligence of the people," says the Hon. William Elroy Curtis, in an article on "The Progress of the South American Republics" in the New England Magazine. "Their universities are of a standard that compare well with ours in this country, and in most of the republics the attendance of children at the public schools is compulsory. They have more newspapers in proportion to their population than we have, and some of their periodicals are of a high order; they encourage art and music, and every city has its museums and galleries of paintings. Their shops are filled with the most modern articles of commerce, their hotels are all first class and are sumptuously furnished, and their homes are expended for luxuries to the degree of extravagance. The steamships that connect their ports with Europe are always crowded with passengers; but the lack of transportation facilities has prevented them from visiting the United States as frequently, and in as great numbers. The national debts of the Latin American Republics have been incurred for the purpose of construction, improvements, and other internal improvements, which in several of them have certainly anticipated the necessities of the population, and some borders upon the public treasure. But in most of them immigration from Europe is rapid and permanent, and the development of natural resources will soon enable their sovereign lines to become self-supporting."

Origin of a Soap.

The exiles who took refuge in London at the time of the French revolution met the poverty and hardships of their lot with much courage. They never begged, and it was often difficult to induce them to accept the funds subscribed for their assistance.

The women did not accept the partially worn and soiled clothing of wealthy and charitably inclined ladies, as most women in their condition would have been glad to do, managed with the cheapest materials to dress neatly and tastefully.

Their necessities developed an inventive spirit. The records of the London Times tell us that at the beginning of the eighteenth century hardly a week went, which some one—then they have a right to all the emoluments of the office—"Lord Lovat Fraser rise from year to year, and from occasion to occasion, to the most unpossessing of materials in blown by their invention of a new famous dish.

When the London butchers slaughtered their beef they were accustomed to throw away the fat with the refuse. The French women had the bright idea of buying them, since they could get them for a song, and making soap out of them. And time they gave to England the popular oval soap, which is essentially national dish.

How Savages Hunt Prattle Dogs.

A Natal, with its ethics a bit of mirror in the entrance of a barrow and lie behind the little bamboo all day it need be to secure the coveted prize of a fat prairie dog. When Mr Tinne ventures from his lad-room down into the world, he is followed by a familiar image, mocking him at the front door, and when he hurries out to confront this impudent intruder, whisk goes a cheekedly tipped arrow through him, pinning him to the ground so that he cannot tumble back into his home, or drain a cordial of the delightfully cold water. Still, not seeing Margaret, he turns from behind like lightning seizes his chunky neck safely beyond the reach of the cried-shaped leech and breaks his spine with one cuff.

Evolution and Eyebrows.

For those people who wish to make their lashes longer and more regular, the following suggestions may be of use. Examine the eyelashes carefully. Look at them in groups of a pair of scissors any which are split, ragged or crooked. Then smooth the base of the lashes every night with a mixture of castor oil and cologne on the top of a camel hair brush. If this is repeated sedulously for a few months the result is truly gratifying. Beautiful arched eyebrows are likewise a great detail of beauty and are not to be underrated. It is best not to pluck them, however, as it makes in course, but if it is decided to strengthen a little a few drops of castor oil may be safely rubbed into the skin every other night.—Detroit Tribune.

The Years Are Fleet.

The function of a negro's black skin is supposed to be the conversion of the sun's rights into music. The best thus generated remains in the skin and does not penetrate to the deeper tissues, being thus provided with a sun-proof armor the negro has stored an amount of heat that would be fatal to a white man, and run little or no risk of sunstroke.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

HE PORTRAYS THE ADVANTAGES OF THE CHRISTIAN.

Religion Never Was Designed to Make Our Pleasures Less—God Will Withhold No Good Thing from Those Who Love Him—The Infinite Father.

Our Generation.

Dr. Talmage's preaching tour in England has been a continued series of unprecedented successes. The English people have seemed to thoroughly appreciate the American preacher wherever he has preached. In Manchester the great Trade Hall was crowded for him. It holds 2,000 people, but it would not contain a third of the people who tried to get in. The streets leading to the hall were jammed with a dense surging mass of humanity. After the sermon Dr. Talmage preached in the infinite warehouse, which accommodates 3,000. The room packed for this week is entitled "Our Generation." Text, 2 Corinthians iii. 2: "Ye are our epistle."

The impression is abroad that religion is a mean short allowance; that when the ship sailing heavenward comes to the shining wharf it will be found out that all the passengers had the hardest kind of a time; that the children in Christ's crary march must or the time pitch an emory hammer. In a word, that all those people have a cold time in this world who take upon themselves an religious obligation.

I want to-day to find out whether this is so, and I am going to take account of stock. I am going to find what are the Christian's liabilities, and what is his assets, and what are his expenses and what are his loads, and mortgages, and what are his profits and what are his losses, and how much he is worth, and I shall spread before you the balance. In a word, I am warn you all against the religion of Jesus Christ unless it be a thing worth the time for you all to accept it if indeed it be for some. I trust that the sceptic and I find there what seems to be a roll of government securities, and the angels in heaven promising all things to the poor Christian. Those small words are yet text are a warranty good to the whole universe when it says, "All things are yours."

In making an inventory of the Christian's possessions I begin at the top of the pile, that he owns his world. My text says, "All things are yours." The word is "whether Paul or Apollos or Cephas or the world." It is as large as about thing to suppose that God would give to unregenerate men advantages which he would deny to his children. If you have large parts, a grand mansion, beautiful fountains, and a fine park, and a fine car, and you give the first right to all these possessions to unbelievers, "Oh, no, my children, you will say, "it will be time enough for us to begin to make use of these parks and enjoy the landscape." To unbelievers, "Oh, no, you shall have the first right to my statuary, the first right to my paintings, the first right to my fountains, and the first right to my landscapes." Now, this world is a park, and the Christian's children are the children of God, and God says to them, "Take

"SUNBEAM."

The Pathetic Tale of a Locket, an Inscription and Somebody's Sweetheart.

She was such a pretty girl with a puff of hair and a stylish hang to her gown—though, to be sure, one did not notice that until afterward. Her eyes held one at first, they were so bright, so informful of happiness, of real infectious happiness. It spoke, too, in the curves of her pretty mouth, and in her quick "springy" motion as she moved.

All the clerks in the jewelry store looked up and smiled as she entered, says the Jewelers' Review. She was like the sun. When she was gone they smiled still more—there was something at which to be amused. She had left a locket to be engraved—"Sunbeam" on one side and a name, a man's name, on another. He, the man, must have been a sweetheart, for her mouth had shown a fuller curve and pushed a tiny dimple to her cheek as she spoke to the clerk, and she blushed rosy red when he asked her to repeat the low-toned order.

There was a small sigh of relief on the girl's part as the door swung to behind her. He were not such a very pleasing thing she would send her lover after the locket. Somehow she felt shy about it, and the name—his pet name for her—had been difficult of utterance before all those men. They told her it would be done tomorrow. She would call! Very well.

She did not call; the clerk half unconsciously watched for her, and wondered. It had been nearly a week now, one day a young man came in—a young man who had her look without the sunshine in it. He showed the clerk for the locket and took it away.

She had called her brother and who proved to him about the locket before she died, and he gave it, as she had so wished to do with her own hands, to the man whose name was on the outside.

"Sunbeam"! Truly, it seemed to him there was no more left of life. There had been just one whose brightness had blown her him.

They heard of it in the store, and for a long time no one smiled when a girl left a locket to be engraved for her sweetheart. It so happened that no one ordered "Sunbeam" on one side.

ABOUT A CORK.

Its Autobiography Pleasantly Told in Forty Sentences.

I am a cork.

Young in years, very young.

One day I was taken from a bundle of other corks.

Put into a bottle of champagne.

Sent to the Hotel Continental, Paris.

Thrown on the floor of Room 45.

Lay there two days.

Was picked up by Leon Gaston.

He tried to put me into a bottle of absinthe.

I wouldn't go in.

Was pressed and thrown on the floor again. Kicked by both men in hobnailed boots. Both when he resigned for his revolver, muttering, "It is False, purely, Louise."

Next day was picked up by a chambermaid. Thrown out on the street.

A cap-peaker took me up. Sold me to a cork-cutter.

Was placed among other corks.

Next day was filtered, pared, still I was a very ghost of a champagne cork.

Was sold to a druggist. Put into a pint bottle of eau de cologne.

Bought by a lady. Placed in a dressing case.

Confined in a trunk. Shipped to New York. Put on a train. Jolted and jarred by an expressman.

Taken out of trunk; placed on the table of a Fifth Avenue belle.

Carefully taken out and replaced each day for months.

Began to grow spongy.

Unlashed in face.

Lost my color.

Grew smaller, narrower, shrunken, dead and—

Lowering allies withered.

A prey to microbes.

A treasure.

A glass stopper will take my place tomorrow.

I go—where?—Chicago Tribune.

Why They Kissed.

Charles II. of England was noted for his good nature and although he was sometimes called "Cuthbaking Charlie," yet his heedlessness was more apparent than a real characteristic. The story-vagrant of his reign was when hand in hand with poverty, and on some occasions he dined at royal tables was but poorly served.

One day, after a court of Gramont, who one day dined in state with the king.

Charles bade the count to notice that he was served upon the knee; a mark of respect to guests of the king not common at other courts.

"I thank your majesty for the explanation," answered Gramont. "I should have been very begging pardon for giving you so bad a dinner."—Youth's Companion.

As Old Art.

As far as research has been able to determine, glass was in use 2,000 years before the birth of Christ, and weavers then out in its infancy by any manner of means. In the blade collection at the British museum there is the head of a fine molded in glass, bearing the name of an Egyptian king of the eleventh dynasty. This is the oldest specimen of pure glass bearing anything like a date now known to exist.

Hesitance.

"Hurricane! is the old Spanish name for a West India cyclone; but it is now in Cuba applied to a long-continued wind of extreme violence. In Beaufort's scale it runs through "light," "gentle," "fresh," "strong," "strong hearse," "fresh," "strong," and "whole gales," and "storm" to "hurricane," by which the mariner understands a velocity of thirty miles or more an hour."

How to Be a Fine Fellow.

Always try and adapt yourself to circumstances. When you go to a lunchable do as the chinkabers do—eat, drink and be merry. A solemn face has no place at a clambake; when you go to a funeral, do as the mourners do, be quiet and comfortable; a jovial face is out of place at a funeral. Laughing being only the character of company, and then accept their society as you find them. This is what takes a man "a nice fellow to have round."—Philadelphia North American.

LUCKY ROSEMARY.

A Plant That Was Used as an Antidote for Evil.

In the south of Europe the rosemary has long had magic properties ascribed to it. The Spanish ladies used to wear it as an antidote against the evil eye, and the Portuguese called the Rifle plant and dedicated it to the fairies. The idea of the antidote, says All the Year Round, may have been due to a confusion of the name with that of the Virgin, but, as a matter of fact, the "rosmarinus" is frequently mentioned by old Latin writers, including Horace and Ovid.

The name came from the fondness of the plant for the sea shore, here it "ros" signifying with the "ros" or "dew of the sea—that is to say, spray. Another cause of confusion, perhaps, was that the leaves of the plant somewhat resemble those of the juniper, which in mediæval times was held sacred to the Virgin Mary.

In the island of Crete, it is said, a bride dressed for the wedding still calls last of all for a sprig of rosemary to bring her luck. And now we come to find necessary in close association with both marriage and death, just as the branch was, and perhaps still is, among the Greeks. It is interesting to trace the connection by which the same plant came to have two such different uses.

One of the earliest mentions of rosemary in English literature is in a poem of the thirteenth century, called, The Glorious Rosemary, in which begins thus:

This herbe is call rosmarine,
Of vertu ther is gode inoughe;
Nat all the vertues tell I ne mine
Ne, I trowe, no erthly man.

VENOM OF A TOAD.

The Creature Really Does Secrete Poison, says a London Physician.

A correspondent of a London journal maintains the scientific correctness of Shakspere's assertion that the toad "sweats venom." He says that this venom is of a tolerably powerful nature, and that instead of being secreted by the salivary glands as in snakes, it is actually secreted by the skin, so that the word "sweated" is most accurately descriptive.

This secretion, Dr. Guthrie states, also occurs in the toad through the parotid glands, the venom being a thick milky fluid, like the juice of dandelion stalks in taste and appearance. When injected under the skin, it kills small birds in six minutes, and dogs and guinea-pigs in half an hour or an hour and a half. The symptoms in birds are loss of coordination, followed by death. In guinea-pigs convulsions, and in the dog depression, vomiting and intoxication.

Dr. Guthrie kept a small toad in a cage with some lizards and one of them, having bitten the toad, became convulsed and died in less than two minutes. His dog, having seized a toad, was attacked by instantaneous and profuse salivation, violent vomiting and collapse. He states also that his hand was poisoned from handling a toad.

ABOUT GOLD.

A Very Little Goes a Long Way in Various Arts.

Most people believe that there is no known chemical that has any effect upon particles of gold. This is a mistake. Lacmoid will dissolve it as readily as aqua fortis does the baser metals. A mixture of nitric and hydrochloric acids (aqua regia) will also dissolve it, forming chloride of gold; so will a solution of chloride gas in water. Chloride of gold is the only salt of importance obtained from the yellow metal. This chloride is used for coloring glass, also in photography. When used by the glass-worker he finds that the hundredth part of a grain will deeply color a cubic inch of glass. By beating out between two pieces of membrane, gold may be flattened into leaves of such thickness that 282,000 of them may be laid one upon the other in order to make a pile 1 inch high. Gold beaters have succeeded in spreading a single ounce of gold over a surface of 146 square feet. In making gold threads, for embroidery it has been found that six ounces of gold can be drawn into 260 miles of wire.

Odd Place for a Snake.

Mr. Edward Jones, who resides at Alexandria, Va., was chopping some oak wood one evening when he came across a piece that was very hard to cut. He worked at it till it came apart, but was astonished when he found a snake in the center of the tough piece, rolled up in a ball, with no means of ingress or egress. The wood had grown around the reptile to the thickness of 3 inches on all sides, proving conclusively that he must have been there for many years. Jones killed the snake and the snapshots rarely where his snakeship had lain calculate that not less than a hundred years had elapsed since he took up his abode where he was found. The most curious part of the story is that the snake was not hard, dry or petrified; on the contrary, he was as flexible as any snake would be rolled up in winter quarters. Mr. Jones's account is handsome offers for either the snake or the split stick showing his abode, but all offers were promptly refused.

It Pleases the Doctors.

"There's a good time coming for one Heb'ew," remarked an eye specialist to the reporter. A while ago the blackboards in public schools adapted so greatly lessened the number of eyed children for treatment for nearsightedness. The year all over the country called attention to this fact, and the matter of instruction in our public schools has been changed in that respect. Just a new class of pupils is coming on. These change from times of standard uniform, where thousands upon thousands of impressions are taken from one set of stereotyped plates, are minus to the eyesight. The letters are blurred and gently smeared so that they run into each other, nothing being clear and distinct. The same is true of the cheap editions of the "Encyclopedia Johnbullensis," which may not be so bad for occasional reference, but will, if used to, put out the eyes of the innocents, who, if they lower the candles fate before them, would stand as pathetically against this cheap edition as little Prince Arthur with Hubert against boiling his eyeballs seared with hot iron at the command of cruel King John."

Ordinance 28.

An ordinance of the Village of Charlevoix to license and control the keeping of dangerous animals, dogs, dynamite and other explosives, firearms, engines and all other vehicles used in the Village of Charlevoix, and to repeal ordinance 14 of the Village of Charlevoix.

Section 1st. No person shall keep or maintain for an exhibition or any other purpose, any lion, tiger or other wild animal, or any bull, bear or other animal of a dangerous character within the Village of Charlevoix.

Section 2nd. No person shall keep or maintain for an exhibition or any other purpose, any dynamite, or any other explosive, or any gun, firearm, or other dangerous weapon, or any engine, or any other vehicle or any dog, unless the same shall be licensed, registered, and supplied for like within the Village of Charlevoix, as provided in this ordinance.

Section 3rd. The clerk is hereby authorized to issue licenses for any person to follow any business or occupation mentioned in section one of this ordinance, upon payment to the Village Treasurer of the following sums, viz: For each license for one lion or tiger or other wild animal, the sum of $100 per year; for each license for one bull, bear, or other animal of a dangerous character, the sum of $50 per year; for each license for one dog, the sum of $2 per year; for each license for one dynamite or other explosive, the sum of $10 per year; for each license for one gun, firearm or other dangerous weapon, the sum of $2 per year; for each license for one engine or any other vehicle, the sum of $5 per year.

Section 4th. This ordinance shall take effect and be in force from and after its publication.

Adopted this 4th day of July A. D. 1892.

WM. M. BURTON, President.
H. S. HAMMOND, Clerk.

CHOKED BY FOUL GAS

THREE CHICAGO TANNERY LABORERS KILLED.

The Republicans of Michigan and South Dakota Have Named Their Men—Not Enough Democrats Have Come to Detroit to Income Heat in Southern Kansas.

The Lawmakers.

In the Senate on the 21st the bill fixing the salaries of the officers of the Legislature with Canada was passed without amendment. In the Senate Messrs. Daniel and Wolcott denounced Washburn's anti-pass bill and the general opinion is that its enactment will be by bill then until the dead of Sunday was done by the conferees in the Senate and House. The bill will be reported then as adverse report will be presented to the House. The World's Fair measure has gotten many friends since the non-concurrence vote.

Farmers Held Responsible for Waterville.

Michigan Republicans, in convention at Saginaw Wednesday, followed the example of all the national conventions so far this year, and chose the head of their ticket in a field. Below is the full ticket:

For Governor, John T. Rich.
For Lieut. Gov., Jeremiah Wheeler.
For Secretary of State, Fred M. Warner.
For Treasurer, Hazen S. Pingree.
For Auditor, Stanley W. Turner.
For Attorney General, Aaron T. Bliss.
For Land Commissioner, Hiram Ferris.
For Supt. Public Instr., H. R. Pattengill.
For Member of Congress, Julius C. Burrows.

Election for Governor.

The Republicans of South Dakota were in session two days at Madison before they could make choice of their candidates. Following is the list of nominations complete:

Governor, E. C. Shedden.
Lieutenant Governor, Thomas Sterling.
Secretary of State, Thomas Thorson.
Treasurer, Frank Taylor.
Auditor, J. C. Lapp.
Attorney General, Frank Crane.
Land Commissioner, Thomas Ryan.
Congressman, John A. Pickler.
Supt. Public Instr., Mrs. Sarah Dow.

Lives Lost in a Railway Wreck.

A terrible collision occurred Thursday morning on the Kingston, Neponset and Western railway, between Marlboro and Bridgeville, Dorset, between a light engine and the regular morning freight train. The trains were going at a high rate of speed and met at a curve on the road. The concussion was terrible, and the engines and the cars of the freight train were smashed into pieces. Farmers and others quickly gathered at the spot, and the dead and wounded were hastily dragged from the wreck. Three were killed outright and seven wounded.

Bartels Is Chosen.

The Democratic National Committee met promptly Thursday, in New York, and immediately proceeded to business. The committee was called to order by Chairman Brice, who briefly announced the object of the meeting, and matters were carried through in such a prompt manner as to show that the whole business had been settled beforehand. Secretary W. F. Harrity, of Pennsylvania, was elected as the new Chairman of the committee, and S. P. Sheehy, of Indiana, was re-elected Secretary.

Four More People Overcome by Heat.

The weather yesterday let through quite Northern Indiana, in Michigan the thermometer registered 104 degrees in the shade. Three more trainmen were overcome with heat, and are now in a critical condition. Mrs. Sarah Dow, belt, an old woman, succumbed to the heat and died Thursday. The arrival of a physician. It is reported that hot winds have commenced to blow in the extreme western part of the State.

Hot Weather Disease.

While cleaning out a vat or "junk" at Rush & Cook's tannery, Clinton avenue and Bishop street, Chicago, Albert Schlosser was overcome by foul gas. Three men went to his rescue. The last their lives, while he is lately in the hands of the living, with the chances against his recovery.

NEWS NUGGETS.

E. C. Knight has sold his sugar refiner, dried at Cape May the other morning.

Precautionary measures are being taken by all the European governments to prevent the spread of cholera.

All the principal business blocks and many dwellings at Big Stone City, were destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $50,000, insurance, $27,000.

The entire force of men employed by the City Marshal of Grand Rapids, Mich., went on a drive because he refused to allow a forged Carnegie spikes to go with.

High O'Donnell and Hugh Boyle, members of the notorious Homestead gang threatened to shoot Pittsburgh and were remanded to jail. Application for their release on bail was immediately made.

Ex-State Treasurer Noland, of Missouri, surrendered himself to the Sheriff of the State Penitentiary, to serve the sentence of two years' imprisonment for embezzlement of State funds.

The question of Mount Etna continues. Violent outbreaks are heard accompanied by an increased discharge from the different craters. Stones and ashes are projected to a height of fully 1,200 feet.

Representatives of Supreme Cousty, N. Y., acting under the advice of William A. Sabbel and Sabbel, of the Republican National Committee, refused to obey the law adopted by the Democratic Legislature effecting a reapportionment of Assembly Districts.

Five tramps were killed by the collision of freight cars on the Burlington and Missouri River Railroad, near Plattsmouth, Neb.

Michael Vaelent, an Englishman, and his daughter, 7 years of age, a hopeless invalid, were asphyxiated in the family bath room in Paris.

A labor party, promised to be a majority of the Lower House Legislature, has abandoned their reservation and gone south of White River into the Indian Reservation, and declare that they have drawn their last cent in Indiana.

EASTERN.

Mrs. Lucy Fitzwhatever, widow of Daniel Fitzwhatever, who left such a munificent bequeath to religious, educational and charitable institutions, died Saturday night, at the residence of her son-in-law, Colonel Jones, who now is at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, and the Institute colleges, and in the Presbyterian and Episcopal hospitals at New York.

At Rochester, N. Y., an order was filed in the County Clerk's office dissolving the Fidelity Mutual Benefit Company, has a big show of it. Only about 1,200 of the 15,000 seats in the big building had been reserved, and of the others those who reserved their seats. But there were so many orders and paying Democrats in search of the best that they all came early, and the result was a long line before the door and all the exercises, and a crowd afterward which even Madison Square Garden could not accommodate.

The Missouri State Democratic Convention, which met at Jefferson City Tuesday at noon, commenced balloting for Governor at 8:30 o'clock the same night. There were five candidates, the leaders being Col. W. J. Stone, of Vernon County, and Col. Dick Dallas, of Buchanan County, in the third ballot it was evident that the convention was in a deadlock, and at 2 o'clock in the morning the convention adjourned after nominating a ticket composed of Democrats from the State. The convention met again, and after a hard fight a break was made in the Dalton ranks and Stone was nominated on the eighteenth ballot. The remainder of the tickets is as follows: For Lieutenant Governor, J. B. Moore, of St. Louis; Treasurer, L. V. Stevens, Auditor, J. M. Sickert; Secretary of State, A. A. Lesueur; Attorney General, Ballard Commissioner, James Cowgill.

INDUSTRIAL.

The question of how to support the striking workmen at Homestead is getting to be a serious one. A meeting was held to consider the subject.

The striking Bohio miners are so much in the presence of the troops that they were brutal and domineering when they had the non-union men at their mercy.

A PUBLICATION of the Homestead strike set for the Fact on Monday for the purpose, it is said, of heading off the Pinkerton men who are expected to have been brought over to the Monongahela Company to take the place of the strikers.

Advices from Wardner, Idaho, say that the Coeur d'Alene has arrested 100 union miners there and placed them under guard. The arrests have caused intense excitement and violence is likely to break out at any moment. Union men fear that the last opportunity for assistance has passed. Two hundred miners have been returned to Wardner and have gone to work in Bunker Hill mine.

FOREIGN.

Senator Baron de Courcelles, formerly French Ambassador at Berlin, has been appointed French arbitrator on the Behring Sea Arbitration Commission. The arbitrators will meet at Paris.

Mrs. Helen Dunsmore makes the assertion that enough new evidence has been discovered in the case of Mrs. Maybrick, serving a life sentence in Great Britain for the poisoning of her husband, to warrant the Home Secretary in recommending her pardon.

A serious of great fires is reported from the Philippine Islands. At Macoay the business quarter of the town was destroyed. At San Miguel the Governor, the Bishop and the principal of the town, causing great damage. At Balangas, 1,500 buildings were destroyed, leaving 9,000 persons homeless and without food. Other fires occurred at Juan Mandola and Mariquina during the month.

Captain Castella and his crew of six men, of the schooner Tudor, owned by Crawford & Co. of San Francisco, and bound for the South seas, were murdered by the natives of the island of Ponape, whose life had been spared, in consideration of the crime that had been committed. The murderers were arrested and sent to Manila.

IN GENERAL.

Inspiration Cathols have been charged against Judge Herce, of the State of Zacatecas, Mexico, alleged to have burned two victims at the stake.

On Tuesday New Mexico called in for cancellation 5,000 of territorial penitentiary bonds, paying L. Spiegberg, agent for the New York holders, a premium of some $412.

The Canadian Government will oppose the seizure of the steamer Cerpillon by the United States revenue Corwin in Alaskan waters on the ground of a case of jurisdiction.

According to advices received from Japan the anti-Christian arrested on Indian of Hokai, Alaska, charged with murder. Together with twenty witnesses they were taken to Jamaica for trial. The verdict of the Coroner's jury was that the Indian were responsible for the death of a white man during the fight with rancheros.

There is more trouble on the French New Foundland coast. French fishermen have malicious destroyed 300 lobster pots belonging to Newfoundlanders at Port-au-Port, St. Georges Bay, and have carried off a large quantity of rope. The French allege that the British lobster fishery interferes with their cod fishery. The war vessels Emerald and Pelorus have been sent to make an investigation.

HAS ANOTHER CHANCE.

FAIR APPROPRIATION BILL MAY PASS.

Home Rejects the World's Fair Amount, novels—Friends of the Measure Will Shape Its Success Still Now Lies in the Hands of Conferees.

Sunday Closing Settled.

The $5,000,000 appropriation for the World's Fair has been defeated in the House by a vote of 78 yeas to 132 nays. This action was taken in committee of the whole, and it was evident that the convention was in a deadlock, and at 2 o'clock in the morning the convention adjourned after nominating a ticket composed of Democrats from the State. The convention met again, and after a hard fight a break was made in the Dalton ranks and Stone was nominated on the eighteenth ballot. The remainder of the tickets is as follows: For Lieutenant Governor, J. B. Moore, of St. Louis; Treasurer, L. V. Stevens, Auditor, J. M. Sickert; Secretary of State, A. A. Lesueur; Attorney General, Ballard Commissioner, James Cowgill.

WESTERN.

A TRUCE at the State Insane Asylum, west of Richmond, Ind., named Williams and Hamilton, who had been discharged on parol, fell in front of the St. Louis and New York passenger train. Hill had been a neighboring field to watch some farmers threshing, and had a theory that he sat beside the track to rest, was asleep. The train passed up drawn and gashed before it unceremoniously.

MONDAY night three armed men stopped the Chicago Pacific train on the railroad near the Montana line, and ordered the conductor to see that he had been warned three times to keep out of this part of the country, and that if he ever came back they would kill him. The conductor said this is the Northern Pacific authorities, and they urged their parts to send a military force to Bellows to protect their trains, which was done. Now Dalls is there in person to direct the disposition of the troops.

The Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway and the Fort Dupree Coal Company have jointly offered a reward of $500 for the arrest and conviction of each of the men engaged in the robbery of the company's office at Dupree, and the attempt to wreck the train on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Railway at Lake Station in the Indian Territory. A large posse of men is now scouring the Indian Territory, and from advices received there is good reason to believe that the robbers will be captured. The amount stolen was $40,000.

The sick pigs of Montana will aggregate from twelve to fifteen million pounds this year. It is of excellent quality, and is rapidly going into the hands of Eastern buyers, at prices ranging from 12 to 19 cents a pound. All kinds of stock are in prime condition, and be gas enough of feed and motion will be required to keep the cows alive. The cattle are fattening on grass upon the stock ranges, and have injured very little from drought. Wheat, oats, barley, potatoes, and other vegetables are good.

Chief Holt, a farmer and miller residing near Columbus, Ind., some days ago purchased in an agent a farming mill paying in cash $12, and then signed a contract to act as agent and sell the mills to his neighbors at twenty cents per pound, the mills were received. He was greatly surprised the other morning when he was notified that at the railroad station a shipment of mills was received, amounting to $1,200. He hurried away to a lawyer for advice, and found that he had signed an ironclad note.

SOUTHERN.

Miss Eloise Moore, of Baltimore, daughter of the President of the Western Maryland Railroad, accidentally shot herself while carrying a revolver belonging to her father.

Joseph S. Kennedy, President of the Magnolia and of the Gate City National Bank of Texarkana, has been sick for several days, and a deficit of $70,000 in his accounts was discovered.

Near Frankfort, Ky., John Saunders and Jim Force were killed by an explosion of powder at the State arsenal. Others are reported killed, but no names are given. The men killed were of a party appointed to clean out the arsenal by order of the Governor. They took all the ammunition and stores to a farm near Frankfort to do the work, and while engaged 1,200 pounds of powder caught from a spark and exploded.

McLUCKIE IS IN JAIL

Manager Frick Now Begins the War in Earnest.

Monday was the most exciting day at Homestead since the beginning of the strikers and the Pinkertons. The Boat of Pinkerton men in Frick's work would be remained in the mill by nonunion men were not realized, but the Chief Engineer of Homestead, John McLuckie, is in the Allegheny County Jail charged with murder, and warrants are out for several other strike leaders. The Carnegie official states that the leaders being Vice President Tyler and Secretary Shafer, will be prosecuted then day by day until all who have been prominent in the trouble at Homestead have been punished or forced to leave the country, and the strikers claim that this week they to four leaves Chairman Frick and other officials of the Carnegie company will be arrested on the charge of murder.

The information against the strike leaders were made by Secretary F. T. Lovejoy of the Carnegie Company, and were made against High O'Donnell, the leader of the strikers, John McLuckie, Burgess of Homestead, Sylvester Critchlow, Anthony Dallavolo, Samuel Burt, James Flannagan and Hugh Ross, who are collectively charged with the murder of T. J. Connors and Silas Wyler the morning of July 6 during the riot. Connors was a Pinkerton man, the power of one man and a Homestead street, New York. He was struck on the back of the head by a thousand pounds and had his right arm crushed and was shot in the head and thrown into the Monongahela River and drowned. He had his head shot off with a shotgun and his body was thrown over the side of the river while standing with his back to the boat. Wyler was one of the two separate informations against the Pinkertons, and are varied in the cause of the victims.

The Pinkertons later purpose McLuckie appeared at Aid. McMaster's office and demanded a hearing on the charge of murder preferred against him. The hearing was not granted, but McLuckie was released on bail, and he was placed in the hands of Chief of Police Kelly and he courted a thorough investigation. The Chief said McLuckie had not left the city, he escape arrest, and he would be found at home.

WEIHE WANTS AN OFFICE.

The Ex-President of the Anti-Saloon Association a Candidate for Congress.

Telling dispatch William Weihe, the retiring President of the Anti-Saloon League, is a candidate for Congress in the Twenty-second District, which includes Allegheny County. The date for Congress in the Twenty-second District. For some time past a few of the Democratic leaders have been urging the Weihe to put a ticket in the field to be voted for by the Democrats, and the Democratic hosts through the Republican ranks, and thus gain the influence to labor circles. When Weihe was seen he said: "I am not from the presidency of the local labor organization, but I am a labor and temperance man, and I am a Democrat, but not some of his friends thought."

The report to make Mr. Weihe the Democratic candidate for Congress has been closely canvassed. Several days ago Mr. Weihe was called upon by the Democratic County Committee, said to be composed of men who are anxious to oppose Mr. Dalzell, but he positively refused to accept the nomination offered. Last evening, however, a second call was made, and Mr. Weihe was seen by a Dispatch reporter. FOSTER'S FORECASTS.

WHAT WILL MAY EXPECT IN THE WAY OF MILITARY WORK.

A Severe Storm to Cross the Mississippi Valley Between August 19 and 22—Sept. Inches Weather Will Be Favorable to the Farmer.

Forecasts for August.

My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm waves to cross the continent from July 20 to Aug. 2 and Aug. 4 to 6. The heat will reach the Pacific coast about the 20th, crossing the Mississippi Valley by the close of the 5th, the great central valleys from 6th to 11th, and the Eastern States about the 13th.

This storm will be quite severe in the Mississippi Valley from 10th to 12th, attended with very warm weather and severe local storms.

The weather will average warm for the season till about 24th to 26th, when we may expect a very considerable change, with an average of much cooler weather during the balance of the month. September will not be as warm as the same month was last year. Month will generally be reflected between Aug. 30 and the middle of September, and the fall months will be cool, with a fair average rainfall.

Local Forecasts.

Weather changes were from west to east across the continent, and each local forecast covers for within 250 miles east and west of the magnetic meridian portrayed, and for all the country between 25 and 50 degrees of latitude. The dates of the storm changes will occur within twenty-four hours before or after the dates of the dates given.

GEN. CARR'S APPOINTMENT.

He Becomes Brigadier General of the Fourth Brigade.

Col. E. A. Carr, who has been made Brigadier General, vice Colonel John Stanley, was born in New York, March 1, 1835, and graduated from West Point and entered West Point Academy in 1846 and graduated in 1850. At the outbreak of the war he held the position of adjutant of the 1st Dragoons, and 1861, he became colonel of the Third Cavalry, and in 1862 and 1863 was made Brigadier General of volunteers. He was made Brigadier General of volunteers in the Vicksburg campaign, and was made Major in the regular army, and had served in the Indian campaigns and in the Black River bridge, Brigadier General of the Fourth Brigade, Colonel Stanley, Major General for services during the war, he took part in many battles and skirmishes in the Indian and cavalry in quelling the Kansas and Nebraska Indians, and in the Black Hills expedition, and in the Sioux war, where he was wounded and which he received the thanks of Congress. He served in the cavalry operations attending the Nez Perces campaign, and in the capture of Vicksburg. Since the war he has served in the 9th cavalry and had Indian fighting, and has been frequently detailed on various Indian Legislatures for his work in freeing the Indian country.

TRAMPS KILLED IN A WRECK.

Two Men Death in an Accident Near Plattsmouth, Neb.

Train No. 2 on the Burlington and Missouri River freight, was badly wrecked at Plattsmouth, Neb., on Monday, River bridge, east of Plattsmouth, by the collision of two freight cars. The train was made up of twelve county cars and was being pulled by two engines. It broke in two going down the grade and the rear section of the train came down the front portion and stopped. The rear section then went into the front and was empty, and killed four tramps who were riding in the empty cars. Two of the tramps were killed instantly, but the other two died in the hospital.

Southern Minnesota Crop Bulletin.

Last week it was predicted that wheat in the southern part of this State would yield thirty to forty bushels per acre, but the prospect is now very materially dispelled, and there is great doubt as to more than twenty bushels. Almost a hurricane has swept across the region, and has generally prostrated the grain, and the heavy rains and high winds have done much harm. Corn has grown very rapidly of late, and is now quite forward. The grain was not quite ripe when the storm came, and the question was taken on emergency in the same, and the question of amendment. The standing vote resulted in 78 yeas, 132 nays, 12 not voting, and no quorum was made and before were 78 yeas and 132 nays, 12 not voting. Yeas, 192; nays, 72. That disposed of the World's Fair appropriation. The House had concurred in the Senate Sundays Closing amendment, and the paragraph making appropriations for models and diplomas had refused to concur in the $5,000,000 appropriation and everything seemed to be settled.

The Battle Not Lost.

"I don't understand it," said Director Lyman J. Gage, "Congress made provision the World's Fair, England Texas as its site, stipulated that we raise $10,000,000, and we have raised it, and the World's Fair, Congress has to do is to the fact that the Senate has concurred in a conference committee, the battle is not lost, nor is the done. A bill feature is that foreign countries will not participate in the trade of the Government. If the conferees are unanimous, there is no prompt action the Exposition may not be postponed for a year."

Chicago Sunday morning stood stand in the 1892 contest, in a letter that if the appropriation for the World's Fair clause may be stricken out or modified, the next session of Congress, the elections will then be out of the way, and this, it is hoped, will cause a change in the vote. President Palmer said: "I am quite sure that we will be so strong financially with Sunday closing as we would be if we had an appropriation of the $5,000,000 appropriation, and we will be well. It is understood that the Senate conferees are largely influenced by Senator Hawley, who declares, as we have from time to time in the Philadelphia Centennial, that if the gates to be open on Sunday the managers will be forced to close.

Following is a photo of the standing of each of the leaders of the different sections.

Is it possible that a private detective agency shall maintain a standing army, and shoot down citizens of the United States of the United States?—New York Times.

Some Western Democrats will need mighty long-legged pants by the time they successfully straddle the party's silver plank.

Candidate Cleveland's war record and candidate Stevenson's war record are exactly alike, except that Mr. Cleveland sent a substitute.

Attention is again called to the fact that the first plank adopted by the Chicago Convention by way of a platform was a lot of timber from the old Confederate constitution.

The Kansas City Times says that "no sum is so big as bigotry." What occasion had that paper to bring up so cruel a reflection on Grover Cleveland and the other leaders of the Democracy?

The Democratic candidate for Vice President pleads that his greenback record and his war record were made so long ago that they ought to be forgotten. The prayer for oblivion is a very common Democratic petition.

The Democratic organs are overdoing the "force-bill" racket. They don't scare even Republicans, so very nothing of frightening the country. Even if there were a force bill this hysterical howling would seem make a force bill out of it.

Sorghum who has had the curiosity and also the time and patience to make the count, announces that the Republican platform contains 1,250 words and the Democratic 2,030. This is another illustration of how long winded the Democrats are and how brief the Republicans are.

In accepting his nomination in 1884, Mr. Cleveland said that, to make suffrage free and unmortgaged, he would make the tariff effective rather than an amendment to the revenue law disqualifying the Republican from inelection. Yet Mr. Cleveland accepted a second nomination in 1888, and a third in 1892. An ounce of example is worth a ton of precept.

HARPER'S WEEKLY

takes this cheerful view of the situation from the Democratic standpoint: It is very happy fortune that voters who hold Mr. Cleveland's views have in his candidate altogether acceptable. This seems all very nice. But, unfortunately for Mr. Cleveland, there are not enough voters of his way of thinking to make him President.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat treats as absurd the suggestion that Massachusetts, Ohio and Iowa should be placed on the list of doubtful States. It says the fact is that "the Republicans have so much better chance of carrying West Virginia and North Carolina than the Democrats have of carrying any of the three States mentioned." It is a fact that the Republican chances of having West Virginia and North Carolina counted for them even if they carried them?

President Harrison has been strenuous in his efforts to secure for the colored voter the same treatment that is accorded to the white voter, and the Democratic press is to-day making these efforts the occasion of attacks on the Republican party. If every colored voter in the Northern States where his franchise can be exercised without danger, will cast his vote for the benefit of his race it will result in the re-election of President Harrison, who has shown a disposition to justice to all citizens, regardless of their color, in Northern and Southern States alike. This is a lesson which it will be well for colored voters in the doubtful states to bear in mind.

INDIANAPOLIS JOURNAL: The contrast of these valuations at Omaha, who spent the Fourth of July in declaring that the country is on the ragged edge of starvation, while Kansas wheat-growers were calling for help to take care of their great harvest, and the unusual prosperity of industry was never so large, is the quality which the bull possessed when he attacked the locomotive.

Under the Cleveland administration the United States made yearly revenue was virtually nullified and Western immigration greatly checked. During the entire administration only 44,443 land patents on agricultural lands were issued, while during the Harrison administration 231,697 have been issued. These patents are to individuals and represent actual settlements. The Democratic platform approves the paralyzing policy pursued during the Cleveland administration, and says, "We pledge ourselves to continue this policy." It is a policy that is distinctly hostile to the interests of the West.

The Democratic press and leaders are continually sniffing at the American citizen who quarries and cuts his stone will then have money to buy the wheat, potatoes, pork and other products of the farmer.

MAIL AND EXPRESS: Democratic newspapers are endeavoring to make political capital out of the fact that Mr. Carnegie is a Republican. But what this has to do with the Presidential contest it is difficult to understand. Mr. Carnegie may be a free trade sentimentalist and a Republican. He has had difficulties with his workmen, but employers of labor in free-trade England recently have had several lockouts, and it is but a few years since that William I. Scott, an acknowledged leader of Cleveland's forces, had a protracted contest with 1,500 of his employes in his mines. Mr. Scott was a free-trader and a Cleveland man, and was really one of the most conspicuous Democratic campaigns. Democratic newspapers which are attacking the Republican candidate for Vice President ought most very short memories if they think their readers have forgotten the history of events of the past few years. Mr. Scott, Mr. Carnegie, as employers of men, had their difficulties, but it is not fair to cite Mr. Carnegie visiting the sins that can be punished, and the same law should be applied to him for its violation as to other employers of labor. The Democratic platform contains the 2,000 words and control of his property, provides for the safety of his employes.

NEW YORK PRESS: There is only one party in American politics capable of deliberate calculation as to the amount of protection which is made from the attacking strength of Democracy. The same element in the Democracy that took advantage of every disaster, to the Union cause during the rebellion to denounce the war as a failure and to clamor for a government that was noisily trying to reunite the shattered nation is now manifesting its joy at the blood-pollution on the banks of the Monongahela and declaring that it was brought on by the exercise of protection to American industries. The malignant assaults of the un-American faction at the moment with the same results now that they did thirty years ago. It is quite natural that the year and those years made at the front the union put down the rebellion and vindicated the cause of it and freedom. So, in the present campaign, the protective system will triumph over the falsehoods and vituperation of the advocates of Confederate free trade. The charge that protection is the cause of the business depression is answered freely made by free-trade demagogues and Democratic organs of a certain class, is absurdly false. It is true that in one sense protection has made some troubles possible. But the fact that it has made the wonderful increase in the iron and steel industry, for which we need no such industry in America. But the real protection responsible for the outbreak of panic and depression at Homestead is sheer folly, as more than three years ago the Democratic agitators thus raised the cry of industrial disturbances, contrasts in wages between organized labor and capital, and between states in which where great industries existed. So long as human nature remains what it is they will continue to cry. Full trouble of this kind imperial arbitration is the best, as it is often the only just remedy. If both parties had consented to arbitrate their differences the terrible scenes at Homestead would never have taken place.

FIGURES FOR FARMERS.

HOW THE McKINLEY LAW BENEFITS AGRICULTURISTS.

The Demagogic Efforts of Democratic Newspapers to Prove the Homestead Strike Into a Free-Trade Argument Is a Complete Failure.

Facts and Figures.

The organs of the party which is now before the country as the champion of the British or free-trade tariff theory are now busy in explanation of the assertion that the McKinley tariff law had injured the farmers. A few official figures will show how false such assertions are.

By the old law, the duty on imported wool was 20 per cent, of their value, as horses were appraised much below their real value, say from $25 to $50, the duty was not sufficient to check the influx of Canadian and Mexican horses. The duty on cattle was raised to $10 per head for all horses valued at less than $150, and 30 per cent. ad valorem for those of that value. What has been the result? During 1887, under the old law, the value of horses imported was $2,052,186, while during 1891, under the McKinley law, it was $1,973,479. That is, the advance of the duty kept out of our markets a million dollars' worth of Canadian horses in 1891 and made room for a million more of home-raised horses. The duty on cattle was raised to $10 per head for all horses valued at less than $150, and 30 per cent. ad valorem for those of that value. What has been the result? No More Gerrymanders.

Detroit Tribune: In two able, logical and just opinions, on the main points of which the five justices concurred, the Supreme Court yesterday declared the iniquitous and inequitable reapportionment acts of the democratic legislature of 1891 null and void for unconstitutionality. At the same time the court voided the reapportionment acts of 1885, which had been called in question, and ordered the secretary of state to issue notices of election in accordance with the acts of 1881, unless the legislature shall supercede these acts by a new reapportionment.

These important opinions interpret the constitution of Michigan, for the first time in the history of the state, upon two vital questions relating to the reapportionment of legislative districts. They establish beyond all doubt, first, that the constitution contemplates substantial equality of population in senatorial districts, and that the principles applicable to the apportionment of representatives apply also to the apportionment of senators, and, second, that the county is the unit of representation and cannot be divided by the legislature in the formation of representative districts. On both these points the opinions follow, so far as differences in state constitutions will permit, the precedent reasoning of the Wisconsin Supreme Court in a similar case.

The result of the attack upon the democratic gerrymander is a great victory for the people against political trickery and partisan chicanery. As Chief-Justice Morse well said, the gerrymander is a danger to free institutions. Its object is to "deprive the people of their will in the administration of the government." This is what the democrat legislature attempted. It sought to make the vote of one democrat worth twice as much as the vote of one republican, and set the vicious precedent of splitting up a county in order to deprive it of its equitable and constitutional representation. This sort of political iniquity has been already rebuked by the Supreme Court. It has been branded as unlawful and unjust. No succeeding legislature can follow the unrighteous example of the last. With the democratic legislature of 1891 the gerrymander in this state must end.

To know that in England one in every thirty-nine of the population is a pauper, whereas in this country there is one pauper to every 680 inhabitants, suggests to every thoughtful man that there must be a superior industrial system in operation in the United States. There is. We have a protective tariff.

Queen Victoria has entered upon her fifty-sixth year of her reign. A little more than twelve months hence should she survive, she will have reigned longer than any English monarch, with the single exception of her grandfather, George III. Henry III was put upon the throne for six and fifty years, and already the queen has held her sceptre for fifty-five.

The Democratic free traders charge the protective tariff with being responsible for the formation of trusts. There is no duty on kerosene oil, yet where will you find a more gigantic trust than that of the Standard Oil company, but you don't see any Democratic paper condemning it. Is it because Rifle, Rockefeller and other magnts of the combination are Democrats and liberal contributors to the Democratic campaign fund?

President Harrison has issued a proclamation declaring Friday October 21, 1892, a national holiday and recommending that so far as possible a cession from toil by the people of the United States, that the National flag float over every school house in the land and that the citizens assemble themselves in churches and other places and express their gratitude to Divine Providence for the devout faith of Christopher Columbus, the discoverer, and for the divine care and guidance during the 400 years of the history of this continent since its discovery.

During the three years of Harrison's administration there was paid off our national debt about $200,000,000, thereby saving $14,000,000 per year in interest. That is where the surplus went; and such men as Godkin of the New York Nation contend that the public debt should have been set in run, and the revenues reduced, so that the people could have had the use of the money. That may be deemed good. Democratic financiering, but Democratic financiering has twice bankrupted the treasury of the United States and seriously injured the credit of this country abroad.—*Ind. Governor McKinley remarked recently that all the principles of the first Republican national platform are now incorporated in the laws of the land. And no party dares to come forward and demand the repeal of any of them.

English newspapers think the Homestead troubles are due to the McKinley law. Doubtless the King lish newspapers also believe the cholera epidemic is due to the McKinley law. In this they have the cordial assent of Democratic free trade news papers, the Jeffers and the cranks.

The New York, an armored cruiser well under way, is of 8,150 tons displacement, the largest steel ship ever built in this country. Her coal capacity would enable her to steam 13,000 miles without recoaling, and her speed of twenty knots would enable her to overtake nearly any ship in the world.

The New York World continues to cry about starvation wages at Homestead. But the World correspondent describes Hugh O'Donnell's beautiful home, costing more than $3,000, and all paid for in less than six years; his piano, books, and pictures, and then adds: "You will find them in the houses of nearly all the skilled workmen. There is an Encyclopedia Britannica in the case. Nearly every man in the town seems to have subscribed for the big work." The World should now send that correspondent to some English manufacturing town and let him describe the houses of the working men there.

Noticing the sawdust collecting under the wheel, he commenced poking it away with the pipe, which in some way caught in the rapidly revolving wheel and was driven into his eye, piercing his brain, so that when the pipe was drawn out, a large portion of the brain came with it. He lingered in an unconscious condition until five o'clock the following morning, when death came to put an end to his sufferings.

Hastings from Hayes.

Oscar Tillotson went to southern Michigan on Sunday.

Peter McNally has discovered a bed of clay on his farm near Oyster Bay that will make good brick.

W. H. McPherson of Howell, was in Hayes, Thursday, looking over his timber lands, and the writer showed him how to do the trapeze act in traversing burnt cedar swamps.

The bills on the state road are in a fearful condition since the late heavy rains and if they are not attended to Hayes will probably have a lawsuit or two for damages.

Mrs. Jennie Wade and children, of Manton, are the guests of W. S. Baker.

Special for Bay View.

On account of the following special days at Bay View during the Assembly, tickets will be sold by the Chicago and West Michigan railway at one fare for the round trip from Traverse City and stations north. World's Fair Day, Aug. 6th; Farmer's Day, Aug. 20th. Tickets will be good for return only on date of sale, except for August 6th, in which instance return limit will be August 7th.

THE REGATTA!

The Second Annual Meeting A Grand Success.

WHO THE WINNERS ARE.

Large Enthusiastic Crowds Witnessed The Aquatic Sports.

Due to the energy and unceasing efforts of the Little Traverse Boat Club and a certain few of its members in particular, have the reunion and denizens of this violently enjoyed during the past three days a most successful regatta, which is not soon to be forgotten in the annals of Charlevoix.

What could be done, was accomplished and what was left undone, in furthering the interest of the meeting of the boats, was not the fault of the wide-awake committees, who so ably managed the affair. The regatta committee composed of Hon. Chas. H. Whitman, Hansel A. Lee, N. H. Blatchford, Col. A. F. Stevenson and W. H. Aldrich assisted by the officers of the club so completely and thoroughly laid and carried out their plans, that the second annual regatta of the association which they represent, must be voted in general and in detail a complete and pleasurable success. Probably a harder-worked man than W. H. Aldrich of Chicago, who acted as secretary, has not been seen on the resort this year. He was a general encyclopedia of information and to him great credit is due for his efforts. Captain Glen S. Allen proved himself a boatier and as a manager showed considerable ability. Commodore George H. Wirans and Rear-Ikon C. Whitman were also at the helm with the president of the club, Dallas Boudeman, steering the ship of the regatta into a port of success.

On Monday evening a heavy storm arose over Lake Michigan and precipitated itself with a vehemence only equalled by the resentment of those who are anxious for the welfare of the races. Tuesday morning broke forth in a gloomy manner but Old Sol easily got in an appearance, chased away all gloom and a good breeze from the southwest made it a capital day for sailing. The morning trains over the Chicago & West Michigan brought large crowds and the steamer Priant appeared from Petoskey with a good sized delegation. All along the Charlevoix rows of cottages the green and white ribbons were displayed with stars and stripes and Japanese lanterns. White's famous military band from Kalamazoo arrived and began discoursing excellent music. The crowds congregated about the Belvedere while many stood on the shore of the lake and others piled the waters in row-boats. The entries by this time in the different races had become immensely large and by 10:30 all was in readiness for the opening event of the regatta.

CLASS 5—SAILING RACES.

The entries and numbers of boats in this race were as follows:

1 Pequot, F. W. Wilcox, Kalamazoo.
2 Dahlia, C. E. Lloyd, Charlevoix.
3 Avalon Jr., Capt. A. F. Stevenson Jr., Harbor Pt.
4 Wa-ge-ne, Capt. Chas. H. Briggs, Wequetonsing.
5 Ariel, Capt. H. B. Freeman, Harbor Point.
6 Allison, A. B. Pond, Charlevoix.
7 Elaine, Capt. John F. Hale Jr., Harbor Point.
8 Sunshine, O. Kirby, Charlevoix.
9 A Six, L. Jay Bonsteel, Charlevoix.
10 Pennsylvania, F. W. Blanchard, Charlevoix.

The preparatory gun was fired from a scow in Pine Lake just in front of the Belvedere, and ten open sail boats appeared for the first sailing race, of the class 5 order, having a water-line of from 14 to 18 feet. There were eleven entries, but ten only appeared. Ten minutes later the starting gun was fired and the "white sails" passed over the line almost in a bunch. A prettier start has rarely been seen. The course was seven miles. A good south west wind carried them to the first buoy off four mile point and they rounded in the following order 8-10-4-2-7-3-5-6-9. Between the first and second buoys 2 fell out. At the second buoy off Oyster Bay the positions were greatly changed as follows: 7-8-3-10-4-1-5-9-6. At this point however, the race became an uneven one, by mistake, a second buoy was mistaken for the right one by eight of the boats and all were consequently put about a mile behind. The Pequot ran the right buoy and came in full-rigged the winner of the race at just 12:37½, her time being one hour 44½ minutes, having started at 10:52. She was followed by the Wa-ge-ne, taking second in one hour and 56 minutes. The Pequot took third prize in two hours and one-half minutes. She started at 10:52½ and finished at 12:54. The Pumpkinseed came in fourth in two hours and 14 minutes. The other boats finished from 2 hours and 6 minutes to 12 minutes. The prizes are: 1st, aneroid barometer; 2d, marine glasses; 3d, barometer and case; 4th, U. S. standard barometer.

The Petrel which won the race was formerly owned by Henry Malone and was the first boat to win a prize in the regattas held at Charlevoix.

Considerable dissatisfaction is felt over the second buoy which deceived eight of the boats. Said F. W. Wilcox of the Pequot in the SENTINEL: "The Pequot clearly proved herself the best boat and would have won Chapin acted as coxswain. Prize, two imported pocket knives.

CENTRE RACE—TANDEM.

The course was changed from ¾ mile straight away to ½ mile straight away. The entries were:

James Stevenson & A. J. Stevenson, Dallas Boat Club.
C. McGregor & H. Gould, Detroit Boat Club.
J. Kelliher & J. Dwyer, "
Chas. Bonsteel & Chas. Bonsteel, Charlevoix.
Frank Bonsteel & Chas. Bonsteel, " L. Jay Bonsteel & W. Kent, "
Joe Bonsteel & Chas. Bogwell, Charlevoix.

Beauvais and Dagwell won the race easily in 5m 4s, followed by Gould and Isham in 5m 15s. The other entries averaged 5m 25s. One prize, two pearl opera glasses. Beauvais and Dagwell may be titled out as proto-la were entered that they were professionals.

TUB RACE.

The following were the entries:

George Beauvais, Charlevoix.
George A. Smith, "
Frank Cattlin, Lodge.
Archie Sowland, Charlevoix.
Walter Stewart, " Harry Bogwell, "

Considerable sport and amusement resulted from this race and the boys worked like Trojans for the prizes. The winners were, 1st, Frank Cattlin; 2d, Archie Sowland; 3d, Walter Beauvais; 4th, Miley Miller. Prizes, 1st handsome brass lantern; 2d, large fox ball; 3d, a tub; 4th, a tub. The timekeepers were unable to keep the chronometer's hand swinging.

EVENING CONCERT.

White's military band from Kalamazoo, one of the crack organizations of the state, appeared upon a brilliantly illuminated stage on Round Lake and discoursed excellent music. The effect upon the lake of the lights reflection in the waters was dazzling to those on the land. The strains reached the hearers and for applause the clouds cast down a terrific roll of kass-drums, with occasional cornet flashes all followed by a potpourri of rain drops. A sudden rush was made for the Belvedere and in the melee which followed, W. S. White, a strofter and prominent member of the band, took a plunge bath. He arose in several minutes and was rescued. As a result of the hurrying to land, one of the cymbals is now ringing to the tune of the "mermaids in the sea," as their falls flop against the brass musical instrument. Fred Davis, another member of the band also took a plunge. At the Belvedere a number of selections were admirably rendered. A beautiful sign to behold just before the rain, was the illumination of Charlevoix resort. Nearly every cottage and the Belvedere were shine with Japanese lanterns and everything was in a gorgeous state generally.

In the parlor of the Belvedere the regatta committee discussed pro and con the protests entered. The protest made by F. W. Wilcox in the class 5 race, pertaining to the second and false buoy, around which eight boats passed a mile out of their way was not accepted and no change made. A new race was also asked for, but refused. To many, this decision seems an injustice. In the tandem canoe race the protest was left open for future action. In the double shell race the protest made of a foul from the Detroit team by the Catlin team was not allowed. It was evident twice that a foul took place in the race, and had there been a second prize the Catlin team would have insisted upon a different decision.

With following and good prospects for Wednesday the first day of the regatta ceased.

WEDNESDAY RACES.

THE GREAT CLASS 1 SAILING RACE ON LAKE MICHIGAN.—LADIES TAKE A HAND.

The second day of the regatta opened rainy and with a dismal outlook for good sailing. Despite the inclemency of the weather, a large crowd of visitors arrived from the various resorts and by 10 o'clock, the rain had ceased and a good breeze was on deck. The first event of the day was the

CLASS 1 SAILING RACE.

Entered in class 1 were the following boats with their sailors:

1. Pelin, Capt. J. McGrory, Chicago.
2. Sunbeam, Capt. T. E. Mathews, Chicago.
3. Sea Gull, Commodore Pendleton, Chicago.
4. Pastime, F. E. Amey, "

Warner	11:32	11:37½	5m 4s
Whitman	11:32	11:37	5m 4s

Dagwell was in fine form and coming slowly in. Could he have been pushed a record of less than 12 minutes would have been made. The prize for the winner, Mr. Dagwell, is a gold medal.

CANOE RACE, SINGLE.

This race was ½ mile straight away and was participated in by:

Joseph Beauvais, Jr., Charlevoix.
Frank Bonsteel, Detroit Boat Club.
F. Jacobson, " " "
J. Dwyer, " " "
J. Kelliher, " " "
J. Gordon, " " "
F. Clark, " " "
James Stevenson, Dallas Boat Club.
H. T. Trask, Stanley McGraw and H. Reidy of the Detroit Boat Club and William McDonald of the Catlin Boat Club, were entered but failed to appear. The race was a close and exciting one and was won as follows: Ist, G. Gould, 4m 3s; 2d, C. S. Isham, 4m 4s; 3d, J. Hathbone, 4m 5s. The others finished 1m 4s and 7 seconds. The prize was a handsome pair of black leather opera glasses.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

LACK OF WIND PREVENTS THE CLASS 3 SAILING RACE.—OTHER EVENTS.

At 1:30, when the class 4 sailing race was called on Pine Lake, the wind had died away and it became necessary to postpone the same. The crowds then surged to the shore of the lake and the other events took place.

DOUBLE SHELL RACE.

The distance was ¾ mile and return. Those entered were:

Frank Whitman & J. Erskine, Dallas Boat Club.
Jo Mitz & Jacob Stewart, "
W. A. Warner & Geo. L. Peacock, Detroit Boat Club.

The start was evenly made at 2:30 and a pretty race ensued although the victors held the lead easily. Whitman and Erskine crossed the line first at 2:39.5, making the time 9m 5s. Warner and Peacock took second prize in 9m 15s. Stevenson and Mitz came in third in 9m 20s. They claimed a foul from Warner and Peacock and the protest was entered. The prize consisted of two gold medals.

DOUBLE BARR—YOUNG MEN'S DOUBLE.

The entries were as follows:

Harry Melching & Chas. Miller, Harbor Springs.
Frank Bogwell & Frank Bogwell, Jr., Chicago.
Walter Clark & Lloyd Wilcox, Detroit Boat Club.
James Erskine & Patrick Whitman, Dallas Boat Club.
James Stevenson & Wm. Mitz, "

The course was ¼ mile straight away. Messrs. Melching and Miller won the race in 2m 32s. Harry Chapin was the coxswain. Prize, two silver match safes.

SWIMMING RACE—MEN.

The distance was 100 yards, for men over 21. The following were the entries:

James Stevenson, Dallas Boat Club.
C. Erskine, " " "
F. W. Reidy, Detroit Boat Club.
J. Clark, " " "
J. Dwyer, " " "
J. McGraw, " " "
J. Kelliher, " " "
Geo. Bogwell & George N. Smith, Charlevoix.
George Stiglich & Herbert Morgan, Charlevoix Resort.
Beauvais and Smith won. Harry Chapin acted as coxswain. Prize, two imported pocket knives.

CENTRE RACE—TANDEM.

The course was changed from ¾ mile straight away to ½ mile straight away. The entries were:

CHARLEVOIX, AUG. 5, 1892

No More corrspondents.

Detroit Tribune, in two able, logical and just opinions, on the main points of which the free justices concurred, the Supreme Court yesterday declared the injurious and inequitable reapportionment acts of the democratic legislature of 1891 null and void for unconstitutionality. At the same time the court voided the reapportionment act of 1885, which had been called in operation, and ordered the secretary of state to issue notices of election in accordance with the acts of 1881, unless the legislature shall supercede these acts by a new reapportionment.

These important opinions interpret the constitution of Michigan, for the first time in the history of the state, upon two vital questions relating to the reapportionment of legislative districts. They establish beyond all doubt or cavil that the constitution contemplates substantial equality of population in senatorial districts, and that the principles applicable to the apportionment of representatives apply also to the apportionment of senatorial districts, and that the county is the unit of representation and cannot be divided by the legislature in the formation of representative districts. On both these points the opinions are clear, so far as differences in state constitutions will permit, the precedent governing of the Wisconsin Supreme Court in a similar case.

The result of the attack upon the constitution, everywhere is a great victory for the people against political jockery and partisan chicanery. As a great Justice Morse well said, the gerrymander is a danger to free institutions. Its object is to deprive the people of them will in the administration of the government." This is what the democrat legislature attempted. It sought to make the vote of one democrat worth twice as much as the vote of one republican, and set the serious precedent of splitting up a county in order to deprive it of its equitable and constitutional representation. This sort of political iniquity has been severely rebuked by the Supreme Court. It has been branded as unlawful and unjust. No succeeding legislature can follow the unrighteous example of the last. With the democratic legislature of 1891 the gerrymander in this state must end.

To know that in England one in every thirty nine of the population is a pauper, whereas in this country there is one pauper to every ten industrials, suggests to every thoughtful mind that there must be a superior industrial system in operation in the United States. There is. We have a protective tariff.

Queen Victoria has entered upon the 55th year of her reign. A Victoria more matchless monarch never adorned the throne, she will have reigned longer than any English monarch, save, the single exception of her grandfather, George III. Henry III succeeded the throne six and a half years and already the queen has held her sceptre for fifty-five.

The Democratic free traders charge the protective tariff with being responsible for the formation of trusts. There is no duty on kerosene oil, yet where will you find a more gigantic trust than that of the Standard Oil company, but you don't see any Democratic paper condemning it. Is it because Rockefeller and other magnols of the combination are Democratic and liberal contributors to the Democratic campaign fund?

President Harrison has issued a proclamation declaring Friday October 21, 1892, a national holiday and recommending, that so far as possible a cessation from toil by the people of the United States, that the National flag float over every school house in the land and that the citizens assemble themselves in churches and other places and express their gratitude to Divine Providence for the devout faith of Christopher Columbus, the discovery, and for the divine care and guidance during the five years of the history of this continent since its discovery.

During the three years of Harrison's administration there was paid of our national debt about $200,000,000, thereby saving $14,000,000 per year in interest. That is where the surplus went, and such men as Gladstone of the New York Nation contend that the public debt should have been let to run, and the revenue reduced, so that the people could have had the use of the money. That may be dressed good Democratic financiering, but Democratic financiering has twice bankrupted the treasury of the United States and seriously injured the credit of this country abroad.—State Republican.

Governor McKinley remarked recently that all the principles of the first Republican national platform are now incorporated in the laws of the land. And no party dares to come forward and demand the repeal of any of them.

• • •

English newspapers think the Homestead troubles are due to the McKinley law. Doubtless the Eng lish newspapers also believe the cholera epidemic is due to the McKinley law. In this they have the cordial assent of Democratic free trade news papers, the Peffers and the cranks.

• • •

The New York, an armored cruiser well under way, is of 8,150 tons displacement, the largest steel ship ever built in this country. Her coal capacity would enable her to steam 10,000 miles without recoaling, and her speed of twenty knots would enable her to overtake nearly any ship in the world.

• • •

The New York World continues to cry about starvation wages at Homestead. But the World correspondent describes Hugh O'Donnell's beautiful home, costing more than $3,000, and all paid for in less than six years; his piano, books, and pictures, and then adds: "You will find these in the houses of nearly all the skilled workmen. There is an Encyclopedia Britannica in the case. Nearly every man in the town seems to have subscribed for the big work." The World should now send that correspondent to some English manufacturing town and let him describe the homes of the working men there.

Some one stole the mail bags from the station platform at Traverse City one night last week. Later the agent found them in a freight car, empty. No clue.

Hebinite News—Yesterday morning the 6:05 train was about three hours late, and coasing into town it struck Will Warner's cow, knocking her into the air and off the track, but she was not killed, only bruised, and is now chewing her cud and trying to think of a better way of stopping a train. —— Antrim county will have a grand fair this fall. The grounds will be in far better shape than ever before, and the entries will be more numerous. Special attractions are being arranged for, mention of which will be made later.

One of the saddest accidents that has ever occurred in Traverse City took place there last week in the Pelgrim & Roberts mill. Everett Emerson was standing near a large wheel, holding a short piece of gas in his hand, and waiting for some orders. Noticing the sawdust collecting under the wheel, he commenced poking it away with the pipe, which in some way caught in the rapidly revolving wheel and was driven into his eye, piercing his brain, so that when the pipe was drawn out, a large portion of the brain came with it. He lingered in an unconscious condition until five o'clock the following morning, when death came to put an end to his sufferings.

THE REGATTA!

The Second Annual Meeting A Grand Success.

WHO THE WINNERS ARE.

Large Enthusiastic Crowds Witnessed the Aquatic Sports.

Due to the energy and unceasing efforts of the Little Traverse Boat Club and a certain few of its members in particular, have the exertions and decisions of this vicinity enjoyed during the past three days is most successful regatta, which it is not easy to forget due to the unions of characters.

What could be done, was accomplished and what was left undone, in furthering the interest of the meeting of the boats, was not the fault of the wide awake committees, who so ably managed the affair. The regatta committee composed of Hon. Chas. H. Whitman, Hiram A. Lee, N. H. Hatchford, Col. A. F. Stevenson and W. H. Aldrich assisted by the officers of the club so completely and thoroughly laid and carried out their plans, that the second annual regatta of the association which they represent, must be voted in general and in detail a complete and pleasurable success. Probably a harder-worked man than W. H. Aldrich of Chicago, who acted as secretary, has not been seen on the resort this year. He was a general encyclopedia of information and to him great credit is due for his efforts. Captain Glen S. Allen proved himself a hustler and as a manager showed considerable ability. Commodore George H. Wilmans and Isaiah Ross C. Whitman were also at the helm with the president of the club, Dallas Boardman, steering the ship of the regatta into a port of success.

On Monday evening a heavy storm arose over Lake Michigan and precipitated itself with a vehemence only equalled by the resentment of those who are anxious for the welfare of the races. Tuesday morning broke forth in a gloomy manner but Old Sol finally put in an appearance, chased away the gloom and a good breeze from the southwest made it a capital day for sailing. The morning trains over the Chicago & West Michigan brought large crowds and the steamer Frisant appeared from Petoskey with a good sized delegation. All along the Charlevoix row of cottages the green and white ribbons were displayed with stars and stripes and Japanese lanterns. White's famous military band from Kalamazoo arrived and began discoursing excellent music. The crowds congregated about the Belvedere while many stood on the shore of the lake and others piled the stairs in row boats. The entries by this time in the different races and became unusually large and by 10:30 all was in readiness for the opening event of the regatta.

CLASS 5—SAILING BARGE.

The entries and numbers of boats in this race were as follows.

1. Pequot, F. W. Wilkins, Kalamazoo.
2. Pelican, F. B. Hines, Charlevoix.
3. Alvina Jr., Capt. G. F. Morrison Jr., Harbor Springs.
4. Wenjus, Capt. Chas. H. Briggs, Waynesboro.
5. Jessie Gage II, Capt. Charles Gale, Charlevoix.
6. Atlantic, L. H. Peck, Charlevoix.
7. Hattie, Capt. John F. Hier Jr., Harbor Springs.
8. Nimoshin, A. Healy, Charlevoix.
9. No. 1, Jos. Boss, sen. Charlevoix.
10. Punchbowl, F. W. Hatchford, Charlevoix.

The preparatory gun was fired from a crew in Pine Lake just in front of the Belvedere, and ten open sail boats appeared for the first sailing race, of the class 5 order, having a water line of from 14 to 18 feet. There were eleven entries, but ten only appeared. Ten minutes later the starting gun was fired and the "white sails" passed over the line almost in a bunch. A prettier start has rarely been seen. The course was seven miles. A good south west wind carried them to the first buoy off four mile point and they rounded in the following order 8-10-1-4-2-7-9-6-5-0. Between the first and second buoys 2 fell out. At the second buoy off Oyster Bay the positions were greatly changed as follows: 7-8-9-10-4-1-3-2-6. At this point however, the race became an uneven one, by mistake, a second buoy was mistaken for the right one by eight of the boats and all were consequently put about a mile behind. The Pelican ran the right buoy and came in fair rigged the winner of the race at just 12:37½, her time being one hour 44½ minutes, having started at 10:53. She was followed by the Wenjus, taking second in one hour and 56 minutes. The Pequot took third prize in two hours and one-half minutes, she started at 10:55½ and finished at 12:34. The Punchbowl came in fourth in two hours and 12 minutes. The other boats finished from 2 hours and 5 minutes to 12 minutes. The prizes are: 1st, aneroid barometer; 2d, marine glasses; 3d, barometer and case; 4th, U. S. standard barometer.

The Pelican which won the race was formerly owned by Henry Malotte and was the first boat to win a prize in the regattas held at Charlevoix.

Considerable dissatisfaction is felt over the second buoy which deceived eight of the boats. Said F. W. Wilkins of the Pequot to the SENTINEL: "The Pequot clearly proved herself the best boat and would have won but for the second buoy. I have entered my protest and hope another one will be ordered."

MR. C. C. Dudley of Maquoketa, Iowa, also of the Pequot, stated that they would have won but for the second buoy which threw them a mile adrift.

The Petrel lost two minutes at the finish, by crossing the line from the south, when a finish was necessary from the north. This mistake was generally made and the boats were informed to cross from the north by the judges on the Frisant.

SINGLE SHELL RACE.

The entries in this race, which was a walk-away for Dagwell, of Mackinaw City, were well and distinctly at the last regatta, was as follows:

Frank Whitman, Catlin Boat Club.
Charles Dagwell, Mackinaw City.
W. A. Warner, Detroit Boat Club.

The course was one Pine Lake, 1 mile and return, making 1½ miles. At the start Dagwell took a large lead and clearly showed himself the superior oarsman, making 38 strokes to the minute. Warner pulled harder than Dagwell but took only 35 strokes to the minute. Whitman did not seem to be in good form although he made a creditable spurt towards the finish. In this position they finished, Dagwell's time being 13 minutes according to the official time keepers. Warner finished in 14½ minutes and Whitman in 15 minutes.

Three well posted gentlemen kept a time-watch on this race and give it as follows, and believe that it is correct. Starting at 11:25½ the following time is for the turn and finish:

	Turn.	Finish.	Time.
Dagwell,	11:32.	11:37½	12 ½
Warner,	11:32½	11:46	13½
Whitman,	11:32½	11:40½	15½

Dagwell was in fine form and came slowly in. Could he have been pushed a record of less than 12 minutes would have been made. The prize for the winner, Mr. Dagwell, is a gold medal.

CANOE RACE—SINGLE.

This race was a mile straight away and was participated in by.

Joseph Boisvert, Jr., Charlevoix.
Frank Boisvert, Detroit Boat Club.
A. Gaudette.
J. Dentier.
J. Boisvert.
F. Boisvert.
F. Cadieux.
Joseph Cadieux.
James Boisvert, Canoe Boat Club.

H. T. Trach, Stanley McGraw and W. Healy of the Detroit Boat Club and William McDonald of the Catlin Boat Club, were entered but failed to appear. The race was a close and exciting one and was won as follows: 1st, C. Cadieux, time 8m 36; 2d, Joseph Boisvert, Jr., 8m 41; 3d, Joseph Boisvert, Sr., 8m 45. The others finished in 6m 6 and 7 seconds. The prize was a handsome pair of black leather opera glasses.

TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

LACK OF WIND PREVENTS THE CLASS 4 SAILING RACE.—OTHER EVENTS.

At 1:30, when the class 4 sailing race was called on Pine Lake, the wind had died away and it became necessary to postpone the same. The crowds then surged to the shore of the lake and the other events took place.

DOUBLE SHELL RACE.

The distance was 1 mile and return. Three entered were Frank Whitman & F. Jenkins, Catlin Boat Club.

Charles Dagwell & Jos. Boisvert, Detroit Boat Club.
W. A. Warner & John A. Parsons, Detroit Boat Club.

The start was evenly made at 2:50 and a pretty race ensued although the victors held the lead easily. Whitman and Jenkins crossed the line first at 2:59½, making the time 9m 5s. Warner and Peacock took second prize in 9m 15s. Stevenson and Hilch came in third in 9m 20s. They claimed a foul from Warner and Peacock and the protest was entered. The prize consisted of two gold medals.

ROWING RACE—YOUNG MEN'S DOUBLE.

The entries were as follows:

Harry Melching & Oscar Miller, Harbor Springs.
Jos. Boisvert & Joseph Boisvert, Jr., Charlevoix.
Frank Whitman & Lafayette Whitman, Chas. Bassett James Gillespie & Jos. Boisvert, Catlin Boat Club.
James Stevenson & Wm. Hilch.

The course was 1 mile straight away. Messrs Melching and Miller won the race in 3m 32½. Harry Clayton was the coxswain. Prize, two silver match safes.

SWIMMING RACE—MEN.

The distance was 100 yards, for men over 21. The following were the entries:

James Stevenson, Catlin Boat Club.
James Boisvert, Catlin Boat Club.
J. Boisvert, Detroit Boat Club.
C. H. Bond.
J. Vaughn.
J. Boisvert.
J. F. Hellman.
J. F. Dentier.
Joseph Boisvert.

Hellman won the race after a good struggle, with Stevenson second. The prize was a silver cup.

DIVING RACE—BOYS' DOUBLE.

The course was ¼ of a mile straight away and the entries were.

George Boisvert & George S. Smith, Charlevoix.
Oscar Miller & Hubert Kenyon, Charlevoix Resort.
Benjamin Smith and Smith Wm. Harry Clayton acted as coxswain. Prize, two imported pocket knives.

CANOE RACE—TANDEM.

The course was changed from ¼ mile straight away to ½ mile straight away. The entries were.

Joseph Boisvert, Jr. & F. Boisvert, Catlin Boat Club.
J. Mylkman & C. Gaudet, Detroit Boat Club.
J. Boisvert & Jos. Dentier.
A. Vaughn & F. Dentier.
Frank Cadieux & Jos. Cadieux.
J. Brown & W. Healy.
Joe Boisvert & Chas. Dagwell, Charlevoix.

Beauvais and Dagwell won the race easily in 5m 4s, followed by Gould and Isham in 5m 15s. The other canoes averaged 5m 25s. One prize, two pearl opera glasses. Beauvais and Dagwell may be called out as protests were entered that they were professionals.

TUB RACE.

The following were the entries:

George Boisvert, Charlevoix.
Frank Boisvert.
Frank Cadieux, Chicago.
Joseph Boisvert, Charlevoix.
Walter Boisvert.
Willie Wilson.

Considerable sport and amusement resulted from this race and the boys worked like Trojans for the prizes. The winners were, 1st, Frank Catlin; 2d, Arthur Scrimgeot; 3d, Walter Beauvais; 4th, Willey Miller. Prizes, 1st handsome brass lantern; 2d, large foot ball; 3d, a tub; 4th, a tub. The timekeepers were unable to keep the chronometer's hand swinging.

EVENING CONCERT.

White's military band from Kalamazoo, one of the crack organizations of the state, appeared upon a brilliantly illuminated scow on Round Lake and discoursed excellent music. The effect upon the lake of the lights reflected in the waters was startling to those on the land. The strains reached the hearers and for applause the clouds sent down a terrific roll of kettle-drums, with occasional cornet flashes all followed by a potpourri of old-time melodies which was made the delight of the Belvedere and in the melee which followed, W. S. White, a sixfoot-four and prominent member of the band, took a plunge bath. He arose in several minutes and was rescued. As a result of the hurrying to land, one of the cymbals is now ringing to the tune of the "mermaids in the sea," as their tails flop against the brass musical instrument. Fred Davis, another member of the band also took a plunge. At the Belvedere a number of selections were admirably rendered. A beautiful sign to behold just before the rain, was the illumination of Charlevoix resort. Nearly every cottage and the Belvedere were adorned with Japanese lanterns and everything was in a gorgeous state generally.

In the parlor of the Belvedere the regatta committee discussed pro and con the protests entered. The protest made by F. W. Wilcox in the class 5 race, pertaining to the second and false buoy, showed that eight boats passed a mile out of their way was not accepted and no change made. A new race was also asked for, but refused. To many, this decision seems an injustice. In the tandem canoe race the protest was left open for future action. In the double shell race the protest made of a foul from the Detroit team by the Catlin team was not allowed. It was evident twice that a foul took place in the race, and had there been a second prize the Catlin team would have insisted upon a different decision.

With such fine sailing and good prospects for Wednesday the first day of the regatta ceased.

WEDNESDAY RACES.

THE GREAT CLASS 1 SAILING RACE ON LAKE MICHIGAN.—LADIES TAKE A HAND.

The second day of the regatta opened rainy and with a dismal outlook for good sailing. Despite the inclemency of the weather, a large crowd of visitors arrived from the various resorts and by 10 o'clock, the rain had ceased and a good breeze was on deck. The first event of the day was the

CLASS 1 SAILING RACE.

Entered in class 1 were the following boats with their numbers:

1. Perlin, Capt. J. McNerty, Chicago.
2. Spindler, Capt. T. E. Hutchinson, Chicago.
3. Sea Joan, Commodore Dodd-Cox, Chicago.
4. Pelican, F. B. Hines, Charlevoix.
5. Pequot, F. W. Wilkins, Kalamazoo.
6. Marion, Capt. E. M. Pfeffer, Charlevoix.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lulu Jamison

CHAPTER IX.

—Continued.

The weeks passed, and Brian was still alive to the anxious fellow-fishermen, the claims of his aunt in Nantucket were sufficiently pressing, a letter written from after his coming to Scamoor having satisfied his sense of obligations.

Evidently it seemed had developed new charms for him during the day he had found its dullness so oppressive that sleep seemed the only reasonable and possible occupation.

And Margaret, having awakened him to a new view of the place, was practically matching that conversation hinge on she had—once repudiated so strongly.

She did not mention it, however, nor did she regular him. She did not seek his company, nor did she show by the slightest action that it was distasteful to him.

Her attitude was one of uncertain expectancy.

She spent many hours with him on the beach, she walked with him in the delightful spring weather, gathering health and spirits from the air and sun and invigorating air.

She had taken him through many of the cottages, and her enthusiasm had awakened his dormant interest. She had shown him the way to the light house, and together they had obtained the great winding stairway, gained the presidency upon the wonderful lamp and looked down from the great bright upon the wonderful world of water, the checkered map before them, upon the hills lying in the mist of distance, and the glorious breath of restless waters surging over the rays and dashing themselves in spray at the feet of the bluff. She had pointed out the silvery waters of Scamoor, and the as a jewel in the mountain's breast, and only separated from the sea by a narrow band of sand hills. And afterward they had climbed to the top of Tom Nevers, a verdant bluff standing lobbly out against the western sky, and sat there watching the waters foaming at its feet.

On this last promontory they had watched the sun quench its fires in the sea and let the twilight fights across the hills. And through the lingering beauty of twilight—from the last rose hues along the lonely and deserted beach.

The hours of such companionship could not be forgotten.

Too late Brian realized this. In all the time they had been together he had tried in vain to fathom Margaret's feelings for him, but the mystery still as a psychologic add had failed in her case.

He struck of Margaret's behavior—a sprite, and very ready sympathy made her a charming and refreshing contrast to the conventional women he had hitherto met, but they did not constitute the sole reason why he was so sorry to go away.

I never let me not about leaving a place before, he said to her one day. I'm sorry to leave Scamoor, for the present circumstances.

I could stay here forever, was his earnest and impulsive reply.

But at last the day came when she felt she must leave. She had written to Miss Hilton of her intention, and with the feeling that she must make the most of her last hours, she had gone down to the beach, where the fishermen were just bringing in the day's harvest. She was standing by the dories, as' bilge the huge fish with a mixture of fascination and disgust, when Brian joined her in his usual unceremonious fashion.

"I seem to be an age since I saw you last," he said, after the first greetings. "In fact I feel as if I'd been with her the day before. Shall we take a walk? The tide will be out in an hour."

She nodded in the affirmative, and they moved away together.

"Why don't you say something?" he asked, after the silence had lasted some minutes.

"I don't feel in a talking humor," she answered, conscious of a disagreeable desire to quarrel with some person or thing.

"I think you might try, I have the blues frightfully. I wish you'd cheer me up."

Try one of your own prescriptions, she suggested. "The best way to get out of sad sensations, they tell us. You'll have an opportunity to exercise the virtues you are bragged around so long. Just see those people coming in on the break-ers. Aren't they graceful? I wish I were a fisherman."

"What an idea. How could you manage fishing?"

"How? Why, as they do, of course. Why, the sight of the sea over before me, the music of the breakers always in my ears, the close and constant companion with the very spirituality of nature. How can they help lives to shine hopeless or miserlessness? Though, to a person of more complex temperament, I dare say, they would be tiresome."

"I have a notion you intend that for sarcasm," he returned, good-naturedly "Here am I troubled—"

"No way, at-ease; I am not to be taken just now.

"There, you stung me, sir. You have been so stiffish all through these times you are all sweetness, and as soon as you fly at us and better me more numerically. Still I like to be with you."

"Much obliged, I'm sure; but I didn't come here to amuse you.

"Evidently in a bad humor," thought Brian, noting the snapping.

"I believe you've missed your vocation, I'm sad aloud. You were intended for one of the Junius schools, an area of real acidity. Now, you would have saved the unfortunate little chaps. And your husband, poor man—"

"Pray spare your pity. Such misfortune objects of pity I do not feel. I'm sorry real living and, with good reason, I'm sorry for myself. Oh, I'm sorry I ever let you persuade me of these cry-question people who run around collecting subscriptions. Can for the benefit of the hundreds of poor Christians are starving around them. I don't like such distributions of charity."

"Well, I haven't been collecting any subscriptions, and I'm a mighty poor Christian in the bargain, so you couldn't blind me with that—and you are digging up so fortunately."

Margaret, colored and desisted from her occupation.

"I beg your pardon," she said. "I did not intend to vent it in your direction. it is a vent for my overcharged feelings. I suppose that is a disliked sensationalist, but, as I shall a-dread it. I read of a piece of injustice this morning, and he has filled me with indignation. I believe I'm in a constant state of rebellion against the accepted order of things. Why do you laugh?"

"Not at you, certainly. Seriously, I am half afraid of you—your bad opinion, I mean. What in heaven you could exert over some men. Do you like me, Margaret?"

"The degree of my liking depends upon yourself."

Brian was evidently not well satisfied with this frank admission.

"You couldn't like me well enough to be my wife? he pursued, drawing closer to her and endeavoring to take her hand; at action she resolutely opposed.

"Do you mean what you say?" she said, in a slightly repressed voice, conscious of something waiting in his manner.

He hesitated at her words.

Do I mean that I love you? Yes, Margaret, I do, from the first moment I saw you. If I could only make you understand my position, my longing to win your love and make you my wife, perhaps—

His pause was eloquent.

"But what? she pursued, in a quick, changed voice.

"Why, how you look at me, Margaret!

At this complaint she turned her face aside and allowed her eyes to follow the motion of a bird.

Brian watched her, moved, more at ease in the absence of those searching gray eyes "marriage bets on is in quite out of the question. If you were—"

"I wish you would suppose, he was make, she interrupted, in a somewhat hard tone, "and submitting the rest, what then?"

"You must see how it is; we couldn't live on two thousand a year."

"We could manage," she supplemented. "It seems to me you might be much worse off. Are you with so uncordial turn—"

I love people with an e-emotional turn, and I don't intend to work myself to death for people who don't care a bit of real people. My first year's allowance was much more than you make in a year, must have money. A gentleman is obliged to live in a certain style."

Oh, I dare say, even if he sacrificed his wife to his ideas of what he must have for his money better. Have married the same object.

He glanced at her cold, impenetrable face.

How hard you are, Margaret," he said, reproachfully. "You used to be stated the different. Love in a cottage was a very pretty idea, and I dare say we could manage quite happily on a happy cottage and economizing. I am sorry I ever let you persuade me to go away from Scamoor, I feel I may have a chance. Margaret, I love you with a love that I believe I have not in my nature. I should be nothing better than to marry you."

"Thanks," was the quiet response. "Your assurance is quite consoling, but I don't believe I would accept you, because you would rather upset me. If I found fault with my generation people who run around collecting subscriptions for the benefit of the hundreds of poor Christians are starving around them, I don't like such distributions of charity."

"Well, I haven't been collecting any subscriptions, and I'm a mighty poor Christian in the bargain, so you couldn't blind me with that—and you are digging up so fortunately."

Margaret colored and desisted from her occupation.

"I beg you pardon," she said. "I did not intend to vent it in your direction. it is a vent for my overcharged feelings. I suppose that is a disliked sensationalist, but, as I shall a-dread it. I read of a piece of injustice this morning, and he has filled me with indignation. I believe I'm in a constant state of rebellion

GROVER AS A VETOIST.

HERE'S A LIST OF BILLS HE DISAPPROVED.

Cleveland and the Soldiers.

The pension veto of Grover Cleveland are rising up like Banquo's ghost to condemn him. The failure to put a soldier on the Democratic ticket at the Chicago convention, is now one of the condiment weaknesses of the ticket, and the Democratic statesmen of the capital are hard in their opinion against this insanity. This, too, with the Vopper-head brigadiers of the most almost title of "general" carried him through the thickest of the War Freedom fal contest, has already weakened and sapped the strength of Mr. Cleveland. The pathway of Cleveland during four years is strewn with pension vetoes. It looks like one on both sides of the pathway without ton. Mr. Cleveland rock through be blocked and related hopes of broken down voter on and send footlies to poor-houses. The enmity of the Democracy to the soldier is no one thing. It is a living, vital issue today. The fact that New York Democratic Legislature passed a bill last winter to give to the soldiers before the war they had paid for the soldiers had made the Democrats ashamed of the action of the Democratic party. Under the law, Cleveland vetoed—the money he paid for Britain's services to him as his substitute, which is paid back by the taxpayers of New York. The soldiers helped to defeat Grover Cleveland twice. They will again—at him in 1892. Their sons, with the memory of the insults heaped up in them

Cold Harbor's Flesh.

I visited that cold, red field,
Where, years ago, I fought and bled
Together side by side we stood,
Where fierce the battle raged and rolled Down in the cruel trenches that cross
Cold Harbor's ghastly, frowning face.

Nature's work I saw there still
Nature's work I saw there still Nature's work I saw there still
The sighing pines, the whispering wind
Sweet, as of old, they blood would blow,
Sweet, as of old, they would blow.
The chirping, the chirping, the chirping birds
That gladdened us and the
But neither the hearts nor souls that day
Were sweet as of old.
The old brown cross are roughly built
Of rough, hewn timber
The dead lay thick in view
Thus thus has suffered
Nature's handiwork has changed
Cold Harbor's flesh greeted us
A ghastly, ghastly smile
Nature's work I saw there
No marble slab can there be seen
Nature's work I saw there
The long gray lines of Lee
Stood in the trenches
Were standing there to stay
They could not and to glory shared
Cold Harbor's flesh.

The old church standing near the grove
Of dreary pines stands
Whether blow could give to man
Cold Harbor's flesh
Nature's work I saw there
Cold Harbor's flesh greeted us
Nature's work I saw there
Cold Harbor's flesh.

OLD FOLKS AT HOME.

Dunn's motions are at times unfeeling, a fact illustrated by the pitiful story told to the author of "A Widow Woman's Tears" by Mr. Dunn, who is an e-mbidiscence of life nursery days.

One morning he and his sister were watching from the window a kaleidoscope at work on the opposite side of the street. The father, who was nearly blind and had spent his life hoeing cane and stand between them. Presently the kaleidoscope, being carried off the job, cut off his seat and was properly in the gutter.

The father, who had mistaken the noise for a gunshot, jumped up and ran across a few paces, saying: "Ask him to be quiet, I can't hear anything."

The boy laughed, but his sister's conscience pricked him, and he began to sob with that tact which nature has lavished on the sex, and, with the aid of some of the money from the cripple's hand, ran across to the kaleidoscope, and, with the aid of her purse persuaded him to stop and disarm the offender.

But he did, recounting his mother's story perhaps a little too much, and consoling the poor man, the fellow, apparently in high spirits, ran back to his father by himself, mimicking his and went his way.

The poor man, meanwhile, had been sitting on the curb, and, when the boy came back, he was gently crying.

TERRORS OF THE OCEAN.

Monsters With Which the Sea Was Peopled by the Mariners of Old.

Some relics of antiquity are so curiously interesting as the charts engraved by ancient mariners, which have perhaps upon them some so many extraordinary monsters, terrible dragons and terrible giants scattered here and there. The land-lubber Mediterranean, which was formerly sea known to the Romans and Greeks of Grandi and centuries ago was filled with mysterious terrors, while the more distant lands lurking on it, were the abodes of wonders and strange peoples, dofs of monsters, shapes rose from the waters, churning storm dwelt on the islets and rocks and in the deep lay hidden were to be found actual centaurs, Sirens, Hydras, Cyclops, and the most wonderful creatures.

Adventurers, who got as far as the pillars of Hercules now rifle the Straits of Gibraltar, brought back intelligence that there was no such land. Not that it was unreliable. It was just offhand, and it was the sailors around the flat earth in an amusing way.

Tradition says that there was in those times an island in the sea, far 100 miles high, with a sea-side resort on the top. Tradition says that this island was the limit of navigation, beyond was "sea of darkness." Indeed, it was little more beyond the power of the imagination to conceive. Tradition says that the sailors, in their tiredness, venture outside into the darkness, and, in the darkness, were back very quickly. A whirlwind would come and blow the sailors from the vessel, or, more alarming still, a gigantic hand, supposed to be that of Atlas, would reach down and take out of eternal gloom and warm back the sailors, who, in the darkness, while the sailors were the most impracticable, and unfashionable.

Tradition says that there were in those times, in the darkness, dwelt with serpents and other reptiles, and in the darkness, dwelt with serpents and other reptiles, and in the darkness, dwelt with serpents and other reptiles.

An American Achievement.

Chicago is a marvelous for energy, enterprise and success, but most people would say her fame with success in the commercial and stately lines rather than the literary. It is all the surprise many to learn that Chicago has produced a book that is a strenuous Christian life, Rev. Wm. Ward Ellis, of Chicago, is the author of the striking work. Upon A Study, whose fascination is heightened after Dallas Park, produces a nearly none analytical instrument. Dr. Ellis, the Dallas Park, 100,000 instruments of all kinds, and has 100,000 visitors a year. Four years ago study finished the Dallas Park, then age, now lasted to the utmost to accomplish, about making any of some hundred million mechanics. The business men of Chicago, and the author United States, and across the seas United States, Canada, Mexico, Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, Japan, Sandwich Islands. They success has been, was by years of extraordinary combination of circumstances in the hands of the mental public, and the author, the American people, author, and by any other instrument is problematical. Dallas Park is the most which of foreign manufacture.

It is a real pleasure to an American Journalist to have a book like this, and, perhaps, while we are justly proud of our power, we are not ashamed of our weakness. Our ability, liberalism, it is something, some to be ashamed of, and, perhaps, we have not made the most of our opportunities, but stand as practically forward in these as in other lines. The American Journal very stock of modern instruments, and, perhaps, it is the author, the American people, author, and by any other instrument, Chicago, "Antiquarian." Dallas Park free upon application.

BUNCO-STEERER BAMBOOZLED

All Not Green That Looks Sea-Sy Never Too Late to Learn.

A rather green-looking young fellow endeared into a barroom uptown the other evening and leaned around the walls and up at the ceiling and at the ornamental behind the bar in a way that betokened a stranger seeing the sights of the metropolis. He sat down at one of the tables and he entered a drink, which he sipped in a lonely way.

A keen-eyed, quietly dressed, elderly man had followed the stranger in and now he sat down at the other side of the table. He too ordered a drink, but seem to take no notice whatever of his neighbor. As he sat down his glance, however, he seemed knowing and leaned over and said in a confidential way:

"Ain't you change a quarter?"

"I can get it changed mighty quick," was the prompt reply. "What price do you want?"

"Half," said the gentleman, "this," he added hesitatingly, "how do I know you will bring back the change?"

"Oh, don't know it," replied the little fellow, slightly pettish.

"Then I must trust to your honesty."

"That's about the size of it. Or—I'll tell you what I'll do—I'll give Thomas's thirty-four papers in this bunch. Keith on to you?"

Before the gentleman could remonstrate, the lor had placed the bunch of papers in his one and took out of his pocket a handful of change and handed it to the gentleman.

"Now, I'll give you a receipt for it, I don't want to have anything more to say about it."

Mr. Wilson looked the green young man over a moment, and said, "I ain't saw nothing but innocent honesty, but, one vest, I'm sorry I ever I strewed straightest behind. Hold out one for a moment's pay time. First is the last I saw of him. Perhaps he is coming back."

"But would they have hanged anything?"

"From my knowledge of national usages," said the contractor, "I have a strong idea that the chance of the playing his hosts displayed a wisdom to save so its objectionable Mongols."

The Secret of Good Memory.

Prof. Burnham says very pertinently that the secret of good memory is good health, and that all the tricks of the mnemonic doctors are practically useless. Good health this observation is generally true, yet there have been some curious exceptions to it. Macintosh, the Indian historian, was blind, and yet he had a shelf of any book in the libraries of Europe, was a sad spectacle of a physiology. Well he might have been, for his determined only hard-boiled eggs and water. But at least he lived before the days of the memory doctors, and did those ancient Greek commanders of whom history says that they knew the name of every man in their armies, and so did also the natural scholars who could recite a Greek play or two without book. For some reason the Democratic press is not saying so much about "the billion dollar congress" as it was a few months ago. Why this retirement?

The extra session of the squaw-buck legislature, costing nearly $4,000 a day, will have nothing to do with the Miner electoral bill and congressional gerrymander. A future Republican legislature will have to rectify those gross frauds.

Some of the super-sensitive Democratic organs think that their party is committed to the English policy of free trade, and say that it is highly essential difference between twoedle-dum and tweedle-dee no more, no less.

Democratic stupidity and Democratic partisanship have obliged the governor to call an extra session of the legislature to make a new apportionment of senatorial and legislative districts because the squaw-buck apportionment was so grossly unfair to the Republicans. This extra session will cost taxpayers in round numbers $1,000 a day. Charge it up to the Democratic party and bear it in mind until after Nov. 8.

From the headquarters of the New York State Republican Committee comes the report that President Harrison is stronger in business and financial circles than he was four years ago. The merchants and the bankers have organized their clubs for the campaign, and the membership in each case exceeds that of the campaign club of 1888. It is somewhat unusual to see men of wealth attending meetings and shouting for candidates in the middle of the summer, but that is what big New Yorkers are doing. It is expected that not less than 35,000 Republicans will be in the parade of the down-town clubs this fall. Every trade will have its club, from the shippers down near the battery to the dry goods clerk up town. A well-known merchant said yesterday that as the Democrats propose to adopt a free trade policy if they could succeed in electing Cleveland, the business men of the city were going to show by their activity in the campaign that the interests that have made New York great and prosperous were opposed to such a policy. "I think," he said, "that the merchants will satisfy the people at large that the protective tariff party is the one to support.

Geo. Bidwell, Prohibition candidate for vice-President, was one of the original California pioneers, and tradition has it that they were not exactly teetotalers, declares the Boston Journal. Bidwell had a vine yard in Butte county. He raised grapes there, and they were wine grapes. He had a winery and distillery house, and for 20 years the individual who now leads the Prohibition ticket was next to the largest wine and brandy producer in California. It was in this business that he accumulated the millions which will go to lubricate the wheels of the Prohibition machine this summer.

For the first time probably in all its history, the Third Party now has a reformed distiller at its head. For Gen. Bidwell did reform. He reformed to please his wife, and he now sells the products of his 300 acre vineyard in the open market, instead of converting them into spirituous fluids on his own premises for what becomes of his grapes in other hands he does not consider that he is responsible. It is an inspiring or chilling reflection, according as you look at it, that a big fortune gained in the wine and brandy trade is going to be used to pay the rent of Prohibition orators and Prohibition torchbearers during the campaign. Some people will like the notion. Other people won't.

Here's Richness for You.

A traveling correspondent of the Grand Rapids Democrat writes up Charlevoix in a recent issue of that paper, and speaks as follows concerning our political status:

"The Republicans are fast losing their hold on Charlevoix. Their majority is year by year decreasing in both the township and the county. There are some good Democratic fighters there, and though working against big odds, and are fast gaining ground. Among those is Ira G. W. Crouter. He is active, energetic and is a freehand in the Republican camp when he gets a move on himself. Mr. Crouter is a dentist and the Summer Girl had good evidence of his being a well-known and popular man in his town."

We say here's richness for you. What are the facts? We append the figures, giving Republican majorities: 1882, 196; 1884, Alger, 136; 1886, Luce, 214; 1888, Luce, 238, Cutcheon, 309; 1890, Turner, 160, Cutcheon, 230. No argument is necessary in making the statement that the vote on congressman is a better index of political sentiment, than that of governor. It does not look as if Republicans were losing number in Charlevoix county, notwithstanding the augacious Democratic leadership.

Northern Michigan News.

Prof. M. O. Graves, of Petoskey, received the nomination for superintendent of public instruction on the People party ticket which was placed in nomination at Jackson this week.

Thomas B. Literson, superintendent of the government works at South Manitou, including the light house, life saving station and fog signal, died of typhoid pneumonia Saturday morning, July 23, at Glen Haven, where he had gone for treatment.

It is said that a pair of calves have been seen in Hayes township. If so the man or boy who kills them ought threashes to be shot. If quail are coming in, and they can be thoroughly protected for three or four years, they will multiply so as to be game in the season.

Judge Hamsdell places the fruit crop of Grand Traverse, at 5,000 bushels of peaches, 3,000 bushels of plums, 5,000 bushels of pears, and from 20,000 to 30,000 barrels of apples. He estimates his own crop of peaches at 3,000 bushels, plums 500 bushels, pears 300 bushels and 500 barrels of apples.

Petoskey Democrat: The freight business on the C. & W. M. is picking up right along, and we are doing our share of the work," said one of the agents to us yesterday. "We are bringing two car loads of beef a week to one of our butchers, and are handling shipments of other goods for the other houses. Business seems to be getting better.

Near Lake Orion Citizen: It has been known for years past that beneath the soil of Melrose township there lay hidden treasure and moneyed men are now prospecting on section 26. They have sunk a drift 85 feet into the earth and found a vein of fire clay 55 feet thick with only five feet of soil on top. Beneath the clay is the finest of stone coal, superior iron in large quantities and plenty of copper ore. A Grand Rapids man has commenced preparations to start a brick yard there. The valuation is estimated at $15,000. The G. R. & I. railroad will run a spur to the yard for freighting purposes.

Speaking of the hardwood resources of Northern Michigan of which a good deal has been said lately, and which have only come into prominence in recent years, a gentleman well posted said the other day: "The reign of King Pine in Michigan is on the wane, but the man does not breathe now who will see the time when the lumber industry will not be a great and prosperous business in Michigan, for when the Pine is gone, then the other woods will go to market, and they will enrich the people far more than pine has done, though their utilization will not create so many millionaires. In fact, the hardwood lands of Michigan are today the bonanzas of the future to the investor, large or small, as well as the settler and the poor man seeking a home, to whom these hardwood acres are what a father is to a child whom he supports and lets him have all he makes, for while he is carving out a home the land will give him a good living, and if he is wise, when he gets the farm cleared he is comparatively rich, over and above his farm, the finest land the Almighty ever left out-doors, in a climate that is nature's own sanitarium, and his hardwood which he has been able to sell at a good profit has made him so." It is a great pity that this idea had not obtained before thousands of acres of the finest hardwood timber in the country was ruthlessly sacrificed to the flames.—Chicago North Western Lumberman.

The Indian campmeeting will be held this year on the old camp ground, where it was held two years ago. Commencing Aug. 23.

The C. & W. M. railroad have filled 27 head of cattle on the north-ern extension thus far, and it keeps Mr. Grover busy skinning them.

Mrs. Hasten, of Albion, is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Blanchard. Also with Mrs. Blanchard, Mrs. Murdock and Miss Hippler of Chicago.

Chas. Kirkland is the most active business man in the south section, and his son Frank takes charge of the water tank pump. Both are from Grand Ledge.

The Odd Fellows' picnic at Alden last week, says the Bellaire Review, was rather a dull affair. The next annual picnic will be held in Charlevoix the last Thursday in August.

The daily Reporter advised people who come to Charlevoix during the regatta to bring their entables with them. It is very pleasant to contemplate the Charlevoix "boums" of the Daily Reporter.

Independent of the regatta crowd Charlevoix is full to overflowing. This week the town is stopping over with its influx of humanity. All hotels are full, summer boarding houses are in good demand, private cottages are as thick as fleas at East Jordan, and about every train and boat brings more.

A change in the running schedule of the Traverse Bay line of boats has been made. The Columbia will, beginning July 30, leave Traverse City going north at 7.00 a.m. on Thursday and Saturday, and returning will arrive here on Monday, Wednesday and Friday. The Cummings will alternate, leaving here on Monday, Wednesday and Friday, returning on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

Printers will no longer be compelled to compete with the government in the stamped and printed envelope business. A bill making it unlawful for the government to furnish envelopes of this description has passed Congress, and the business therefore will be discontinued. It was a scheme that took hundreds of thousands of dollars out of the pockets of the printers of the land, and should have been repealed long ago.

The "Summer Girl" a traveling correspondent of the Grand Rapids Democrat, writes the following about our big begonia farm: "The Summer Girl was treated to a drive about the town and the surrounding country, and noticed that the farms were in a most prosperous condition. In the town itself, however, she found the most delightful farm of all. It was F. J. Meech & Son's begonia farm. Flower garden or not house does not express it; it is far too extensive. Of course, there are hot houses, long lines of them, and the Summer Girl traveled through long lanyfloths and pathways, at the end only to turn into others at right, or left angles and go on again until there seemed to be no final stopping place. Such a walk could not be tedious under the circumstances. On either hand were beds upon beds of begonias, nothing but begonias. There were red begonias, scarlet begonias, pink begonias, white begonias, begonias of all possible shades and colors mingled together in a ravishing array of loveliness. There is nothing there to be seen but begonias, but all the various species known, are there exhibited, and the whole forms one of the main attractions of the town, a sight to be remembered for many a day.

Common Council.

At the council meeting on Friday night the clerk was instructed to ascertain if the township would be the joint purchaser with the village of a road roller.

The sum of $30 was appropriated for the township road along Pine Lake south of the railroad.

A contract was made with Washburn & Ackert to supply their machine shop steam power from the water works plant for a term of five years, for $50 the first year and $60 the succeeding year, terms thereafter to be hereafter determined.

Mrs. Schneermann, of Grand Rapids, visited her son, H. H. Schneermann, a few days this week.

WHY DOES THIS BOY RUN?

He is Late for School.
The old clock stopped and he didn't have a watch. He has been late before and will probably be suspended, and may grow up in ignorance the rest of his life. This might have been avoided if his parents had purchased one of Bellinger's clocks. He will give you your choice for $5.00.

He is also selling a first class watch a perfect time keeper, in nickle-silver cases for $8.00. Just received an elegant new stock of JEWELRY and SILVERWARE.

OH, WHAT A DIFFERENCE IN MONTANA!

Michigan State Legislature Appointment Committee Not Showed at Torpedo School of Tidings, but the Fact Swallowed—Thirty Arrest Our Countrymen.

At Washington.

The vote by which $1,000,000 was appropriated by the house for the relief of sufferers by the recent earthquakes in Southern Italy and Sicily, and Mississippi, Mr. Bailey said he was glad the Nation was able thus easily to have a little money to give away, but, he said, he thought it is freely stated, is but a small sum when compared with the amount of the appropriation to defeat it and was made by Mr. Hepburn.

Thirty-eight Blue in Cantonment.

At New York the mercury on Tuesday afternoon was 20 degrees. This was reported but one morning before in years. Tuesday, when a maximum 72 degrees was claimed, hundreds suffering in rags and boast sun-cured. There was a cold wave in the city the morning, as on Wednesday, to temperatures ranging from 10 to 20 degrees, but there is a long list of aged unemployed and large families in the charitable offices of the numerous societies of New which are and in the charitable institutions. The deaths number 35, of over 50 in number, and in Philadelphia experienced no relief, but at Chicago the death list fell from 40 Wednesday to 21 Thursday, while on Friday Cincinnati, the lowest of the temperatures had fallen to 40 degrees, and all dangers passed.

Six More Drowned.

At Tonopah, Nev., a terrible disaster occurred in Copper Pan Wednesday evening during a violent thunder and wind storm. Six men were in a large sulfuric was seen on the bay, and when it cleared it was seen to have burned, and rescue parties at once put out in the Hope Jennie to have proceed to the boat, six of whom, one man and four women, were drowned. The bodies of the bodies were removed with difficulty.

Below the Freezing Point.

Tuesday was a killing frost in Montana, Wednesday night and the cold wave swept on east. At Havre, and Fort Assiniboine, the mercury went down to 10 degrees. The cold was general over Montana. At Helena, Mr. Wednesday morning was 16 degrees, at Hastings, Neb., one inch of rain fell, and at Omaha, which for the consecutive days ranged from 80 to 100 degrees, dropped 40 degrees.

Street-Car Men Charged with Fraud.

At Portland Ore., forty conductors on the Metropolitan and Multnomah Electric street-car lines were arrested for blackmailing them. J. H. Mackie, President of both companies, said: "We have known for a long time that we were being robbed right and left by conductors, but we never thought we could succeed in collect evidence against those responsible, and we had we have been losing an average of $4,000 a month."

The Telephone Grips Air Street.

All the girls—twenty in number—employed in operation in the central Union Telephone Exchange, Indianapolis, were late in reaching their posts in the exchange Wednesday morning, as the result of a strike. Manager Barkman, a Russian Jew, who is a total stranger to Mr. Frick, and who is not connected with any of the branches of the steel union, Barkman is under arrest, and says he is a New York newspaper compositor, Mr. Frick will recover.

William R. Vanderbilt's palatial steam yacht, the Alva, while trying to be a heavy fog off Pollock's Rip Lightship, Nantucket shoals, in Vineyard Sound, Sunday, was run into by the freight steamer H. Mass Are Homeless.

Bay City, Mich., reported: The great conflagration which swept over forty blocks of business and residence property in the south end of the city yesterday morning was conquered by the fire department at midnight when the flames were in the business heart of the city. At that hour a few houses were standing in the south, but the wind had gone down and the local fire department, assisted by re-enforcements from West Bay City, Saginaw and Flint, had the conflagration under control.

After the adjournment of the Common Council last evening a number of wealthy citizens subscribed several thousand dollars for the temporary relief of families whose homes had been destroyed. A committee was appointed to purchase and distribute provisions. Arrangements were made to work, without purchasing the stock of several clothing stores, and provide for the wants of the homeless with a couple of drays-loads of clothing. Probabilities were appeals issued, the sufferers, and all solicited in the generous response. Immediately after the fire broke out, an offer Mr. Frick looked up, as did also Mr. Lindsay, to see if it was. Mr. Frick was examining a bundle of papers, the man appeared within about five feet of him, and without speaking fired two shots at Mr. Frick, one of which struck him in the left leg, and the other in the groin. The man then turned and left the room, and as he left he fired another shot at Frick, but he was merely scratched by the bullet, which struck the door jamb. By this time the office was crowded with people. The man entered the office just as the first shot was fired, and immediately on the shots they had drawn his revolver and was seen by many to point it at Mr. Frick and then fire. Frick cried out: "Don't kill him, don't kill him!" The man then ran out of the office, and Mr. Lindsay, who was armed, tried to escape, but was caught in the Central Union Station. In five minutes a half-dozen men were on the second floor, footing up Fifth avenue, where he seated himself at his desk. The office of Mr. Lindsay, a business partner of Mr. Frick's, adjoins that of the director. Mr. Lindsay came in and the two were holding a private conference, no one else being in the room. A few minutes before 7 o'clock Harry Hendley, the office boy, noticed a man hastily push open the swinging gate in the office, that runs between the public portion and the inner office, and walk down the aisle between the desks, where the individuals can see the stranger had already entered the private apartment. As he entered the office Mr. Frick looked up, as did also Mr. Lindsay, to see who it was. Mr. Frick was examining a bundle of papers, the man appeared within about five feet of Mr. Frick, and, quickly drawing his revolver, pulled the trigger. The first cartridge did not explode. The second shot struck the lock of the door, ricocheted, and glancing downward passed through the upper part of the left leg. Frick made an exclamation and jumped to the door, thinking he had been shot, and in vain to open it. The assailant passed quickly in front of the office and, approaching close to Mr. Frick, fired again. The third bullet struck on the left side of the neck, and passed around to a point below the right ear, where it was later reached by the probe.

At this instant Mr. Lindsay threw himself on the would-be assassin and wrestled for possession of the weapon, the lighting up of his face in a smile. "You cannot do this to me," he said, seeing the one-hoker continued, "with my hands tied." Meanwhile the office was filled with people, who, in the desperate man drew a dagger and attempted to stab Lindsay, who was holding the assailant by the shoulder. Mr. Frick saw the dagger and the blood, now, although staggers by the loss of blood, he rushed at the man, who, jumped between the men and entered the hall, where he was taken by Lindsay. Lindsay's men, who had jumped the dagger into Frick's back, and the latter, falling to the floor, wound three inches long. He made no resistance to the arrest, but was bleeding tighter up, but the patent struck a rib and glanced around the wound, and was not so injury. Twice again was the knife thrust at Mr. Frick, but he was only scratched by these last attempts to complete his murder. At the time the loiters and Deputy Sheriff May, in charge of the office, ran in and, as they fired, threw themselves on the assassin, who was then in the center of a crowd, and almost in spite of the efforts of the officers, who had drawn their revolvers, was taken to the police station.

Desperate Effort Made to Kill H. C. Frick in His Pittsburg Office.

A desperate and almost successful attempt was made Saturday afternoon to assassinate Henry Clay Frick, Chairman of the Carnegie Steel Company, limited. His assailant was Alexander Berkmann, a Russian Jew, who came here from New York, says a Pittsburg dispatch, with the evident intention of killing Frick. He is located in the principal on the employers' side in the great struggle now going on between capital and labor in this city.

Mr. Frick was shot at noon, and remained in his office at 1:30 o'clock. He was then taken to his home and is not but a few minutes after then came down the elevator to the large crowd on the ground floor, footing up Fifth avenue, where he seated himself at his desk. WEATHER FORECASTS.

WHAT PROPHET FOSTER HAS TO SAY.

Excessively Hot Weather Is Promised During the Last Half of August—A Storm Wave May Be Expected from the 16th to the 18th.

Dortit Weather Predicted.

My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm wave to cross the continent from August 6 to 10, and the heat will reach the Pacific coast about the 14th, cross the Western mountains by the close of the 15th, the great central valleys from 16th to 18th and the Eastern States about the 19th. This will be an average storm in force, preceded by excessive heat and weather and followed by a moderately cool wave which will move eastward across the Western mountains about the 19th, the great central valleys about the 19th, and the Eastern States about the 21st.

The term great central valleys used in these forecasts includes all the country lying east of the Rocky Mountains and west of the Alleghanies. It also includes Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Michigan, Ohio, and Tennessee.

The most dangerous storm wave of August will reach the Pacific coast about the 20th, cross the Western mountains about the 22nd, the great central valleys from 23d to 25th, and the Eastern States about the 27th.

This will be the hottest weather of the year, and will become a dangerous storm in the upper Ohio valley and the Atlantic States from the 23d to 27th.

A moderately cool wave will cross the Western mountains about the 28th, the great central valleys about the 29th, and the Eastern States about the 31st. The weather, however, will average cool, especially in the Western States, in August, with local drouths and excessive rains.

Local Forecasts.

Weather conditions are from west to east across the continent, and seek to put forward a forecast for within six days east and west of the magnetic meridian (northeast and southwest) for the period between 24 and 36 degrees of north latitude, and for the remainder of the country within twenty-four hours east of the meridian.

GOOD FOR THE CROPS.

The Hot Weather Has Been Especially Favorable to Corn.

The United States weekly crop bulletin issued at Washington says:

The week ending August 6 has been especially favorable to the crops in the corn belt. The weather was generally dry over the greater portion of the south Atlantic and Eastern States, and Pennsylvania—Rain badly needed.

The hot weather has been passing and, in fact, many other foreign nations are asking, and almost insisting, that more space be granted for their exhibits.

THE NATIONAL SOLONS.

SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Our National Lawmakers and What They Are Doing for the Good of the Country—Various Measures Proposed, Discussed, and Acted Upon.

Doings of Congress.

The House bill to enforce reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada was taken up in the Senate on the 3d and was discussed without any decisive action and without debate. The relations of capital and labor were brought to the attention of the senate in two speeches. The first of these was made by Mr. Hoar, who introduced a resolution previously offered by Mr. Chandler, to the effect that the recent strikes were unlawful and as to what legislation was necessary to protect the rights of interstate commerce and the mails. The other speech was made by Mr. Call, who spoke in support of his resolution to investigate the Pullman strike. Before the debate was ended by the unanimous consent agreement the Nicaragua Canal bill was taken up and the Senate adjourned.

The Senate on the 2d, the debate upon the subsidy bill and the accompanying amendments was continued by Mr. Frye in support of the measure. The chief progress with its business is at present embarrassed by the great disposition of the senate amendments to the general deficiency bill, which was under consideration, unexpectedly to all and to a considerable extent, to the senate and the committee on appropriations, by a motion made by Mr. Gorman, the senator from Maryland, to strike out the provision for the payment of Income Tax Refunds, and unless the Supreme decision of the Income Tax case, which was argued last Monday, shall be rendered before the senate shall have disposed of the deficiency bill, which will be the case if the senate continues to discuss the Income Tax Refund provision, the senate will be compelled to vote upon the question of the constitutionality of the Income Tax. The fact that, if there was no protective tariff in this country, there would be no Income Tax is, and there would be no Iron-workers to engage in differences with the manufacturers of the country, and that there should be paid to them. Under the free-trade policy of the Democratic party we should be without iron mills and without iron-workers, and the same thing would be true in a vast number of other great industries in which millions of men are engaged.

PIONEER PRESS. For this session of Congress, at least, we have heard the last of the silver bill. The designators who have sought to add to their millions by forcing upon the people a light-weight dollar and retire from the conflict baffled. The silver bill is dead, killed where its expected wounds were received, in the House of Representatives. It is a consummation for which all good people will be thankful. It is to the credit that belongs mainly to the Republican party. It is true that this bill originated in the Republican party. But it contains a body of men from the mining States who are silver men first and Republicans afterward. It was by the vote of eleven of these assisted by almost the solid Democratic strength in the Senate, that the Stewart bill was pushed through. And in the House it was the solid Republican force, led by Mr. Reed, and supported by only a minority of the Democratic party, which controlled the Republican majority in the House.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

THE IMPORTANCE OF OPPORTUNE ACTION.

Dr. Talmage's Vivid Presentation of the Perils of Delay—A Pleasant Sermon Upon Good Not the Night—The Little Is Now Every Hour in the Tiny Concerned.

Crisis of the Soul.

According to London editors the attendance at the service conducted by Dr. Talmage at Camden Place was "a gathering of very adequate point during the time and he is devoted to the personal audiences. Unless some change in the programme is arranged for the future, the Tabernacle, which is one of the leading Nonconformist churches, will, during the coming autumn, lose its prestige. He would cease in your place of business as he conducted Thursday, the last connubiance. If a measure should come before Congress that you thought ought to be carefully and soon, and then you would be sure to come for another time, and you would go and stand in the aisle, and you would be in Italy, and you would think it a very good thing, and then you would come the earth to get back your physical strength. Opportunity! It is "Now." Or, "Come to the Lord while the may be found."

Dr. Talmage's sermon discourses the other old Testament authors in Hebrew Testament, and in which prophets give an outline of our Saviour's life, and the Hebrew prophets, as a class, the site face of Christ; others a Hebrew, Christ, and Christ, and a full length portrait of Christ. Other prophets, Christ, and Christ, and Christ, and Christ, and Christ, and Christ.

Contested in this race, was probably the greatest enthusiasm and interest of the regatta. The course was 25 miles upon Lake Michigan. From starting point just off the Light House, the boats went N by E¼ E 8½ miles around buoy, thence S W 8½ miles around buoy and E to starting point. A fair breeze and a good start sent the white-winged boats through the waters. The Priant followed with a large load of passengers and the pilgrim went on a tug. The Frolic was in for a frolic and had everything its own way, taking the lead at the first buoy and holding its position. The Margaret became discouraged after a few miles run and sulked in. The Phantom made a good race and with less wind might have beaten the Frolic. The Frolic crossed the line at starting, at 11:18½ and passed in at 3:36½ making her time, 3hrs and 18 minutes. The Phantom started at 11:18 and came in at 3:41, making the time 3hrs and 22½ minutes. The other boats came in from 15 to 25 minutes later. The first prize was a brass binnacle with compass and the second prize a combination barometer and stand.

In the Class 4 sailing race the Pointe au Chine took first prize.

REGATTA SINGLETS.

The damage to the chairs on the band-scow Tuesday night on account of the rain, was $10.

Compliments were heard on all sides for the fine looking gentlemen who compoled the Detroit and Catlin boat clubs.

Mrs. C. P. Wise, of St. Louis, gave a most delightful dancing soiree at the Belvedere parlors Monday evening to which all of the resorters and the regatta gentlemen were invited. An orchestra from Petoskey furnished the music. Lemonade was the refreshing drink served. Mrs. Wise proved herself a charming hostess, and has the thanks of all for her kindness.

The Misses O'Neill, by mistake, took a sudden plunge in the upper end Thursday afternoon, the equilibrium of the row boat getting away. They were rescued in a wet condition.

Great credit is due Col. Dunlap for his ability in so successfully managing the Belvedere and the large crowd which have been upon his hands for several days.

Mr. C. W. Sanderson, the noted Boston artist, attended the regatta. He is located between Harbor Point and the Springs for the summer. He brought with him a number of his fine paintings and exhibited them at the cottage of Mrs. E. D. Bixby, Thursday.

An impromptu dance was held at Music Hall Wednesday evening, at which a large number of young people were present. A number of yachtsmen and pleasure cruisers were present. The music was furnished by Miss Marjorie Bardeen and Mrs. A. L. Pratt, of Kalamazoo. Mrs. Pratt is an accomplished musician and the music was greatly enjoyed.

The yachting and sailing costumes of the fine looking regatta gentlemen greatly bewitched the Charlevoix belles and all had a delightful time. The young ladies who successfully assisted in entertaining were the Misses Duncan, Wise, Weimer, Morgan, Bardeen, Chambers, Mullally, Whitelaw, Ingersoll and others.

One of the most genial and popular men at the resort during the regatta was Commodore J. S. Hair, who rendered valuable assistance as timekeeper of the shells and canoes.

One of the sweetest singers whose voice has been heard at the Belvedere this season, is Mrs. McNulty, who resides at St. Louis. Mr. She possesses a fine soprano voice and sings high C with ease. Miss Agnes Mullally, her sister, also possesses a very charming and promising soprano voice.

N. H. Stewart, a prominent lawyer of Kalamazoo, and who has successfully figured in many famous cases, was promoted this week to a Judgeship—of the regatta sailing races. He says he likes his new role.

The following is a list of the judges and time keepers of the races, who have the thanks of the regatta committee for their efficient services rendered:

JUDGES SAILING RACES—Capt. Wilbur, N. H. Stewart, Prof. J. C. Knowlton, Col. Pierce, Gen. G. S. Werner.

SHELL AND CANOES—Henry Malone, L. A. Clark, Glen. S. Allen.

PLEASURE BOATS—Capt. C. Worthy, Harry Nicholls, C. R. Blake, Prof. H. L. D'Orsay, Geo. H. Morgan.

TIMEKEEPERS SAILING RACES—G. W. Crouter, W. A. Harvey, Col. C. H. S. Coupal.

PLEASURE BOATS—Bert Gates.

SHELLS AND CANOES—Gen. J. S. Hair.

Starter for pleasure boats, shells and canoes, Glenn S. Allen.

COLORS—Harbor Springs, Red; Harbor Point, Orange; Wequetonsing Blue; Petoskey, Pink; Charlevoix, Green and White.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. B. Hays, Mrs. C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Lewis, Miss Campbell, May Wildicomb, H.-race Clapp, Mrs. A. F. Holbell, Wortley T. Armstrong, Miss Martha Brockway, Miss Jessie Campbell, Miss Bessie Giddings, Mrs D'Arambal, all from northern resorts attended the regatta Thursday.

H. N. Heck, Miss Alice M. Peck, and Miss Georgia E. Peck of Minneapolis, reporting at Petoskey, were the guests of Chas. Peck and wife Thursday.

—At the Council meeting last Friday evening, it was voted to change the water main on May street, between Newman street and Hurlbut ave., to Allen street, and that the main on Hurlbut Ave. be extended east to Allen street through Smith street.

—The water-works people are pushing matters with energy. The pipe is laid on the north side to the Chicago resort, and only a short time will be required to complete that portion of the pipe laying. On the south side the work is done with the exception of Bridge street, and the putting in of hydrants. The walls of the power house are up, and ready for the roof.

—This Representative district is composed of Charlevoix, Kalkaska and Antrim, and some good Republican will represent it at Lansing next winter.

—The Annual Indian Camp Meeting for the Grand Traverse region will occur this year on the old grounds two miles north-east of this place, beginning Tuesday, August 23d, and continuing until the following Monday. Both white and Indian preachers will be present, and the occasion will be one of interest. Steamers will make special excursion rates from points on Pine Lake and the bays, and omnibuses will run from town at frequent intervals.

—Frank Tucker's dramatic company is billed for Lewis Grand Opera House August 25, 26 and 27, next week Thursday, Friday and Saturday. This is the combination that has won such renown at various northern Michigan towns. Charlevoix has not been "in it" because she had no railroad. But they will come here with an established reputation in Northern Michigan that should insure them good houses. It will be the most interesting, dramatic engagement of the season here.

—Parker McIntyre, of Norwood, was in town one day last week, and was enthusiastic when speaking of the crops. "They are immense; everything is abundant and fine class. Verily Northern Michigan is a land of milk and honey this year. Farmers are up to their necks in clover, although I wish we had all planted more potatoes. I think they will bring a good price, owing to a poor crop elsewhere. As for hay—well, I will have 150 tons myself. Stock will come out in good shape next spring."

—The SENTINEL last week was a victim of one of those incidents which come to all editors at times—the precipitate departure of a printer, in the midst of the regatta work. As a consequence, the issue was greatly damaged in makeup, and many errors crept in. The fireworks, a grand and fitting ending of a grand event, were ignored, and events of the last day curtailed greatly. The newspaper, employed a first-class newspaper man, Mr. Wm. F. Cornell, of Kalamazoo, to do the reportorial work, and to be obliged to cut down his matter was exasperating.

—In view of the wire troubles of the past two weeks, and the flood of telegraph business incident to regatta the remarks of a prominent last week were not entirely uncalled for. But in a recent letter from the Superintendent, that authorities in the local manager to state that before another season opens a second commercial wire will be provided. But it should be borne in mind that poor service of the past two weeks, has been principally due to the continued and severe electric storms that have prevailed. Not even Jay Gould's millions of Western Union stock can compete with thunderbolts.

—Mrs Hattie Clifford, formerly of this place, is visiting at Washington, where her son Walter has a position in one of the folding rooms of the Senate. In a recent letter to Mrs. Grosse, Mrs. Clifford relates an interesting incident. In a conversation with Senator Walthall, of Miss., he asked if her husband was an officer in the 10th Infantry. She replied that he was. The Senator wore from his chair, and bowing with true southern courtesy, said: "Madam, I am proud to have had a part in the battle of Chickamauga." He at once became interested in the matter in which she was seeking his aid, and went with her to other Senators.

—The "Dog Horn of Skillagalee," alias "The Wild Ass of Dunnet," but locally known as the chief editor of the Hamptonian Newspaper Combination, comes back at the Sentinel, in the Daily Reporter of a recent date for its recent mild criticism of the Hamptonian manager of booming Charlevoix. The trouble with Mr. Hampton is that in his argument, he recognizes only resort hotels. We speak by authority when we say that all down-town hotels, many more could have been led during the three days of the regatta, and with probably a better menu than the chief editor gets when he is at home. Charlevoix has long been "damned with faint praise" by this same Charlevoix journalist. It is not long since he stated that those looking for locations to keep out of Charlevoix unless they had money enough to support them. While we concede that Charlevoix needs another down-town hotel, we have yet to hear of anybody going hungry, or lying in the door recesses for want of a bed. If Mr. Hampton had come down town among us common folks, the editor of the SENTINEL would have taken pleasure in escorting him, and a dozen of his friends, if he has that many, to good seats at table, and guaranteed them square meals, and good treatment.

State Teachers Institute.

The State Teachers' Institute for Charlevoix County will be held at Charlevoix, commencing at 10 o'clock, a m., Monday, August 29, and closing at 4 p. m., Friday, Sept. 1. Henry M. Enos, Charlevoix, Local Committee, Prof. I. N. Demmon, University of Michigan, Conductor.

The value of the instruction received at these institutes is being very generally recognized by teachers and school officers. As a rule, it has been the experience of County Examiners and other examining officers, that the most successful teachers are those who have availed themselves of the annual instruction offered by these local institutes.

The daily sessions of the institute for the year will, as here-tofore, be devoted exclusively to topics of special interest to teachers, presented by persons of extended personal experience as teachers, and who have made a special study of institute work. The evening lectures will be of a popular character.

The institute law allows teachers whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County institute, held under the direction of the State Superintendent, to close their schools during the continuance of such institute without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the institute. This provision of law, and the fact that there will be no enrollment of tuition fee exacted, should insure the attendance of every teacher in the county who possesses the true professional spirit.

Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

Wedding Bells.

At the Congregational church at 11 o'clock to-day, by the Rev. W. H. Maxwell, was celebrated the nuptials of Miss Effie Berdan, of this place, to Mr. A. E. Clayden, of Jackson.

Miss Lottie Mason, the business partner of the bride, was the bridesmaid, and Mr. E. A. Berdan, the bride's brother, was the groom's best man.

The newly wedded couple left on the afternoon train for a two weeks trip to Jackson, Wayne and Detroit. They will return to Charlevoix, where of course they will remain. The business of Mason & Berdan will continue at the old stand, although a change in the firm name will probably follow.

Miss Berdan, as a member of one of our most enterprising business houses, has acquired a wide acquaintance and many friends, and it goes without saying that she has the best wishes of all, as has also the fortunate groom, Mr. Clayden, who formerly resided here, and where he has always been thought well of.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayden have the congratulations of the SENTINEL, which is a good thing to have in the family.

Railroad Change.

Mr. Lott, agent of the C. & W. M. at Petoskey, has resigned, and Mr. James Kehoe, the Charlevoix agent, has been promoted to the place.

While we congratulate Mr. Kehoe upon his advancement, we know we speak the public mind when we say the change will cause a feeling of regret here.

Mr. Kehoe has, during the short time he has managed the company's affairs here, made friends among all classes. He is a courteous gentleman and a most capable officer. We are all sorry to lose "Jim."

We have not learned who Mr. Kehoe's successor will be.

• • •

Religious Items.

Methodist.

Rev. D. Brank, of St. Louis, will preach in the morning. Pastor in the evening.

Congregational.

Morning, "The Decalogue"; evening, short sermon. Mrs. King and Mrs. Mate Simpson will sing.

—At the Congregational church, on Friday evening of this week, the ladies will provide ice cream and cake to which you are cordially invited. Bring your 15 cents, and be sure and come.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lucas Malet

CHAPTER V.

HOME AGAIN.

It was late in the afternoon of a day toward the close of May that Brian arrived at Elmwood. A telegram came from New York the day before, had announced his coming, and, on alighting from the train, he found the carriage awaiting him, and the old coachman he remembered so well beaming a smiling welcome.

Five years had wrought very precious little changes in the aspect of the country. The small town lying within the shelter of the valley, with its new and progressive spirit, resisted a wonderful development. New and imposing residences seem to be seen on all sides. Busy activity was everywhere visible, and Brian began to imagine himself a modern Rip Van Winkle returning to his home after a long absence.

Naturally, the place was his home no longer. For the first time perhaps the full force of this idea struck him.

From the carriage window he caught instant glimpses of Elmwood, the stately old house crowning the brow of the hill like a monarch guarding the village below, its terraced gardens sloping to the south, its wide spreading lawn and flower beds, its green banks, and the splendid old beeches, which clothed in the tender foliage of May.

He sighed as he turned from the place. He had never been particularly fond of Elmwood in the old days, the country seat to circumstances offering inducements that he found alluring, but not to his liking. He had always felt it looked upon as his had passed into the hands of another, and he had frequently raised new longings and new desires for his lot.

He tried to picture the cousin who had fallen into possession from him, but his imagination could grasp nothing definite. He wondered, idly, if she was or short, dark or light, cold or affable, and then he fell to fancying a new in his mind, and as the intangible shadow assumed a clearer outline, he found himself to look on the form and features of the Margaret he had left in the fading town on Nantucket.

Rather, he fell to dreaming his mistakes with a fierceness that argued ill to such disturbance. The wrong done to Margaret was in part redressed by the fact that he had left her indebted to no man, but had left her deprived of his mother, and in her power, of the moral training and influence discipline which might have weakened, if not wholly neutralized, those traits. His father was lily-fitted for the guardianship of a quick, impulsive boy and the injudicious indulgence of an old nurse strengthening the already strong characteristics. When, as frequently happened, Brian was unmanageable, his father was appealed to, and his severity on such occasions had far from the desired effect.

Such a course of training had a practical effect on Brian's after life. When he left college, he was wonderfully in accordance with his father's wishes and plans. The prospect of his studies, procured to now his wild oats with such unusual vim that Brian's parents believed himself and father become the children.

Times terminated in one more letter than all the rest, which thrilled Brian's departure for Europe, and his father's death soon after, to continue his allowance. A very direful threat, that Brian had taken no pains to repeat more than strictly necessary.

Brian had been traversing several months when Margaret's father died and she took up her residence at Elmwood. Once there, she soon saw her way to her uncle's heart, and the old gentleman carried the project of a marriage between her and his son. He died without realizing his wish, and the will by which he did not disclose, he left all his property to Margaret, and call Brian, with all, an income of $2,000. Now, after five years absence, the disinherited son was experiencing the novel sensation of entering his old home a visitor.

He friendly, familiar air of everything about him, made it seem as if he had gone away only yesterday, and with old Mr. Hilton, who knew him as boy, not long before left with even superciliously genial, and a few full of meet, so, he found himself no more than he usual do nothing over that group the two men had in the faithful old servant, and shake it with inquisitive affection.

"Poor Stephens," he said to himself, when left alone to his reflections, "poor Brian! believe the faithful fellow and he are both in the same mind. Well, he as kind to me as he wishes that the feeling of another Hilton, I suppose, I should. I wonder if my relative will realize what she has taken from me. More than never, perhaps, I hope, and then some. She has taken my happiness. And Margaret—with all this I could have married her. She liked me, I feel sure. Her every action told me as much. Dear girl! how happy I should be to make her mistress here! Well, there is certainly no use sighing over lost opportunities.

This was a pitiless ideal conclusion, but Brian found it difficult to shake off the tendrils of despondency and turn his attention to some practical matter in his active, impatient way to going down to dinner. He was not a prettyman, and yet many, yet, wishing to appear to the best advantage before the cousin, he took special pains with his toilet. He considered if Margaret had seen Stephens's picture in the office.

Probably not; she was the sort of thing scorn," he concluded, with a last satisfactory glance at the reflection in the mirror.

He found an one in the parlour, and, on library being likewise deserted, he strolled out through the open window, down through which he caught a glimpse of a black frock.

He approached it with some trepidation. He suspected possible chances in the atmosphere of the house since Margaret's advent, and he was rather afraid of intruding on a tête-à-tête.

His hesitating steps had, however, been heard. There was a rustle, and the form "a cry of Dear Brian," he found himself holding Miss Hilton's hand, and gazing, with mingled pleasure and surprise, in his gentle, kindly face.

"Come right in," she said, laughing. "This is our sitting-room, but you are a duly debarred entrance. It is such a pleasure to see you again, you poor boy."

"It is almost like a home coming," he rejoined in a low voice, following her into the sunny furnished room, "I scarcely expected my welcome from your lips."

"Why not? Who was I to think for that pleasure?

"Margaret. Your child, she is all alone, and needs some older friend and adviser."

"Naturally, I suppose she is well?"

"Yes, quite well. Her health is usually good. Still I think she has never recovered from our late bereavement. It was a sad event for you, also, Brian."

The old lady spoke tenderly, and her face brightened as she continued, "I hope Brian's face.

"Your father," he said, after a second. "I hope he did not think we quite unfeeling or unmindful. I wrote several to my uncle regrets that I could not be with him before the end. I was travelling at the time, you see, and your messages reached me very tardily. I was in Vienna when I received the news."

"Yes, we knew that we should be very lonely without him," she said, "but it was for the best. Margaret has never recovered herself, poor child."

"I suppose it is only a blossoming of the season," he said, rather pleasantly, as she put question my condition in a portion of the money, lost—

"Margaret, rather unwilling to allow me complete his sentence.

"I think it will turn out, for the best," remarked Miss Hilton, with cheery cordiality. "Margaret is so young, I feel, knowledge, but most of our great men have begun life in obscurity, and, in the way, in my pleasure at seeing you I have quite forgotten your long journey. She is forming strangely tired to-day, and longer than usual, I think, at dinner time."

Brian, he responded, readily, surprising the feeling which had prompted the remark, and, as he left the room, he reflected that perhaps he realize his changed conditions, and, in consequence, have to be treated with full play. From all accounts, she is a spoiled child, and, if she let the way to the dining room.

IT COST THE PEOPLE

THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS FOR DEMOCRAT GERRYMANDERS.

Republican Reformers Have Saved the State from Greater Expense—The Greed of the Democratic Schemers Rebuked—Well-Merited Rebuke.

The recent session of the legislature was in every sense an unwarrantable and unpardonable imposition on the people. It resulted in an unnecessary expenditure of funds that ought to be kept in the treasury of the state. Period the whole $5,275.00 for pay and mileage of members, while the cost of printing laws, journals, bills and maps of new districts will cost the grand total to date. This is the latest item of the money imposed upon the state by the democratic misadministration.

The end of the session was made to appear that nothing had been passed of public importance, and which would give the impression that had the "scamp-legislature had in view the interests of the people, instead of the interests of the democratic party, "Dissent in a little louder tone, and the democratic legislature attempted to steal the state. Dissent in a tone still louder, and the democratic legislature and Republican unconstitutionality of the apportionment acts of 1891 were too much for the sun-state Court to sanction. As it might happen that the honorable tribunal have been asked to protect the thief caught carrying off the million-dollar booty, so to justify the apportionment acts of 1891. There are two reasons why such proceedings were allowed longer to disgrace the state of Michigan. Judge Justice Blome, whose loyalty to Democracy is unchallenged, said of the House appointment: "The apportionment act of 1891 is void, because it undertakes to dismember Houghton county and because the constitution was also violated in giving Democratic counties a low representative, having a less population than [Republican] counties which were accorded six votes." The words in brackets have been inserted to show the facts and to indicate how the constitution was violated in the interest of Democracy. The unlawful dismemberment of Houghton county was made for the same purpose. Justice Marston, the other Democratic member of the Supreme Court, said: "Not satisfied with the success of the Democratic gang at unlawful doublings in Michigan in corruption. Speaking of the senatorial re-arrangement of 1891, he said: "Under the guise of the constitutional enactment is to secure as nearly as possible equality of representation." Any apportionment that defeats that purpose is void, when they are called to the letter but to the spirit of our republican and subject to popular government. Power was given to them as a trust to exercise it in a fair and honest manner and usurpation of power is a crime to be free institutions." In these remarks the apportionment act of 1891 was plainly had. What was the result? The state government was left nearly crippled in one of its important functions—all on account of Democratic greed. The state was thus made necessary to repair the mischief done by a Democratic legislature, at the behest of the Democratic bosses, who dared not to obey one of their mandates to the United States Senate.

The session was called by the governor and then, as the Lansing Republican graphically describes it:

Every member who was busy enough to get there, complete strangers, circus hustlers, doorkeepers, pages and a rout of others, all came to do a little rake and scrape generally. The session produced to the public only the spectacle of a lot of men who had gathered together and staying in the gilt of the capitol hostelry. The result was only an outlay of money and a time-wasting.

And as the expense was piled up, the state has paid dearly for its experience with Democracy.

That the session was not any longer and more expensive to the taxpayers of the state was owing entirely to the patriotic stand of the Republican minority. Before the convening of the two houses, the Republican State Committee, on the 11th, in no way dictating action, but acting as an advisory council, suggested to the Republican members an offer of cooperation with the Democrats in the consideration of their bills, which both parties could support. In accordance with this suggestion the following offer was made by the Republican substantial caucus:

"To the Chairman of the Democratic caucus: Gentlemen—Mr. Lansing has just shown us a bill, which we understand was prepared with you and which we understand is fair and just. In all the citizens of Michigan, may be Republicans substantially caucus:

"We understand that you are anxious to spared the burden of expense attendant upon a prolonged session of the legislature, we are authorized by the Republican caucus to say that if you will drop the redistricting proposition, which we understand is unconstitutional to represent the Republican Democratic and Peoples' parties shall be named by their respective caucuses who shall be charged with the duty of formulating bills to be presented for approval of the caucuses, and if upon so agreement being reached, to be presented for action to the legislature.

(Signed) "A. Milnes, W. B. Wildington, Jos. St. Weiss, R. L. Taylor, A. O. Wheeler."

The Democrats in the Senate, after vainly trying for a half a day to rally their forces for the passage of partisan measures and finding that they could not use the party whip with success on members enough to pass a bill, finally made a virtue of necessity and agreed to compromise measures. The credit of shortening the session and of securing measurably fair apportionments belongs to the Republican minority in the Legislature.

ANOTHER LARCENY.

HOW IT WAS PLANNED AND DEFEATED AT LANSING.

A Fair Re-Apportionment Secured by the Republicans in Spite of the Democratic Honors—Michigan Saved from Another Disgraceful Gerrymander.

That the State of Michigan has been saved from the disgrace of another partisan gerrymander is to be credited to the Republican party.

It became evident before the legislature convened that the Democrats were preparing to go to any lengths to pass a partisan measure, in open defiance of the principles of fair apportionment laid down by the Supreme Court. The state organ of the Democratic party—the Detroit Free Press—published a labored editorials to prepare its party for a displacement of another attempt to steal the legislature. For several days before the meeting of the legislature that organ teemed with denunciations of the Supreme Court opinions in the gerrymandering cases as an inexcusable interference with legislative discretion. It maintained that legislative districts could not be formed without doing violence to justice, and it framed an elaborate scheme for the revision of the Supreme Court opinions and the perpetration of another gerrymander. It openly defended the G. O. P. gang of robbers, which is so dangerous to the very existence of our free institutions.

The Democratic State Central committee had prepared two bills for enactment, fully as outrageous in their character as the acts of 1891, which the Supreme Court declared unlawful. That committee made no secret of its intention to force those bills through the legislature. Secretary Hosford openly declared at Lansing: "We are not here for pleasure, but to pass bills to our own interests, and by——we're going to pass them." He declared also that they would do it then through before Saturday night and go home. It was also known to be a part of the scheme to prepare for election and act under such laws, although not intended to take immediate effect. The Democrats, in other words, stood ready to rush through a partisan gerrymander and then perfect their plans to steal the state, under laws not yet in force, as they had not votes enough to either house to give the bills immediate effect.

Republicans also had reason to believe, even before the legislature convened, that Governor Winans had prepared a gerrymander message, which was intended as an encouragement to Democratic schemes to unlock "Northmen" domination upon the people of Michigan, and the message justified their fears. His message was a defense of the gerrymander and a sneer at the Supreme Court. Like the Free Press, he virtually told the Supreme Court that it had meddled with something that was none of its business, and that this offensive usurpation, that you are again compelled to legislate for, is the important matter upon the jury, having followed the precedents set by former legislatures, and by our having accepted the theory that the legislature is an independent coordinate branch of the state government, whose province is to determine the political divisions of the commonwealth. Everything looked ominous for the attempt to override constitution, law and justice in the interests of another Democratic partisan apportionment.

Well knowing that bills could not be lawfully passed as soon as the Democrats boldly asserted they would pass them, unless Republicans consented to suspend the rules or the Democrats grossly violated them as they did in 1891, the Republican members of the Senate put themselves on guard to defend the state against any more Democratic outrages. Warned by their experiences of 1891, they stood on the watch for treachery.

What was the first Democratic move? It was an attempt to do away with the rules of the Senate that stood in the way of Boss Hosford's plans. The scheme was sprung upon the Republicans without a word of warning. Not having a two-thirds majority to suspend the rules, the Democrats assumed that the Senate had no rules and then proposed to indulge those of 1891, except one that interfered with their plans. This Barnett and Saunders proposition unmasked the Democracy. The partisan rulings of Lieut-Gov. Strong, made in carry on the scheme, were but the mouthpiece of the Republican suspicions. The motion against Democratic usurpation was brought until almost midnight, when the Democratic majority, aided by the Lieutenant-Governor, by from Lieut-Gov. Strong, prevailed against law and precedent. A rule which could be abolished or suspended only by a two-thirds vote, was thus set by a bare majority.

The Democrats accused the Republicans of filibustering and trying to stop, but it was well for the State of Michigan that the Republicans took a steady stand against so gross a violation of law and practice. Never before in the history of the state was a legislative day more profitably spent for the people. Republican opposition was the rock upon which the Democratic gerrymander was wrecked. The struggle over the rules revealed the fact that while the Democrats had a majority of the Senators voting, they had not the constitutional majority requisite to pass a bill. They then gave up the fight for a gerrymander and listened to Republican propositions for a fair apportionment. That it is that the state was saved by Republicans from another gerrymander. The people will appreciate this fact and give a signal rebuke of their appreciation next November.

Attorney-General Ellis renounced the Democratic party when he was nominated by the People's party. Perhaps his renunciation of the Democracy was akin to Ben M. Dickinson's similar renunciation a few years ago—it didn't count.

The Land commissioner of Samoa, Mr. Barnard, who went aboard the Porpoise to consult with Captain Aldrich and select a place for a coaling station, and the island Nanu-Lafa, a large harbor. This was hotly opposed by Americans as a violation of the treaty with the lions of their allies of Apia in the harrisons of 1889 it had been discontinued. England seems to intend to make Samoan coal to compete with the Australian coal, and Pago Pago, the best harbor in the Pacific, is to be used as a coaling station. It is said that Germany and Australia are against these moves.

At the time he took this beauty a school of about twenty others, would measure from 14 to 20 inches were hastily working their way up the river and although the one he caught was as fine a trout as we ever saw, Mr. Lewis informs us that there were several equally as large as the one he landed, which weighed 2lbs 13 ounces.

Elk Rapids Progress: E. S. Noble spent part of last week in Grand Rapids and while there made a purchase of an extensive plant for the manufacture of all kinds of wooden ware, but principally for the manufacture of clothes pins, butter ladles and spoons and spools and a capacity of the plant may be realized when we state that the clothes pin machine is capable of turning out daily 12 boxes of five gross each. The butter ladle machine has a capacity of 2,400 dozen. Broom handles must be a daily output of 1,500. There will also be a number of special lathes for the manufacture of other articles of goods not mentioned above but which will be added in the near future. A complete saw mill for cutting the material also double surface planers planing machines, etc.

Norwood Notes.

CHARLEVOIX AGAINST THE WORLD!

IT DEPENDS.

The Enjoyment of Getting Home is Sunshine or in the Rain.

"Isn't it a pleasure to get home after an absence of a month or six weeks?" he asked as he shook his friend's hand warmly.

"Um, yes; ordinarily it is," admitted the friend.

"You come back to the place you have lived in for years and feel the sun shining and the birds singing—I tell you it warms the cockles of a man's heart."

"Well, that depends," returned the friend doubtfully.

"Depends? Depends?"

"Certainly. Now, if you go away to escape a spell of bad weather that is expected along about that season of the year and come back on a bright, sunshiny day, your friends are sure to tell you that that's what the weather has been right along."

"That's so; they do."

"And then you feel that you have been to considerable expense to get the worst of it."

"I admit it; I've felt that way."

"But if it's cloudy, dismal, and sloppy, they can't bluff you. You just throw your chest out with the proud consciousness that you know a thing or two about enjoying life. It all depends. Sometimes I'd rather get home in a drizzling rain."

THE FLY'S PARASITE.

The Fungus Which Feeds on Its Body and Kills It.

The little fiend, which do us tease, Here other foes in life can.

So, too, the house fly, which is such an annoyance himself, is frequently put beyond reach of doing further harm by a parasitic fungus which destroys them by hundreds of millions. You have frequently seen the remains of a fly firmly glued to the window pane, apparently just on the point of taking flight, but in fact as dead as Cæsar. He stands on his six legs, which seem to be lengthened to an extraordinary degree, his gauzy wings raised high above his back—but he never flies. Examine him closely and you will find that his body is badly shrunken; he looks as though he had been fastened there weeks ago and left to die; however, he may not have been there more than a few short hours. He appears to be the centre-piece of a circle on the pane, the whole lake being perhaps three-quarters of an inch in diameter. This lake, which is nearly always of a milky hue, is the overplus of the fungoid growth which caused the fly's death. The spores of this, like those of other parasitic fungoes, are excessively minute, and microscopists tell us that there are untold millions of them in the air, especially in autumn. These strike the nether or softer parts of the fly and immediately send out their tubular "feelers." When once this fungus gets a hold on a fly he is doomed, and it is only a question of time when he will be glued to some object as mentioned above.

GROWTH OF THE HAIR.

How It Is Affected by Certain Kinds of Food.

The influence of diet upon the growth of hair is the subject of a paper, in which the writer says: "Several cases of shedding of hair after influenza have confirmed my opinion that diet has much to do with the production and with the cure of symptomatic alopecia. Hair contains five per cent of sulphur, and its ash twenty per cent of silicon and ten per cent of iron and manganese. Solutions of beef or rather part of it, starchy mixtures, and even milk, which constitute the diet of patients with influenza and other fevers, cannot supply these elements, and atrophy at the root and falling of hair result. The color and strength of hair in young mammals is not attained so long as milk is the sole food. As to drugs, iron has prompt influence. The foods which most abundantly contain the above-named elements are the various albuminoids and the oat, the ash of that grain yielding twenty-two per cent of silicon. I have often found a dietary largely composed of oatmeal and brown bread greatly promote the growth of hair, especially when the baldness was preceded by constipation and sluggish capillary circulation. Those races of men who consume most meat are the most hirsute."

AN INTELLIGENT CANINE.

Story of a Vermont Shepherd Dog Driving Cows.

Here is a true story of a Vermont sheep dog which Scotchmen will find it hard to match.

Captain C— of Bradford, had a "shepherd dog" when was accustomed to bring home the cows at night, always separating them from the other cattle, and never allowing any but milch cows to come up.

One day Captain C— accompanied the dog in driving the cows to pasture. At one place on the road the Captain was surprised to see the dog desert the herd and take to the woods by the side of the road. The Captain went on with the cattle, which were walking briskly in advance.

Within a quarter of a mile they came up to a break in the fence, of which the Captain had no knowledge, leading into a field; and here, in the gap of the fence, sat the dog in a matter-of-fact way, guarding it against the entrance of the cattle.

What else could his master suppose than that the dog was aware of the gap in the fence, and knowing the man would bring up the cattle, made a detour through the woods to the place to prevent the cattle going into the field?

Trees in the United States.

The last census shows, among other surprising things, that there are more than half a million almond trees actually bearing in the United States; that there are hundreds of thousands of bearing cocoanut trees and more than a quarter of a million olive trees, producing fruit equal to the best Mediterranean varieties. There are more than half a million bearing banana plants, 200,000 bearing lemon trees, 4,000,000 orange trees, and 21,000,000 pineapples. The value of tropical and semi-tropical fruits grown under the American flag is nearly $20,000,000.

Fills a Long Felt Want.

A new "letter card" has been issued by the British postoffice. It is a copy of our letter sheet idea, and is useless of an filling a much felt want. The idea is to make it possible to send short notes without the publicity of a post card and at less cost than a letter. The letter card simply folds once, across the middle, and the edges can be gummed down. The space available for writing on, by this is less —The Rifenburg Milling Co. last fall offered a barrel of Iron Duke flour to the person who would make the nearest guess of the date of the first train into Charlevoix. John McNeill, of Marion, made a guess at June 1st, 1892, and last week he got the barrel of Iron Duke.

—The idea of "Uncle Dan'l" as played by Frank Tucker, is to give a performance brimming over with whole sale fun, originality, and brightness. It aims to please, not to weary; to amuse, not to teach; and to make the passing moments blossom with wit, some delight. The result is that the audiences are sent away feeling brighter and happier with load of life made to seem lighter and with the glad thought that this old, old world is not such a bad place after all. No one who loves a genuine, hearty honest laugh should miss seeing Frank Tucker as Uncle Dan'l.

—The Charlevoix Democrat, like its twin sister at Petoskey, is nothing if not sloppy. When they pour forth their dregs of effervescence or their vials of wrath, truth is relegated to the closet to keep the company of the greenback newspaper files of the chief editor's ante-Democratic days. On this question of good works we can afford to remain silent, trustful always in the judgment of those competent to judge; the Democrat is not. Meantime, we are pleased to indorse the Democrat hotel editorial in every particular. We have expressed the same sentiments before the Democrat was born, and several times since.

—Twenty-five hundred feet of four inch pipe was ordered Monday for the extension of the water works. Upright avenue will have 295 feet of it; the Charlevoix Lumber Co. will take 300 feet of it on their plant; the Chicago resort grounds will be supplied, and the system extended to the depot. Six more hydrants were also ordered—two for Upright ave., two for the Charlevoix Lumber Co., and one each for the depot and the Club House. The laying of the pipe under the river has been sub-let, and the contractors are expected here soon. The power house is also completed and the machinery has been shipped.

—Frank Tucker's very popular Metropolitan Comedy Company appeared in this City last evening and played to a crowded house. This Company never failsto touch a responsive chord in the heart of the audience, and this season the support given to Mr. Tucker is stronger than ever. In the character of Uncle Dan'l, Frank has found a chance to display his peculiar talents to the very best advantage. The part is fitted to the actor and the actor to his part. The plot of the piece is pleasing and interesting. The many friends Frank Tucker has made in the past will find him improved, and supported this year by better company than the excellent one he has presented to an appreciative public during the many years he has been at the head of the "Metropolitans." South Bend Tribune:

—Milwaukee Wisconsin: Absentmindedness on the part of a woman came near making Capt. Aldrich, of the Vandalia Line steamer Ousifrage a victim of mob violence last Sunday evening. The steamer had left her dock at St. Joseph, Mich., on her return trip to Chicago with a large number of excursionists, when the piercing shrieks of a woman rent the air. Mrs. Dunphy Elliott, who resides on the North Side, in Chicago, rushed frantically to Capt. Aldrich and hysterically told him her baby was left at the St. Joseph wharf with a lady friend. She had expected to find it on board, but had searched the boat in vain, and burst forth into shrieks as her nerves gave way. Before the captain had fully realized the situation and could make any explanation, a report circulated through the boat that Mrs. Elliott's baby had fallen overboard and the captain had refused to stop the boat and attempt the infant's rescue. In an instant all was excitement and only the presence and action of older heads prevented violence. At the end of about five minutes the matter was explained, and the boat's course reversed. At the St. Joseph wharf stood the friend with the baby, and the interrupted return trip was a constant shower of apologies on the captain who was anything but happy.

Use the White Rose and Iron Duke flour and you will not have bad luck in baking.

Democratic Election Statistics.

The laugh is unquestionably on the Democrat. In last week's issue of that excellent journal, the editor, in italic letters, makes the statement that the SENTINEL's election figures of the week previous were "false in every instance."

The SENTINEL re-asserts them as correct in every instance. They were taken from the Democratic Legislative Manual, compiled and distributed multifariously by the late lamented Daniel E. Soper. But the trouble with Mr. Hampton is, he does not appear to properly distinguish between majorities and pluralities. In producing his table of figures he says: "Below we give the Republican majorities"—then he straightway appends the pluralities! The SENTINEL in its article said: "Below we give the Republican majorities"—and it gave them—right from the best Democratic authority. It is the editor of the Democrat who has falsified the figures, and we we are prepared to prove the assertion by the record.

Now this is a fact: In the six biennial elections—1880 to 1890 inclusive—only in 1880 and 1888 were the Republican majorities larger than in 1890. In that year the Republican majority in this county on Secretary of State was 411. (See the Democratic red book.) This was the Turner campaign, when the vote on Governor was not a fair test.

The average Republican majority, 1880-1890 inclusive, is 354. If the Democrat can extract any comfort from these figures it is easily comforted.

We do not know what object Mr. Hampton has in printing the figures he gave, when he must have known they would be called in question. It is certainly not calculated to increase public confidence in a journal that makes so bad a break.

Burglary.

Charlevoix has been "touched." On Monday night, sometime between the hours of twelve and morning, some unknown person or persons entered the residence of Frank E. Wood, and secured from Mr. Wood's pocket, a roll of bills to the amount of about $100. Of course everybody was asleep and Mr. Wood's clothes were on a chair near the bed. The burglars entered through an unlocked door. It is undoubtedly the same gang that has been "doing" Petoskey lately. No clue.

Religious Items.

Rev. Dr. Hrooks, of Alma, will preach in the morning. Evening, "Wild Oats"—a sermon for young men.

Norwood Notes.

Miss Stafford and Miss Trotter with Col. Chas. Wimer as guide, made a trip up the Jordan Monday.

The shingle men who have been here this season have taken a job at Eastport and have moved there.

Miss Briggs, a sister of Mrs. McHarg, arrived from Chicago Monday.

H. S. Babcock and wife are enjoying the presence of a daughter who arrived Sunday. Henry says he has bought a shot gun to keep the boys away.

Blossom Goodrich will at once erect a handsome dwelling on his land in front of J. W. Van Duzen's.

Van Pelt is re-shingling and will re-paint the entire roof of his large house.

We notice in this week's Battle Creek paper that Frank Perry was killed last week by falling into a well. Frank was a son of Eugene Perry, who lived here a number of years.

Mrs. Babcock, of Harbor Springs, is here on a visit, taking care of that new daughter at H. S. Babcock's.

Chas. Brown returned from Mancelona Tuesday.

The apple-barrel factory is turning out lots of barrels now, and there seems to be a large demand for the same.

Ask your grocer for "Crown Prince Flour" and take no other.

TO SOLITUDE.

To day I turn to nature and Leave the city behind me;
Upon Benedicite I stand
And to ocean solitude I say
I'll go and commune with you alone.
Lend me the wings of the morning,
Let me fly to the ends of the earth and hide,
In little dells or woods with Pan,
Canons yes with the silent cousin,
Let me hear the voice of the ocean,
Let me hear the voice of the mountain
Let me hear the voice of the silence
Let me commune with God.
Let me be with the birds and the flowers
Let me commune with God.
Let me be with the birds and the flowers
Let me commune with God.
Here once more will I pull to shore
And my soul will be at peace
Here once more will I pull to shore
Where I have turned my long and hard
I go away refreshed and strong
And I say, which is as to one, my
Lord, I have communed with God.
Let me be with the birds and the flowers
Where I have turned my long and hard
I go away refreshed and strong
And I say, which is as to one, my
Lord, I have communed with God.
Let me be with the birds and the flowers
Where I have communed with God.

A QUEER EXPERIENCE.

Do you see the bullet hole in the crown of this sombrero, Nick? Turpin hangs a little too high for you to make yourself comfortable in an easy chair, I'd relate."

Nick stirring the pleasant memories of my friend Raymond, an old telegraph operator, one day a few years, but in experience, for he had worked at the business since I was a child, and had been in many difficult positions, thus having a varied experience from which to draw his stories. The hint he now held in his hand was a chair, and he took it with a leather laid around it, and our cheroots on some of the old days, when made by a bullet.

"You remember, I began, "some ten years ago, I made a trip down the Mississippi, through Texas, Mexico and California. This was partly for health, partly for pleasure, but principally on a business occasion for our house.

"I spent some delightful time in A — Tex., and while there I was sent completely demoralized by a vicious, corrupt a set of gamblers as I ever meet my lot to fall with. These south-western cities of rapid growth, rapid wealth and with a population of adventurers and vicious people collected from many parts of the globe, are just the place, and that I should be, to do their richest pickings; but in this instance they were not so, and I was the victim of a well-organized crime, the government took the case in hand.

"In this quiet northern town you see there is not a vestige of it, but in once a few degrees of latitude can mark in the people and surroundings of human beauty. While traveling through the southern land, it seemed as though I must be in a different country, everything was so horrid and unlike in character.

"About this time there had been considerable trouble along the telegraph lines in that section of the country. I was not employed as a detective by the government to help ferret out the outlaws and robbers, as I was now stepping in A——, they not far to be from other parts, and who were beginning to smell a rat and were keeping under cover.

"In an available community where free-grass are carried on all and where indiscriminately, the arrest of desperate characters is not only not carried out, but dangerous, as he knows birds of a feather," they usually have many friends in covert. In this instance a small posse was selected to arrest the gamblers, and it was agreed that except in a case of emergency I was not to touch the city limits, but simply enter their resorts, spot the men it there, and signal the officers, together.

"The first night we succeeded in arresting one, a faro dealer, and in the conflict—for they had on to taken by main force—I had been obliged to help the officers and this, I suppose, gave the crowd an inkling of my true character. Would not know it, however, if I had not been so imprudent as to make a call and arrest the remainder of the set, who, I discovered, had left the city by the time I had reached the hotel, at the lower part of the town, near the river.

"We had, as we thought, used the stupid precaution, for the men were desperate and would fight, we knew, to the last. The buildings on each street were so close together that there was but room for a single horse, and, while growing more and more squalid till they reached the river, where out of their ground, consisted of groggeries and dance houses. At the back door, we stopped two men, and as either side of the front entrance, in the darkness, we had concealed the posse collected themselves. It was about three, I think, I found the gamblers in the saloon. I was to give a signal at the most opportune moment, when the officers would rush in from both sides and scatter their men before they had a chance to escape or to offer much resistance.

"I then proceeded to, walked up to the bar and called for a glass of liquor. I remarked that the proprietor looked uptilty at me and as I turned back the pistol of one of

THE ACME OF SHAME.

IT WAS REACHED BY THE DEMOCRACY OF MICHIGAN.

When It Stole the Senate of the State and Entered Upon a Career of Pillaging Legislation—The Story Told in Brief.

The Republican state platform condemns the present Democratic administration for its unnecessary to the exclusion of political demagogues, who have used the party organization for their own aggrandisement and have made the interests of the state a secondary consideration. The platform also particularly charges:

As illustrating the methods and practices of the Democratic party we call attention to known facts of the Senate of this state during its last session by unanimity and formerly seeking two members that body by the act of less than a constitutional quorum, and then refusing to do so to secure the infamous Binns law, the most reactionary, oppressive of temperance, sumptuary and legislative enactments, of such class of legislation which is a disgrace to any civilized people.

This is a plank in the platform that the people should read and thoroughly ponder, but also it carefully consider. The facts, that can be brought to substantiate the above charges are sufficient to condemn the present Democratic administration in the opinion of honest, intelligent men.

Patron Members Cheated.

When the Senate of 1891 assembled it contained 18 Republicans, 18 Democrats and 4 Patrons of Industry. The Democrats had the President and their perfected lines organization of the Senate by whipping the Patrons into line, carrying off a Democratic Secretary in return for the latter office the Democrats gave to the Patrons the Sergeant-at-Arms and the Enrolling Clerk. Outside of these two offices, the Democrats promised to share equally in the senate stuff, neither party could pass partisan measures and 18 Patrons held the balance of power. During the first two months of the session the Patrons had shown a tendency to act with the Republicans, which alarmed the Democrats. They soon realized that the success of their scheme to defeat the Republican state of Michigan depended entirely upon the Patrons. Instead of the Senate, for they already possessed the House. How was it done?

Contests Trumped Up.

At the instigation of the Democratic leaders, James H. Morrow and Charles A. Fellheuser, defeated Democratic candidates, contested the seats of Senators Horton and Morse respectively. In the former case it was premeditated that Senator Horton hold the office of postmaster, although he had resigned before election, and in the latter case trumped up charges of irregularities in certain election precincts were alleged. How whatever may have been the merits of the cases either way they never appeared, for both contests were summarily disposed of under orders of Democratic necessity. So far the commissioners had finished their work.

Republicans Shamefully Deceived.

The Republican state convention met last August and on February 24, in accordance with the usage, the Republican members were granted leave of absence to attend. Before accepting the leave, however, Senator Milnes stated that he would not accept, and would insist he could be assured that nothing of a political nature would be brought up and especially that no action would be taken in the contested cases during the absence of the Republican members. Senator Winner in reply stated that he could speak for himself and be assured by other his political associates, and assured Senator Milnes that no such action would be taken. This pledge was given on the floor of the Senate in open session, in the presence of Lieut.-Gov. Strong, and was as strong an agreement as ever made in court before the trial judge. No entry of it was made on the journal, however, the Democratic secretary taking care that nothing should appear on the record to interfere with the Democratic scheme. In the face of absence so granted, the Democrats made a statement of the action of the 32 senators on that memorable day.

Republican Senators at Jackson: Pinsdale, Horton, Milnes, Morse Pitcaide, Stevens, Weiss, Wheeler Willington—18.

Republican senators absent on indefinite leave: Barnwell, Tuan—2.

Republican members present: Sabin, Taylor—2.

Democratic senators present: Beers, Broughner, Crocker, Doran, Gilbert, Holbrook, McCormick, Miller, Mugford, Park, Potter, Sharp, Smith, Visser—14.

Patron senators present: Bastone, Benson, Brown, Wilcox—4.

This shows that only 20 "the senators were present at the opening of the session—14 Democrats, 4 Patrons and 2 Republicans. This is only three more than a quorum necessary to do business. Senator Tuan, a Republican, took his seat a little later, making 3 Republicans in all.

Democratic Infamy Hatched.

The Republican members had scarcely left the capital city, when, in the very midst of the firemen's banquet, on motion of Senator Gilbert, a Democrat, the Senate took a recess of 20 minutes. No necessity existed for such a step, except the need of a little time to hatch up one of the most villainous partisan schemes recorded in the history of American politics. The Democrats slunk into the seclusion of a committee room to do the deed. Twenty minutes were not enough and the Lieutenant-Governor, who had guilty knowledge of the dishonest purposes of his party leaders, allowed the recess to drag on. When semblance of a reporter for the press that his 20 minutes was nearly an hour, he returned to the senate chamber and did not call the Senate to order. He could not have believed that the conspirators were ready for action.

Falsehoods Officially Certified.

As soon as the Senate was called to order, Senator Park, as chairman of the committee to investigate Dr. Spencer's office contest, arose and read what purported to be the report of that committee. That committee consisted of Senators Park, Miller (Democrats), Wilcox, (Patron), Milnes and Garvelink (Republicans). This committee had not been called together to formulate a report, for Wilcox had not been taken into Democratic confidence and Milnes and Garvelink were absent. The Democratic contingent alone knew anything of that so called report, which had been hastily written by the chairman alone, without consultation with the committee. Senator Wilcox protested on the floor of the Senate that no such report had ever been agreed to by the committee and Senators Milnes and Garvelink afterwards positively declared that the committee had never considered the question of a report. Hence the so called report read by Senator Park was an absolute falsehood, conceived for partisan purposes. In spite of Senator Wilcox's protests and Senator Taylor's questions of order on the reception of such a report, both utterly ignored by President Strong, this report, known to be false by every Democratic senator, Lieut.-Gov. Strong and Secretary Murphy, was forced through by the votes of the 14 Democrats against those of the Republicans and Patrons, 7 in number. A resolution, presented by Senator Park, assenting Senator Horton and seating Morrow, was then adopted without a roll call, although Senator Taylor repeatedly demanded the yeas and nays.

Culmination of Fraud.

No sooner was the Morrow-Horton case disposed of than Senator Crocker arose and read a similar report in the Fellheuser-Morse case. The committee in this case consisted of Senators Crocker, Gilbert, (Democrats Business) Taylor and Visser and Pitcaide, (Republicans). The proceedings in this case were the same as in the case of Morrow-Horton. Senator Taylor moved that the report, having been believed by the two Democrats during the recess without any meeting of the committee, also signed by the Republicans were present. Senators Bastone and Taylor vocally challenged the recitation of the 32 senators on that memorable day, after it was found out that they should not be taken in.

That Secretary Murphy, upon whom the rules imposed the duty of keeping "a correct journal of each day's proceedings," disregarding his oath of office in neglecting to enter the rules and says on the journal, in compliance with the rule that "upon any question the names of no senator voted for or against the same, must be entered on the journal unless one man so requires," and also in neglecting to enter on the journal such demand for the yeas and nays and the point of order raised that there was not a quorum present.

That the journal of the Senate, for February 24, 1891, is in no sense "a correct journal of that day's proceedings," but is a record cunningly made to conceal Democratic violations of law, to baffle judicial investigation and to defeat justice.

That every Democratic senator, who voted to adopt these reports, to oust Senators Horton and Morse and to seat Morrow and Fellheuser well knowing the falsity of those reports, lent the sanction of his official action to the furtherance of deliberate falsehood.

That the Senate, in ousting Senators Horton and Morse, without a proper finding of facts by the committee and a formal report of the same, flagrantly violated that clause of the constitution which provides that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property, without due process of law.

That every Democratic senator and officer who advised, abetted or consented to the gross violations of the rules, laws and constitution of the state, involved in the ousting of Senators Horton and Morse, is guilty of a violation of the constitutional oath of office which he took at the organization of the Senate.

THE GRAND OLD MAN AGAIN AT THE HEAD.

Shocking Disaster at Hartford City, Indiana—Leaking Exhaust Pipe Causes Terrible Scalding—Mrs. Lincoln Chosen Grand Master of the Knights Templar.

Three Lives Lost in a Tug Sinking.

An open exhaust pipe caused the sinking of the tug Wilson Sun as she moved into the Lachine Canal, Montreal, Que., and the death by drowning of three firemen. After the tug came to its bank the previous night Captain Larose stuffed some cotton waste into the exhaust pipe and left, satisfied that this was all that was necessary for the safety of his craft. The left on board All Boucharge, aged 30, Alex Bastille, 18, Henry Latour, engineer's son, aged 13 years, and mother and Arthur Latour. The three firemen were killed outright in the cabin. Arthur Latour fell asleep on the deck and was awakened about midnight in the morning by the water, and had barely time to jump on the cabin roof with his mother.

Six Ladies Falling Bricks.

At Hartford City, Ind., the west wall of the one last in the city fell Tuesday afternoon, killing five men and injuring two others slightly. All were buried in the ruins. The dead are: William Farnsworth, Albert Brown, Alexander Moore, John Pummill, Charles Sayers. The injured are Preston Pence, shaw and Cyrus Hadley foreman. The men were at work in the east end of the wall, when it fell in without warning. Foreman Hadley is a mason foreman, and he remembers himself to blame for the accident.

THE scene in the British House of Commons during Thursday evening's first debate and decisive vote on the address has not been equaled in interesting and exciting features since the similar crisis of the home rule bill debate in 1886, when Mr. Gladstone was overturned. Lord Hartington's calm mention of "no confidence" was greeted by a cote of 329 to 310, and the division once more becomes the leading figure in government.

Killed by Two Common Bears.

News comes from Eastons ranch, near Elk City, Idaho, of the death of William Easton, aged 68, who came to Idaho from Cedar City, Ill., in 1880. Two common bears were carrying off some of his cattle and he attempted to drive them away from the carcasses of his cattle. His invalid wife, powerless to help him, was a witness to the horrible affair.

ANTHONY was crowding into Haverhill, Mass., from the suburbs Monday morning a startling announcement was circulated. It was nothing less than a fire in the factory above boiler building and the boiler passed. Instantly there was an explosion which shook the city like an earthquake and pieces of iron flew in all directions. One of the pieces crashed crossward into a shed, stocking a valuable carriage. This was the only damage done. Dennis Brennan, the fireman, had a narrow escape but sufficient water in his hissing engine boiler on the wharf when it let loose. It individually wrecked the shed where it was located, and spread the fire. Another 1,000 was of property belonging to Brands' employers.

PASSED THE FAIR BILL.

THE HOUSE DISPOSES OF THE MATTER EFFECTUALLY.

A Motion to Recommit Made and Easily Defeated—Colonel Cockran Talks for the Exposition—The Vote Stood 151 Yeas 83 Nays.

Voted the $2,500,000.

The House has passed the amended Lorimer Chicago World's Fair bill by a vote of 151 yeas to 83 nays. The bill was signed by the Speaker as soon as the result was announced and was immediately sent over to the Senate. As passed the bill gives outright to the Columbian Exposition $2,500,000 on condition that the doors be closed on Sundays. The pledges made to the friends of the Fair were kept in every instance.

At noon Friday the House resumed, in committee of the whole, the consideration of the bill. Mr. Cummings, of New York, opened the opposition with a bitter speech against a proposition which he characterized as one which was intended to be the death blow to the World's Fair proposition now before the House. He said it was apparent that it was difficult to tell which was the World's Fair and which was the discriminating. The remarks of Messrs Cummings had covered the floor so that it could hardly be told whether the present Congress or the best-lung of former Congresses was the subject. It was a matter of pride with him that he had voted against every appropriation. It was appropriation.

Mr Fellows of New York eloquently supported the bill. The work, he said, was a convenant, a sacred trust. The idea of the fair had been born in Congress. It was by Congress that it was begun. It was to the finish it was a governmental work.

The debate continued until 1 o'clock, when all of the charges of collusion and corruption were hurled at the Committee on Appropriations, which, at 1 o'clock the chairman of the committee, in a very pathetic speech, gave the order of the House the constitutional right to vote upon the bill. The bill was then reported to the House. The amendments were all of a character to which no objection had been offered by the friends of the bill. It provided that the World's Fair should be open the first section of the bill. It provided that the World's Fair should be open the first section of the bill. It provided that the World's Fair should be open the first section Men of Traverse City's gentlest landlords, Peter Bourdeau by name, and proprietor of the Canada house, not being satisfied with the profits realized from his hotel, resolved to invest a few of his hard earned dollars in something that three was more profit in. Putting his resolution into action he invested a trifle found for New York where he met a couple of gentlemen who soon convinced Mr. Bourdeau that in their business there was a fortune for him. He at once counted them out $800 for which he was to receive $12,000 worth of their goods, to be shipped to Traverse City per express. Mr. B. returned to his home with a light heart to await the arrival of his fortune. It came one day, and was delivered to Mr. B. who carried it to his private office where the contents were examined and to his astonished eyes he beheld two one dollar bills and a box full of pasteboard. Mr. B. appealed to the city marshal for aid to recover his money but that gentleman informed him that it was gone. He has also written to the chief of police of New York.

How to Be a Nice Fellow.

Always tap and adapt yourself to circumstances. When you go to a Chautauqua do as the chautauqua does, drink and be merry. A sermon may not go place as a clambake. When you go to a funeral, do as the mourners do, be quiet and sympathetic; a jester is out of place at a funeral. In company sing and play as you find others doing, and then sing and play methods of your own. This is what makes a man a nice fellow or life around."—Philadelphia Ledger.

Prof. T. O'Conor Sloan, in the course of a scientific lecture the other day, told his your auditors how to blow soap bubbles. In substance his directions were: Take a long chimney—one which is straight up and down—fill one end in a solution of soap and water until a flat disk of film covers the end. Blow gently till the bubble is started. Then remove the chimney slowly and broken from the lips still continue blowing gently. Bubbles may glass bubbles can be blown without submitting the blower. The addition of a little glycerine to the soap and water is very advantageous.

A Republican caucus for the Township of Marion will be held at the Town Hall on the 30th of August, 1892, at 2 o'clock p. m., to appoint one delegate to the County Convention. By order of Committee.

State Teachers Institute.

The State Teachers' Institute for Charlevoix County will be held at Charlevoix, commencing at 10 o'clock, a. m., Monday, August 29, and closing at 4 p. m., Friday, Sept. 2. Henry M. Enos, Charlevoix, Local Committee; Prof. I. N. Demmon, University of Michigan, Conductor.

The value of the instruction received at these institutes is being very generally recognized by teachers and school officers. As a rule, it has been the experience of County Examiners and other examining officers, that the most successful teachers are those who have availed themselves of the normal instruction offered by these local institutes.

The daily sessions of the institute for this year will, as here-tofore, be devoted exclusively to topics of special interest to teachers, prescribed by persons of extended personal experience as teachers, and who have made a special study of institute work. The evening lectures will be of a popular character.

The institute law allows teachers whose schools are in session at the time appointed for the County Institute, shall under the direction of the State Superintendent, to close their schools during the continuance of such institute without forfeiting their wages for as many half-days as they are in attendance at the institute. This provision of law, and the fact that there will be no enrollment of tuition fee exacted, should insure the attendance of every teacher in the county who possesses the true professional spirit.

Full particulars in regard to board, etc., may be obtained upon application to the local committee.

—Advices from Traverse City are to the effect that Jas. Mr. Manchester is lying about in the shade of Mr. Harsha's farm and eating all the peaches of the trees.

—Mr. and Mrs. Clayden returned from their wedding trip Saturday. They were accompanied home by Mr. Clayden's mother, who will remain with them some time.

—One of the largest fleets of vessels that ever arrived here at one time came in Monday morning. Twelve came within an hour, and kept the tugs busy disposing of them. Two more arrived during the day.

—E. H. Green desires the names of all who are going to attend the National Encampment of the G. A. R. at Washington, D. C. Special train leaves Charlevoix Sept. 8th. Tickets will be on sale from Sept. 13 to Sept. 23, inclusive.

—Captain Weatherbee, owner and master of the Thomas Friand, will take his boat to Chicago about the latter part of September, where he will run it during the World's Columbian Exposition. He will also remove his family there.

—After a most marvelous display of fluff, our friend of the Democrat acknowledges that the SENTINEL election figures were correct, but remains on his perch to the extent of claiming them entirely satisfactory from a Democratic standpoint.

—Next week Mr. Wm. Kanagy, Misses Alice and Artie and Rev. J. I. Kanagy leave for Elburn Ill., where they will reside. Mr. Kanagy goes into the hardware and the business there with his brother-in-law. There will be much genuine regret in Charlevoix at the departure of this worthy family.

—David Lindley, employed in the Charlevoix Lumber Company's factory, met with a painful accident yesterday. While at work about one of the machines the second finger of his left hand was caught in a pinion, smashing it so badly that Dr. LaPorte was compelled to amputate it close to the hand.

—That Northport Indian band should have attended the Charlevoix tournament. The result might have been different. It is a marvelous organization, equipped with a most extraordinary array of musical talent, and exhibiting a technique rare—very rare in points of instrumentation and tone, they equal if, indeed, they do not excel all white organizations in this section. Attack, marvelous; symphony, enchanting; cadence, parsplaying; expression, very expressive; time, very simultaneous. The battery section was strikingly responsive and the base section remarkably successful in effective accentuation. It is a great band.

—Annual School meeting Sept. 5. Don't forget it.

—The Methodist Sunday School picnic is postponed one week on account of the weather.

—The C. & W. M. R. R. Co. last week had a photographic car here with a corps of photographers, taking views for the use of the advertising department.

—A force of Western Union telegraph men under Foreman Cullen, have been employed here the past week rebuilding the city wires, at an expense of about $400. The No. 1 railroad wire and the No. 2 commercial wire are now in the city office and next spring a second commercial wire will be put in, which will give Charlevoix first class telegraph facilities.

—Saturday, a request was wired to our authorities from Oden a lumbering town north of Petoskey, to send the sheriff down, as the words about the mills were in flames. The hand engine was sent, but it was not deemed wise to deprive ourselves entirely of fire-protection. The extensive plant of the Northern Michigan Lumber Co. was entirely wiped out, entailing a loss of about $150,000.

—The plasterers have taken possession of Mr. H. N. Faulkner's fine new Main street residence. When they leave it the windows will be boarded up, and the building will be left until the spring of 1894, as Mr. Faulkner's business in Chicago will keep him there until after the World's Fair. When completed this will be the finest residence in Charlevoix county and one of the best in Northern Michigan.

—Peter Klein, Milwaukee agent of the Northern Michigan Line recently declined a tender of the general agency of the Lightening Transit Line at Chicago. When asked his reasons for refusing the tempting offer, he replied that in addition to that are of a large family comfortably located in Milwaukee he considered himself too old to transplant. Hence an active business man from Minneapolis was secured for the position.

—Peter Greensky, an Indian resident of Hayes, met his death from jumping off the train near Bay Shore Monday night. Greensky and his wife went to the depot from the camp meeting grounds to take the 6.35 train to Bay Shore. Deceased remembered that he had forgotten something, and returned for it, his wife going on. He probably took the regular evening train, which does not stop at Bay Shore, and jumped off. Yesterday morning his body was found in the ditch, with a hole in his head, and other injuries. He was a sober and industrious Indian.

We have been acres and acres of tobacco growing in the Miami Valley, in Ohio, but we never saw finer tobacco growing anywhere than Lewis Evers has on his farm. The leaves on some of the stalks are three feet long and two feet in breadth at the base. Mr. Evers informed us that he has raised tobacco for his own use for several years. Tobacco raising can be made profitable in this county, but the using of the stuff is "mahsty."

John Brown had sixty-five acres of grain to harvest this season, and his yard full of stacks looks like business.

John Leisch unloaded a new traction engine and Port Huron operator at Bay Shore last Saturday and will be ready to thresh for the farmers in short notice.

Mark Sausby sold Mr. Leish his threshing outfit. Mr. Sausby sold thirty four of the same outfits in North Dakota a couple of years ago.

The Indian Camp Meeting

The most successful occasion of its kind that has ever occurred in the history of Indian Mission work, was the annual camp meeting held at the grounds two miles north-east of this village last Thursday, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Not only is this true as regards the number in attendance, but also in the deep interest taken, and results attending it. There were 500 Indians in attendance, coming from distant points, as far north as Lake Superior and as far south as Isabella county. The Methodist Indians from all points in Northern Michigan were here in force. The attendance of white people at all the services was large, especially Sunday, and the beautiful lake-side grove was crowded from Thursday morning until well toward Monday morning. The traditional "pelgwam" was conspicuous by its absence, and nestled under the maples were commodious canvas tents, fronting which burned the camp-fires, and about which were grouped the Indian families—constituting a picture long to be remembered by those unacquainted to participation in such occasions. At night, when the camp fires threw out their ruddy glow, the tombs about the preachers' stand flickering here and there, and the Ojibway prayers were awakening the echoes of the forest and lake, none but the most indifferent could fail to be deeply impressed.

The meetings were under the general management of Rev. D. S. Ball, who presided three times during the meetings. Rev. Mr. McCorkle, of Indiana conference preached once, and sermons in the Ojibway language were preached by Rev. John Kewaygoshk, the pastor in charge of this mission, and Hev. T. C. Thomas, (Nah-be-nawash), of Munising, Alger Co., an ordained minister of education and refinement, and for two years a student of Albion college. He was accompanied by his wife, a lady of intelligence and grace. Both are interesting characters, as illustrating the elevating power of Christianity among the Indian race. Others, whose names we did not learn, preached eloquent sermons.

The prayer services were marked by an earnestness and fervor, and by an apparent eloquence of petition that evidenced a deep and growing religious sentiment among these people.

On Sunday morning three hundred Indians participated in the love feast. The closing scenes of the meeting were most affecting. Early Monday morning the Indians formed a great circle about the grounds, with the preachers stand in the front-center, and with locked hands joined in a number of old hymns of praise, the Indian band joining in. At the close of the singing, they passed a unanimous vote of thanks to the writes for their kindness, embraced and separated to depart to their homes.

Of course there are bad Indians, as there are bad white men; and they were here the same as in the old time camp-meetings when the ungodly hung around the camp to gratify their depraved instincts. Some of these Indians, after the manner of their white friends, got drunk and some of them brought up in the Charlevoix jail. But those in charge state that no disturbance worthy of note occurred, and the utmost satisfaction is expressed at the good will shown by the whites, and the means of trade all supplied.

It has been decided by the Committee that the Charlevoix grounds be made the permanent place of meeting, and further improvements made.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lucas Malet

CHAPTER VII.

Brian and Margaret returning, and putting down the hack he had hired by the way, to road, he went into the hall to meet her. Expressing her nervousness at his unexpected appearance, she paused as he came up to her with the words:

"You have been on long, Margaret. Did you enjoy your visit so much? Why didn't you let Mrs. Bayard know, and give me just a little of your company, I wonder? Not much chance I can get away to-morrow."

"I meant to write," she stammered, her eyes fixed on her feet. "I forgot, I was so tired."

"Taking this for indifference, Brian continued, after a brief pause: "I dare say I shall never see you again if course you will not regret that, but there I go, I should like to know that you forgive me. If you only knew how I have suffered! I can't expect you to feel it, I still, suffer, you would be kinder. It is so hard to lose all, Margaret."

"Have I been so unkind? I am sorry. Now I am tired, I feel as if I regret, with a bitterness I cannot express, the sensitiveness which makes me laughed at! There is any way—"

"Do you mean that? Do you passionate regrets? You do me injustice. I am suppose I was alluding to your money? I hate the very mention of it. I leave it out of the question. I am thinking of you."

She lifted her foot with her riding whip, and despite the effort to control her emotion, he saw that it trembled. Her spirits, passed over her. Yet, in spite of herself, she felt a pang of pity for him, and remember your hardness to me. I only the very children who speak to me as you talk. They make life happy without your love. I cannot. You need not look your dislike, I feel. I am doomed to offend you on each since I saw you in Lady Jane's drawing room, evil late led me, that I feel as sacrifice would be less great for your sake."

"Isn't the sensation a novel one?" she asked, steeled to hardness by some strange resentment.

"Perhaps it is, I believe. Margaret, I remember your hardness to me.

Brian ground his heel with an exclamation of impatience. "I had no right to hope," he answered bitterly. "You will not see it. Good-bye! Take me if you will, but don't allow such contemptuous indifference."

"It is not charitable to hate, and forgetting Jane and her loss, I wish you might wish."

"No," he replied, rising to to confer, "I have something to remember, too." Then, passionately:

"You are generous," was her passionate answer. "You are generous, and I allow no one to—"

"Good-bye, Margaret, not yet. I can't do it. Forgive me if I have wronged you! I just said, I meant nothing. I spend half my time in regretting what has gone before. I cannot stand your gone. Why is it that the generous by your nature turned against me only?"

"I do not know," she answered, half absently, while her face softened visibly. "Perhaps it is because I am so."

"Nothing that you will grant, unless, perhaps, it is inconsistent with what you to-morrow. Will you allow me that pleasure?"

"I rode early," she answered with hesitation, "but if you care to forego your morning nap I have no objection."

"Thank you. I will see how you up with you, if I feel it difficult to put up with myself."

"Not about me," said Margaret, quickly. "I hear Cousin Brian. He could prove an interruption. Besides, I must see to our plunder, you know."

She was more than Brian proved the room a second later.

Turned her absence, and his look of disappointment reflected his feelings.

"I wish you good-bye," he said, as she passed the old lady, calling him to set inside her.

CHAPTER VII.

A STORMY EVENING.

Margaret was standing in a veritable shower of sunbeams, when Brian arrived at Bayard's Cottage, and he saw the trees

"Is not this a wonderfully charming," he cried, gazing, not as the foregoing, upon table, but at the sunlight, "I wish you could see it! Nature is always some surprise. What a delightful surprise you are, Margaret! Why, I am almost happy!"

"You seem a peculiar way of expressing yourself, Cousin Brian. Are sunbeams and happiness associated in your mind? I am glad you can laugh. Doleful people give me the blues, and grim looks are not in keeping with this bright place."

"Neither is my heart, for that matter. I have so much to make me miserable. You, everything to make you happy."

"Yes, I am very, with a slight frown. "I make my own happiness."

"I wish you could make me happy," he returned gloomily. "I never get what I want."

"Then why be satisfied with what you get? It is a great, great, pity, indeed."

"How can you speak so lightly," he said with abrupt warmth. "A needless pain, a wrong done, a life spoiled, and to do with misery? Are you always so? Do you never feel above the mere fling of regret?"

"I try to be more careful," she said with some pathos, "since I saw the effect of my light words on the table cloth, and the dish in our tap boat. I wonder will you ever understand."

"And I wonder why you are so heartless, so hard, so indifferent to my misery, and to the pain you have caused me?"

"Because I am not a fool," was the warm reply. "A warm-hearted, generous man has the chance and power to shape the land, cold man your grandfather was, women be could breathe the same atmosphere with him."

"He was your grandfather, too," remarked Brian, rather meekly.

"I don't care to remember his relationship. Please don't speak of him. I remind me whenever he behaves so unkindness, and that unless I am after possession of Bayard's Cottage, I am going home to-morrow."

"Will you? Shall I see you?"

"Perhaps, if you are good."

"Shall I see you in the morning?"

"I shall be very busy, and quite, I fear, I remember your hardness to me."

"Will you? Shall I see you?"

"Perhaps, if you are good." Revert to the position to have, I don't know, you put up with me, when I feel it so difficult to put up with myself.

"Not about me," said Margaret, quickly. "I hear Cousin Brian. He could prove an interruption. Besides, I must see to our plunder, you know."

She was more than Brian proved the room a second later.

Turned her absence, and his look of disappointment reflected his feelings.

"I wish you good-bye," he said

EX-GOV. JOHN STRONG,

SUT HIS ODOROUS RECORD CANNOT BE IGNORED.

His Congressional Blunderfulness Pony His Origin and His State—His Settlement with the Alliance Or Power Politics—The Enlightened Agricultural Mind.

Five weeks, alone, blunderfulness the Democratic president of Congressional Senate said to a reporter, "I am not a candidate. I am not of politics." His party has not spoken. Has it so much. Notwithstanding the fact that he expressed himself adverse at the convention to such a little breach of conscience for changing all his party, his fellow state believed upon him the command for duty partisan over his inclinations retirement to private life.

Is his party certainly will disposed to the political reward of a man who has sought to make the state into disposition of Michigan, which the party established by long years of sacrifice and labor, and which never been so hundred to the cause of its citizens as it has by John Strong. So he may consistently doubt into the valley of Democracy, and he may be with his conscience hearing the cheers of the Democrats.

But a person with clear sense, who knows the Democratic leaders intimately, and who has been a Democrat in party, his office and his conscience, and who has not recorded with him in those platforms they make no distinction between the Democrat of 1891 in their platform of that year, and the Democrat of 1892 in their platform of this year, such a person is disposed to be dismissed, however of Congressman, and the honorable gentleman with some profit. Such a person will be disposed to give Democratic leaders another chance to show Michigan what they can do with the state. He Long lines of freight cars pulled slowly out of Buffalo that day Thursday. On top of each load was a squad of twenty-five soldiers, who remained with the train until it was safely past the danger points. It is in that way that the railroads have been able to do some business, and it is in that way that a new complication is likely to be caused. There is no question that the force of armed men has struck the firemen and trainmen hard. Firemen are feeling it. An engineer seems to be all they need for going out, and in the use of soldiers to guard the trains they think they see a means of replacing them. They have a strong feeling against firemen and trainmen to handle any train guarded by the regular militia. What will be done then is a big question.

Baker Has Resigned.

W. T. BAKER is no longer President of the World's Columbian Exposition. His resignation was received by the board of lineage Thursday afternoon and accepted. It was tiperative in its form, and was voted on without a dissenting vote. Immediately after the vote of acceptance H. N. Higinbotham, First Vice President of the Exposition, was nominated for the place, the motion of Mr. Odell, to succeed Mr Baker. Upon motion of Mr. Hepburn, Chairman of the Committee on Buildings and Grounds, was selected to fill the position of First Vice President, vacated by Mr. Higinbotham.

Regulated the Miners.

IT was reported at Knoxville, Tenn., Thursday night that the soldiers stopped 1,000 miners at Coal Creek. It is said that twelve miners are dead and nearly twenty wounded. The fight began at 9 o'clock p.m. Gen. Anderson's little force, stationed in Holden Coal Creek until the arrival of the First and Second Regiments of the Guard, had a force of 3,000 men under six sheriffs, who were sent on special trains to the relief and rescue of Fort Anderson. It was the remaining men, who had not deserted outside the three tips flag of truce, and [illegible]

Love of Duties Turned His Fall.

STANLEY A. AUSTEN, the young paymaster of the Lake Shore Company, was arrested at Cleveland, Ohio, for embezzlement. He is accused of falsifying the pay rolls of the company during the past three years, and confessed to having taken $20,000, and the real amount will probably be greater. Fast living is the cause of his downfall. A few days ago he purchased an interest in the great paper El Monarch, and when arrested he was preparing to go to Chicago with a heavy sum of money in his inside pocket. He had left the country.

Nominated at Davenport.

THE Iowa Democracy held their State convention at Davenport on Thursday, and nominated the following ticket:

For Secretary of State, J. A. McCONNELL.
For Auditor, CHARLES BRYANT.
For Treasurer, CHARLES RUSNEY.
For Attorney General, CHARLES A. ROBINSON.
For Railroad Commissioner, W. W. WILLIAMS.
For Elector at large, H. W. WILMER, [illegible]

NEWS NUGGETS.

GOVERNOR BUCHANAN of Tennessee is said to be improving rapidly, and his death may occur at any hour.

FIVE children were turned to death at Griffith, Ind., Thursday morning in a house while their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Ellis, went to church. It is thought the house was purposely set on fire. When the fames were discovered it was too late to rescue the children.

THE remains of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of Sons of St. George showed up at Chicago Wednesday night. As a consequence important to the constitution, providing for the admission of the Grand Lodge every three years, was favorably passed upon. It has also been submitted to other Grand Lodges by the Grand Lodge of the state.

ARTICLES for incorporation of a Jackson wheat trust have been filed in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton, N. J. The company will be known as the Jackson Wheat Trust Milling Company, and will have a capital of $5,000,000. The incorporators are David Jones and Joseph A. Jones, of New York, William and Noah, of Brooklyn, and Isaac W. McCutchen.

THE Kansas Republican convention at Milwaukee nominated the following ticket: Governor, John C. Spooner; Lieutenant Governor, John C. Koch; Secretary of State, Isaac N. Jackson; State Treasurer, Alley Potter; Attorney General, James O'Neill; Superintendent Public Instruction, W. J. Chandler; Railroad Commissioner, J. D. Rigdon; Insurance Commissioner, James E. Hogg.

I. BEN DENNIS and Henry Carnegie, two Deadwoods of Hunch and Hagwood, the noted Southern bandits, have been captured and jailed in Franklinton, La. Carnegie confessed that he was connected in the Illinois Central Railroad robbery near Hunch and Hagwood. The stolen property aforesaid of Hunch and Hagwood are not known. Some think the bandits are hiding in the swamps of the Pearl River, and others think they have fled the country.

THE People's party of Ohio has made the following nominations for State officers: Secretary of State, J. S. Thayer; Supreme Court Judge, E. D. Stark; J. D. Lyons; Circuit Court Judge, Ira Bolles; Board Public Works, James Brown.

CAPTAIN SAMUEL JONES, Republican candidate for Congress in the Third Indiana District, has challenged W. R. Holman to three joint debates in each of the eight counties in the district during the campaign. It is understood Mr. Holman will accept.

EASTERN.

The Seventy-fourth Regiment, S. N. G., has been called out to protect the Central and West Shore property at Buffalo, it being feared that the switchmen on those roads may go out. The Sixty-fifth Regiment was sent to keep newspaper guard the Lehigh Valley and Erie yards. The two regiments, when they reached the scene of the difficulty found everything quiet. The Central officials made a demand on the Sheriff for protection, but this is considered a precautionary measure.

BENJAMIN SHERARD, of the New York Mail and Express, urges that all railroads agree to make, on certain days at each week during the World's Fair, a uniform rate of 5 cents for all points within a radius of 1,500 miles of Chicago, So simple even the proposal paid laborer to afford to take his family to the big show. It is calculated that if the rates were placed at $1 the railroads could afford to carry them on excursion trains, on the basis that a large number of passengers would reduce the actual cost of the bulk tonnage to 20 cents per head.

A BUFFALO dispatch says. All the switchmen in the employ of the New York Central, railroad struck at midnight Tuesday. General Superintendent Voorhees was asked to grant the new scale and refused. Switchmen on the West Shore are expected to go out at any moment.

TENNESSEE's convict lease system may be considered almost as good as abolished. It was not done by the processes of legislation but by mob strike, supplemented by a rush. Torching they saw the limp form of a male man upon the sidewalk in front of the Cleveland Hotel. The dead man's name was Johan Kirrett, a book peddler. He weighed 245 pounds. He was out of work.

WESTERN.

THOMAS DIVINE, of Jeffersonville, Ind., has been arrested on the charge of grand larceny. He is wanted in Texas at the instance of the Game and Fish Club. Edson had been thrown into the river in large quantities at a point near Burr River and the bodies were then drawn by the wagon load.

ALBERT WATSON, a young man, shot Mrs. Peter Wall and Ira Wall, the wife and son of a business man of Elmira, Cal., while they were driving through Tennessee pass. Tuesday. He died instantly and his mother was badly wounded. It is said the sons of the brothers who have been having difficulty with the Wall family over water rights, which the courts decided in favor of the Wells.

F. J. SCHMEISNEMEYER, geologist and mineralogist of Hiles, died Tuesday at Ogden, Utah. He has been employed in the United States mint at Boise, Idaho, himself, which is a series of geological bulletins of Idaho, and in other as area merely as large, though not so thick, as the Swiss Alps and half of the Alps. The glaciers are located about twenty-five miles northeast of Boise and a number of high peaks not known on the map.

ATCHSON, Ohio, forty policmen were arrested, charged with adulterating milk. For once time the inspector has been investigating the milk supplied to the people of Atchson and found it to be watered. Thereupon the Judge called the attention of the police to the infamous conspiracy. The policmen pleaded that they were ordered to do it by their superiors, and forays have been let off with a fine of $1 and costs.

THE Canadian Fisheries Department has issued a notice to the effect that the mackerel catch of the New England fishing fleet is 1,500 barrels in 29,000 barrels, against 11,000 barrels last year and 5,000 in 1890.

THE entry has been denied a flag and staff imported by the steamer Britannic and said to be intended for the Aquila Alabaud of Chicago, a duty incorporated charitable institution. This notice by the collector of customs at New York has been ratified by the Treasury Department.

THE National encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic to be held in the fall of 1892, but where has not yet been decided, although it is probable that Indianapolis will be chosen as the place. A party of Indianapolis G. A. R. men were in Chicago on the other day conferring with Col. J. A. Sleeper, R. B. Dimmick, Guy F. Gundy, W. C. King, and A. J. Burbank, all of Grand Army prominence. The subject of the encampment was discussed in the Republican headquarters. It is understood that it is held in Indianapolis, Washington were suggested by Mr. King, to be prepared to use every force at his command to support the claim of Indianapolis. At the meeting of the Grand Army of the Republic in Washington last year a resolution was unanimously adopted declaring that, as the World's Fair would take up all the time, thought, and money in the Republic, it would be impossible the welcome and hospitality which the Grand Army men would desire to show to the members of the Southern Confederacy, and as the Indiana department desired the encampment of 1893, the good body approved of the proposal to hold the encampment in Indianapolis, and requested the Illinois delegates to vote for Indianapolis as the place for holding the encampment of 1893.

G. Q. DUN & COMPANY'S weekly review of trade says:

Crop reports all not quite up to expectations, and are construed as indicating a reduction of yield of corn and oats, which is somewhat deficiency in wheat and cotton. Yet there is no real cause for alarm. Wheat prices have advanced quite sharply, and exports of domestic products fell far short of last year's, but great industries are all doing remarkably well, excepting cotton manufacturers, who have lost money in July. Nine hundred weekly failures in July, 1891, were 1,900 in July, 1890, and 1,500 in July, 1889, and liabilities were about one-fourth larger than in 1890, and 15,000 more than the month of July, and 40 per cent, exceeded 1,000,000 times. Southern pig iron is pressed for sale, and Southern mills are shut down. Wool is dull, and prices are lower. Business in Western iron works which have settled their differences with the men, would make a great change in the situation at Pittsburgh, if other works do not. Cotton is probably the demand still more. Merchants have found it hard to meet the active demand, many all the works in operation being crowded with orders. There is no market to speak of for cotton, but in the textile industries the outlook is very good. Manufacturers are to buy at wool freely. Boot and shoe factories are still pressed to the utmost.

WEATHER FORECASTS.

WHAT PROPHET FOSTER HAS TO SAY.

A Dangerous Rise in the Lower West of the Mississippi—Cooler Weather Ahead.

The Corn Crop Will Have Abundant Time to Mature.

Special to the Sentinel.

My last bulletin gave forecasts of the storm wave to cross the continent from September 7 to 9, and the next will reach the Pacific coast about September 6, cross the Western mountains by the close of the 7th, the great central valleys from 8th to 10th, and the Eastern states about the 11th.

This will be a dangerous storm wave of the Mississippi River on the 7th and 8th, and tornadoes and hail may be expected. This disturbance will cross general rains, and with it the drought will be broken in the west.

Light frosts may be expected in Montana, the Dakotas and Minnesota from the date of my last bulletin, but the main cool wave will cross the Western mountains about the 5th, the great central valleys about the 11th, and the Eastern States about the 13th. This cool wave will usually cause showers. After this disturbance September 9 will give us an average temperature and two periods of severe storms. Frosts will be late and not severe.

Northern corn crops will have an abundance of time to mature, and September will be cooler, but it will be later than which matures in August.

Weather changes move from west to east. Cool wave and storms which will be at Denver on the 7th will be within 250 miles of New York on the 10th, the great central valleys about the 11th, and the Eastern States about the 13th. This cool wave will usually cause showers. After this disturbance September 9 will give us an average temperature and two periods of severe storms. Frosts will be late and not severe.

Northern corn crops will have an abundance of time to mature, and September will be cooler, but it will be later than which matures in August.

Good Roads.

Norwood Mich., Aug. 25, 1892.

By Fay Sanford.

Editor and I hand you an article on roads in it appeared in the Daily Inter Ocean, Tuesday, Aug. 23rd, 1892. Having been an agitator of this all important subject for years, I wish to say to you that in my opinion there is nothing of so much importance or that will do so much for the further development of this, the choicest part of God's best garden, as good roads. I was gratified when our friends from Charlevoix say, "you have the best roads between Charlevoix and Northwest that we have found anywhere." It is because we spend money on it and work it. Not a great deal to be sure, but it only goes to show what a little money judiciously expended can do by your will do, and I trust that the readers of your valuable paper will ask less one so much for the benefit of Northern Michigan, will be impressed on by the article of the Inter Ocean, that societies will be formed and the roads generally improved all through the length and breadth of the state, and in Charlevoix and Antrim counties in particular, and that rows of ornamental shade trees will be planted on either side of the road, which add early land beauty, but add value by being farm upon which they are planted.

Respectfully Yours
GEO. H. VAN DYKE.

There be three things," said the great lord Bacon, "that make a man great and prosperous—a fertile land, busy worships, and easy conveyance for men and commodities from one place to another."

The first and second of these requisites are great. We possess in abundance that, and the busy work shops are increasing continually in increasing. In the third it is sadly defective. The roads are south certainly do not have much attention paid to them and commodities from one place to another. They are treated too much to their fortunes, forgetful that railways must have receivers of travel that comes along innumerable lines of highways. Many a farmer who lives three miles from the nearest railway station spends more time and worries himself more in conducting produce in traveling fifty miles after he has reached it. It often takes more to haul a load of corn from farm to the railway than to carry it a hundred miles after it is placed on the cars. It often takes a longer time to go for and come back with a bushel of newspaper from the nearest postoffice than it does for the farmer to come from its starting place to the office.

Many a plow goes unrepaired, many a needed piece of farm work and guidance during the long winter months and forms a needless part of the season's work in getting ready for the spring operations, because of the bad, impassable roads between the farm and the store or the shop. Country merchants lose trade, farmers lose money by inability to take advantage of a temporary rise or fall in the price of produce because of roads impassable, nothing considerable can be taken from or brought to the farm for weeks. There are whole counties which can not find role with despotic authorities, who converts the tracks that are dignified by the name of roads into impassable swamps, frost heaves the mud into ridges and ruts, and no horse can travel without danger of lameness and serious injury, no heavy weight can travel. The loss to the farmers and country merchants of the South and West must be counted by hundreds of thousands but by millions annually, and it is quite probable that the money millions would be needed to expend.

It is true that vigorous work, and work that is as intelligent as it is vigorous, should be done in remedy of the evil condition into which we have fallen. Every road district should have its priority for it. Improvement of highways, every county should have its central committee with where the district societies can confer, and every state should have its yearly convention of societies. The questions of drainage of road beds of the gravel, of finding gravel, stone, or other material for construction, and of the comparative merits of roads built by road corporations that can buy out, or by county taxes, or by State aid, should be carefully discussed. The interest of the public in this important matter should be stimulated by frequent communications in the newspapers, both those of the county seats and those which, like the Inter Ocean have a circulation extensive enough to cover the domain of the public.

During the winter season farmers have much enforced leisure; they can employ a part of it to no better purpose than in striving to organize a movement for road improvement. The Inter Ocean invites those of its readers who have anything to suggest to use its columns for the purpose; it is for real reforms of all kinds, and for road reform especially.

During the remainder of the season the advisory Editorship will call at Frontwater going to and from Chicago.

Republican County Ticket.

At the Republican County Convention held in this village to-day, the following ticket was nominated:

Sheriff—F. P. Myers.
Clerk—Willis Kerns.
Treasurer—H. B. Hipp.
Reg. Deeds—Fred. W. Mayne.
Judge of Probate—A. J. Strond
Register—John Ward.
Surveyor—David Hoffman.
Coroner—Elmer Small, Dr. Foster.

The choice of the Republican Congressional Convention at Clare was in every respect a wise one. The nominee, Dr. John Avery of Greenville is well equipped for the duties for which the party have selected him. Mr. Avery was born in Watertown, N. Y., in the year 1824. The same year Michigan was added to the galaxy of states. Mr. Avery sought a home within its borders. He attended a medical school at Cleveland, Ohio from which he graduated in 1845, and has been in continual practice from that date. At the breaking out of the war, or soon thereafter, Dr. Avery went to the front as a surgeon of the Twenty-first Michigan, where he remained until 1865. In 1867 he came to Greenville and the people treated him so kindly that he has remained every since. Mr. Avery was elected a member to the State legislature in 1879 which position he had for two years. He has in the past also served in many important positions of honor and trust, among them being member of school board, member of city council and supervisor of the. First Ward for eleven continuous years, which position he still holds. He is also president of the State board of health having been appointed to the position in 1884. Mr. Avery is a member of the Masonic order. He is also a prominent member of the Episcopal church. In politics Mr. Avery is a Republican of the stalwart type.

People afflicted with chronic diseases of any form or nature, should consult Dr. McDonald, the famous specialist, at the Fountain City House The doctor remains from Monday, Aug 29 to Monday, Sept. 12. Dr. McDonald's skill in the treatment of chronic diseases is simply marvelous. He takes patients who have been given up to die and restores them to health and happiness. Dr. McDonald is not only thoroughly educated in all the schools of medicine, but he is singularly gifted by nature, be able to read at a glance all conditions of the patient's mind or body without asking any questions. He reads diseases like an open book, and has made a special study, both in this county and in Europe, of those obscure, delicate and nervous diseases of all sexes. Come and get relief and be benefited at once. Consultation free. Office at Fountain City House.

Local News.

H. S. Hearshow and wife are among their old friends here.

Mr. McLean has Chas. Arnold's new house on Dixon Avenue, well along.

At the school meeting Monday night, O. S. Washburn was re-elected Assessor.

—Bert Mason was the first to ship bark here by rail. Several car-loads last week from the south.

—The Charlevoix postoffice receipts for last month were $70 larger than the same month a year ago.

—John Ackert and the rest of the boys, had a visit from their cousin, W. S. Fisk, of Oakland county.

—Last week Chas. Swadlow, who has been here a week visiting friends, sold his residence on the South terrace, to Silas Baker.

—New advertisements this week: A. T. Washburne, F. G. Hines & Co., and Bailey & Collins, the new meat market men. Look them up.

—Dr. H. G. Hall and wife, of Pigeon, O., are visiting H. Lee Iddings and wife. Mrs. Hall is a sister of the late Rev. J. T. Iddings.

—Mrs. Allen Clark, the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Greer, of Morton, died at her home in Evelina, yesterday, aged 22 years.

—Mrs. Clarrissa Vealy and Mrs. Cynthia Berdan, the former a sister and the latter a sister-in-law of Capt. Berdan, are here visiting the old veteran.

—Mrs. Radford, of Hastings, is here visiting her brother, Geo. O. Scott. Also Mrs. Brock and son, of Barry county, sister and nephew of Mrs. Scott.

—The boilers for the water works plant are on a side track—in fact the entire job seems to be side-tracked. The well contract has been let to a concern in Ithaca, N. Y.

—Chas. Bailey, of Maple Grove, Barr Co., is here visiting his friend Geo. O. Scott. The interesting party of it is, Bailey and Scott endured the horrors of Andersonville prison together.

—Geo. Burns and wife were sorely stricken last Thursday by the death of their little daughter, aged five years. The funeral services were held at the residence Saturday, and were largely attended.

—A gentleman who has traveled in every western state, recently remarked to the SENTINEL that he had never seen so large a crop of oats to the acre as was cut by J. H. Dixon last week.

—The water-works committee will recommend a rate of $1 per annum for dwellings of five rooms or less, and $5 for dwellings over five rooms. Lawn rates $2 additional. The rate will probably be adopted.

—For the first time in the history of Charlevoix apples are brought to town in bulk for shipment. The country is full of apples and the prices range well. Buyers are on the ground and the odor of an old-fashioned cider-mill fills the air.

—On Thursday evening last the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Baker, passed away, bringing deep sorrow to the hearts of parents, grand parents and friends. The funeral services were held Friday afternoon from the house, Rev. W. H. Mayhew officiating from Traverese City to officiate. The services were brief, but very appropriate and touching.

—The following is the list of our teachers for the coming school year: H. M. Enos, Supt.; Ina M. Tracy, Vice Principal of High School; E. Agnes Down, Grammar Dep't; Mary L. Harris, 5th Dept.; Stella Kaye, 4th Dept.; Jennie M. Stover, 3d Dept.; Josie M. Lizzan, 2d Primary; Maud Scott, 1st Primary.

—The Charlevoix correspondent of the Central Congregationalist laments the prospective removal from this village of the Kanagy family to Illinois and consequent loss to the Congregational church of this place and says: "Rev. G. Kanagy as deacon, Wm. Kanagy, as treasurer, Miss Allie as organist, and Miss Artie, as organist. There are few families in the State, the members of which hold so many prominent places in one church."

—Capt. Wm. Taylor is figuring on a new residence.

—A. E. Clayden, is enjoying a visit from his father.

—The up-train Monday night killed four cows just south of Bellaire.

—H. W. Finkbiner left yesterday for Chicago to be absent two weeks.

—L. E. Allen, of Detroit, has been spending a week here among his old neighbors and friends.

—A. Cameron has contracted to build the Blatchford cottage on the Chicago grounds referred to in another item.

—Joseph Harwood, of Hanke, last week sold his entire crop of fall and winter apples to Chicago parties. He had about 1,000 bushels.

The painters are at work this week renovating the school and class rooms in the public school building. It is a significant fact, greatly to the credit of the school, that the halls through which hundreds of children pass and repass daily, are in as good a condition that the Board thought it unnecessary to touch the walls.

—Kirkpatrick, the architect, reports that Heath & Miller have the Potter cottage on the south side nearly completed; that he has plans prepared for a $2,500 cottage on the Chicago grounds, between the Club House and the Sanitarium place, to be built this fall; that he is preparing plans for a handsome dwelling for H. W. Kane, to be built on the site of his present Clinton street residence; that the brewers will add a $2,500 kitchen and a 70 foot addition on the east side of the south wing before another season opens; that he is figuring on two more fine residences for the north side. Jack says next season will see more growth for Charlevoix than is anticipated by the most sanguine.

—The prospects are for a good market for potatoes. The Grand Rapids Democrat of Aug. 31st says: "The light ratios of late have benefitted the potato crop but little. Some of the varieties harvested have turned out fairly well, but the late blunted have suffered from drouth. In consequence of a prospective short crop prices have advanced twenty-five cents a bushel since the harvesting of the early begun, and farmers now want seventy cents a bushel. The State crop report of late issues, has stated that the yield this year will be light, compared with 1891. In the western states the season has been against the tuber, but in the eastern states the crop is reported to be fully equal to last year. The jobbers and retail dealers of the city state that farmers are not anxious to contract ahead, as they think potatoes will bring a higher price than that now paid. Advices from Europe are to the effect that the potato crop will be less than last year, while in Ireland there is a partial blight of the potato. Across the border in Canada the crop is reported to be up to the average.

—S. B. Calkins has joined the bicycle brigade, and last week received a fine new wheel, which came very near being the means of transporting its owner into that land where wings, not bicycles, constitute the power of locomotion. On Saturday Dan mounted the sad-gusted thing on Bridge street, heading north, not as the crow flies, but in a general sense. He succeeded in driving all the vehicles into the side streets until at the bridge approach he met an omnibus. The driver tried hard to get out of the way, but there wasn't room enough, and our friend and the vehicle met in violent collision, the tongue of the bus striking Dan in the abdomen, dismounting him. Although badly hurt he reached the Fountain City House, where, for a time, he suffered greatly and it was feared that the injury was serious. Although yet confined to his room, he is gaining and will soon be about. There is a moral attached to this incident, which we could apply, were it not for hurting Dey Hampton's bicycle trade.

Norwood Notes.

Miss Anna D. Carrow, the new school ma'am, arrived Wednesday, and school will begin Monday.

Josephine Wright arrived home from Harbor Springs Friday, where she had been staying with Mrs. Hathaway the past six months.

Ira Richardson went to Harbor Springs Saturday, where she will visit her sister, Miss Inez Bartlett.

Miss Nellie Brown has this week been visiting friends in Charlevoix.

G. V. Nash made another shipment of 200 barrels of apples on the Puritan.

The Misses Dee, who have been visiting at Mrs. Van Pelt's left for home at Evanston on the Charlevoix Wednesday.

Fred Gillett and Ben Pearl are at Ellsworth painting the big store.

The Democratic County Ticket.

The Democratic county convention was held in this village yesterday, and the following ticket was nominated:

Sheriff—A. F. Herron.
Clerk—Dr. A. J. DeLacy.
Treasurer—Pat Walsh.
Register—Ava Smith.
Reg. Deeds—R. W. Kane.
Commissioner—A. E. Martin.
Judge of Probate—O. Blair.
Surveyor—Geo. Wardrop.
Coroner—A. E. Noyes, Sylvester Taylor.

Sol Isaman was elected chairman. The county Democracy was well represented. Is there any kicking? Well, yes!

One prominent Democrat swears he won't vote for Herron, and, in the language of our esteemed contemporary, has his knife "whetted to a razor-edge."

An up-lake Democrat expressed himself thus: "Blair is now Democrat nor never was. He took part in the recent people's party convention, voted on the resolutions, officiated as a teller and was a candidate for office before that body. He began holding county office when he was elected from sympathy, W. Kane, to be built on the site of his present Clinton street residence; that the brewers will add a $2,500 kitchen and a 70 foot addition on the east side of the south wing before another season opens; that he is figuring on two more fine residences for the north side. Local Political Echoes.

The Democrat, speaking of the Republican county nominations says "there is blood on the moon." There is. We are glad the Democrat is the first to discover it.

The Democrat says Frank Myers did not take a nap during the convention. No; neither will he be caught napping during the campaign. Frank Myers never went to sleep when there was anything to do.

The Democrat editor was around the convention to hear what was said by Republicans concerning the ticket, and quotes some of them as saying that it is a weak affair. As we look back over some of the Democrat's county tickets, we smile. The only thing they find to kick about is Frank Myers' avoirdupois. And we beg to suggest that the brains of the nominee for Sheriff are not in his abdomen.

The SENTINEL, in this matter of the sheriffalty, was hoping for the nomination of Mr. Kilborn, but it was disappointed; and now it is for the ticket from top to bottom.

The Republican County ticket from Sheriff to Coroner, with but one exception, is composed of well-known and tried citizens. No personal review is required. With most of them their history is the history of the county.

Frank Myers as deputy sheriff and Under-Sheriff for a number of years, never had a case thrown out of court on his returns. He has been one of the most efficient deputies in the history of the county.

The Democrat says there are "several knives whetted to a razor edge." That's true, too; but they are sharpened for Democratic scalps.

The Democratic battle-cry—"Frank Myers is too fat!" They will think he weighs a ton, when he drops on them this fall.

Frank P. Myers, the Republican nominee for Sheriff, was first appointed Deputy Sheriff by Sheriff Cooper in 1881. He has served as Deputy Sheriff or Under-Sheriff nearly ever since. He never made a mistake in the service of a paper, never allowed a prisoner to escape, and has appointed nearly every one that he ever had a warrant for. During the eleven years he has never had a bill cut down one cent by the Board of Supervisors.

The New Chairman and Secretary.

The Republican County Convention completed its work by the appointment of A. L. Coulter, of East Jordan, as Chairman, and Will N. Moore, of Charlevoix, as Secretary.

Mr. Coulter is one of the most loyal Republicans and competent young men of the county, and will put energy and system into the Republican canvass.

Mr. Moore's appointment is a most excellent one. He is one of the staunchest sort of Republicans, who knows how to conduct a campaign to win.

With two such leaders, the party in Charlevoix county is well equipped for an aggressive campaign.

—Alex. Cameron is figuring on building five cottages this fall.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lily Jackson

CHAPTER VII—Continued.

We will not dispute the point. I believe you love me in your way, and I very unselfish or disinterested way. You found me there in Scotland. My place was dull and lonely to you. I was sage, sober, good, and you thought my society was just the thing for a season, after the excitements and gaieties of fashion—you as a girl, who, so far as you knew, would place implicit trust in your honor, and of purpose. Please let me finish. I am speaking truth, nothing more. The position amused you and gratified your vanity at the same time. You knew I was a man of honor, and that I would be true to you, even why she might not give her heart and her hand before marriage. You reasoned thus, you realized this, yet you wished to, will nothing you had an attention of marrying her. And when you had tired of the diversion, you let author her with a declaration of love and an proposal of marriage. You allowed a sordid motive to chase your heart at the moment between. Yet—nay, I wonder I can say so sooth! Thou are those what I confidency deceive me and others when—I believe I am less be my self-respect. I wish you had never gone to Scotland.

She shuddered from head to foot and walked to the opposite window. Her hands trembled massively, though her mind had not been entered with passion, but with pain and shame. Her emotions had upset those around her.

Being had listened with bowed head, truly owned for had not a word to say, then she had seized him with a burning glance, which for the moment quelled him.

"Do you want to know why I did it? I acted contemptibly, but wasn't you to blame for it? Yes, you were the cause. I don't know why I am such a worthless fellow. Perhaps because no one cares whether I ever amount to anything, or not. I have not been unfortunate so you. You have been loved and praised all your life. I have had discouragement and condemnation on all sides. Perhaps I have been wrong, but it disturbs a man to be forever being cast down.

Her face softened as she answered in a gentle voice, "I know wrong calls for retribution and condemn you. No one knows their possibilities for good or evil until they have been tried. There are some who have had a hard lot in life, and you are not one of the worst. Your chance is before you. I want to forget all that happened. Forgive me, if you can, and be as my. I wish to find—" She hesitated and her face grew crimson. "Go, so as from the glove as for the dirt of her own shoe." Yes, I know, I know, I am a coward." she exclaimed in bitter vehemence, "I am a miserable wretch, I almost fell. "Why can't you cooperated that I want you to have what belongs to you?"

"Do you mean—" she stammered Brian, with flagged resistance. "The thought of your money never entered my head."

"You don't want it because you can't have it. I understand perfectly, now, I'm sorry I spoke."

"If the remembrance means you. Margaret, there is nothing I would not do to make you happy."

"You take it, please, Brian. I—I understand perfectly. I'm a fool and a hypocrite."

Brian was slow no longer. Margaret's morning flushed upon him, and with a joyful face and glad eye he started to leave the room.

But she stopped him rather precipitately with the words

"Don't forget, Brian, please, I want you to understand that this is merely a business arrangement. I'm sorry, I'm very affectionate, but neither need we quarrel.

"Then you will simply to satisfy your sense of obligation, he said, rather sorrowfully. "You don't care for me the least in the world?"

"Starting for a proposal of marriage, I thought I could say I believe I'd be glad, I think, you would make a great difference in my life, and I'm not always in good humor, I hope. Are you satisfied?"

"Perfectly to get rid of a nuisance, he responded. "For no other man can ever come, I see. And maybe, some day you will learn to love me, if only I prize.

"Don't bother yourself with any such idea. That will be a hopeless bloody leave me now."

"You are cold and indifferent you are," he said, thinkly to obey her request. "Some day you will be sorry for this."

Her eyes dropped beneath the intensity of his gaze, but she spoke in a low tone, and the most second he had left her to her own thoughts.

In a somewhat pulsed but rather particular frame of mind he entered Miss Hilton, and confided to her sympathetic ear his large good fortune.

Two hours later, as Margaret sat alone in the corner of the curtain, Brian stole up behind her chair, and dropped in her lap a ring of old-fashioned design and opposite workmanship.

"Put it on, Margaret, if it is high enough." he said. "It belonged to my mother. I should like to see it on your finger. Maybe for the pearl of purity."

His sudden appearance and unexpected action made her blush warmly.

"Put it on for me," she replied, rather nervously and hollow; her hand trembling. "I am not sure that I know the proper form."

"A sad confession," he replied, as, performing a slow ceremony, he placed the ring on her hand. "Why, it fits nicely and makes quite a pretty hand."

"It is very beautiful," added Margaret, examining the magnificent pearls with critical interest. "How can I thank you for it?"

She raised her eyes to his, but dropped them immediately at the manifest change upon the warm blood to her face.

"I wish I could show it to you," he also said, starting up and leaving him without another word.

CHAPTER IX.

A CONVERSATION.

The news of Margaret's engagement travelling rapidly, for it—was one of those limited communities in which one knows everyone, and if not personally, at least by sight or hearsay, and where a lively interest in the affairs of others seems to be the congenial occupation of a large portion of the inhabitants.

Opinions were somewhat divided in the matter. The unprejudiced regard a marriage between the counties as a happy accident, of the engagement suggest difficulties, where the male interested, unfitness, or failure of—was whom individual doubts had thus been frustrated, which, their hands hitherto, in marriage, and prophesied an manner of dire catastrophes, from what they contained knowledge, which, they assured each other, hitherto, had been unknown to Margaret, and, with shuttling glances at the—fine, fine, the—the—what she seen in Brian to like.

Margaret will know that she was an object of amused comment. Three people, people in the—to use her own words, "who would at other tasks are sensible, and who would be sensible at the same time," yet, notwithstanding the knowledge that she affected gratifies vanity in their minds, and that her with a feeling akin to indignation.

"Absurdity to the late of greatness," the Colonel told her, by way of consolation. "Do you suppose that the prominent figures in the neighborhood feel now. Think of the distinction. Not seriously, my dear, I'm glad you two have received my congratulations and esteem. Expecter it all the time. Not quite so soon, though. You were the quickest time on record." The old gentleman's eyes twinkled at the evidence of his own humor.

"Not that time he was deep in some cherished plans intended to affect the future of his son and niece. He put on his hat of fair desires to either party and, if he could be polite or necessary, and he realized that this was a matter to be handled with more caution.

"A fine girl, a fine girl," he would chuckle, when privacy permitted him to give such expression to his feelings. Plenty of spirit in her, too, and that young scamp, confound him, he'll be worthy of her."

Thoughtfulness in question had given all the advantage—a young man in his position could ever hope to attain.

"I want you to make a good showing," the father had said to him, when he started out on his college career. "You must look to your future and take up something practical, I prefer law. Brian, I'm not somebody prominent. Still, as good as most, I dare say. I want you to start in life, and I'm ready to secure a safe step course out a fine—I'm ready to do my part. Be a good fellow and don't break your neck, or get in debt."

Bertie had managed to get through college without incurring a scrape in the latter exile. He had followed his father's counsel, and, if not brilliant, though he had not yet passed the bar.

"Well, Bertie, old fellow, I'm glad out, he spent much of his time in New York, from which point he paid frequent visits to the Centre. Sitting in the office was not his idea of a fine over a law dictionary, he was rather surprised to receive from his father a letter setting forth the great points of a certain handsome young lady and calling on him the advisability of marrying her, and finally settling down.

Well, in the name of all that's holy," he ejaculated, "I'm not married, yet."

And so it was. In such purpose that it would take some time, and a father into a towering passion. Alice was summoned, and had long talk, ending in tears on the—poor, Cousin Alice, you must take care of me, you know."

The Colonel chuckled quietly as they left the room together.

Boat Test for Firearms

One little unknown process to which small arms manufactured for the United States are subjected is the test, intended to subject the piece to the same shooting it would receive if carried by the soldier in a march across the alkali deserts of Arizona or Utah, or the sagebrush prairies of Montana or Wyoming. Troops are frequently compelled to forage for hours through such clouds of dust that the heels of the leader of a dusky team can be but vaguely seen from the wagon, and the shoes are so fine and penetrating that the soldiers' guns and every garment soon become covered with it. The artificial production of a similar experience for an arm that might be adopted for military service is manifestly a very pertinent trial. This is accomplished by placing the rifle on a shelf within a closed box, so that the breech mechanism, which is closed, shall be opposite the mouth of the bellows, fine sand is then permitted to fall slowly across the blast of air, which thereby, in two minutes, the time of the test, drives the sand into any open joints, or into the depths of the mechanism, if it is much exposed. The gun is then removed and wiped carefully with the bare hand, also blown into and cleaned, just as a soldier who suddenly goes into action would do with a gun he has carried on a dusty march. The piece is then fired twenty shots. This test is then repeated, the magazine being charged before exposing the gun to the dust, the cartridges and the gun are then wiped as before, and the gun again fired twenty rounds.—Boston Transcript.

Wealth of the Lakes.

The arrivals and clearances of vessels at Chicago for the year 1890 numbered 21,541, while the corresponding aggregate for New York was but 19 245. The entrances and clearances for the entire seaboard of the United States in that year were 21,556 in number, while for the United States ports in the great cities the arrivals and clearances numbered 88,280. The traffic of the great lakes in 1890 was 27 per cent. of the total traffic of all the railroads of the United States for the same year. The average cost of transportation per ton of freight per mile on the railroads of the United States for the year ending June 30, 1891, was a little more than nine-tenths of a cent, and if the tonnage carried on the lakes had been carried by railroads it would have cost for its transportation at the above rate $150,000,000 more than it cost to water, a gain of nine times the money that has been expended under the various river and harbor bills upon the great lakes above Niagara Falls. Throughout the Soo Canal, at the outlet of Lake Superior, there were over three times as many vessels and nearly two million of tons more freight passed through the Suez Canal during the time. This lake business is in its infancy, but such facts as these exhibit the possibilities of traffic within the next century, the volume of which will be so different from that in grain as it is now to exceed the aggregate of the solar system.—Pullman Journal.

"All what, uncle?"

"All my money. You don't seem to be smart, Alice."

"Ah! I understand perfectly, now. I am much obliged, but, you may save yourself any trouble in the matter, of course. I wouldn't take it.

"You'll not be able to help yourself," chuckled the old man. "If I choose to make my will to that effect you'll have to take it."

"Indeed! I wouldn't," was the determined answer, as Alice rose from her chair. "Good-bye, uncle. I hope you wouldn't too be cross."

"Not there, possibly, as to my face," cried the old gentleman, rising in his chair to see the door closed.

"Well I say, Cousin Alice, what is all this about?"

"Oh, Bertie!" cried Alice, turning at the sound of the laughing voice.

"You impudent scamp," exclaimed the Colonel, "have you dared to show your brazen face here.

I prefer at leaves, father. My chaste countenance is strikingly like my father's. Among my friends it is said to be both modest and retiring."

"Another wave of your impudence, sir, and you will retire with your modest countenance. What are you plotting like an age for, and Alice with no better to—to—to—to—to—I don't know what to know how you dared to send me that trash."

The Colonel threw the letter on the desk as he spoke.

"My letter, said Bertie in assumed surprise. "I am sorry your opinion of its merits is so poor. I considered it quite meritorious of the kind. I am sorry for I spoke of my desire to be with you, and I acted with the sense of equal on the scene of it title. Free tell me what caused the interruption of polite intercourse.

"Tell you, sir, sir," remarked his uncle, with some warmth, "I'll tell you, when I get that trash of yours I'm going to write to the editor and have my money back. Is this laudatory enough for you? Is this the position at his own fireside, with the most unbound of impudence, declared to be worth? Inch a piece of it that is? yes about that, and let me see, I'm—you've got—such a pretty thing, do—do—"

"Oh, I know I'm the straight line," returned Bertie, comfortably, "provided there is a wife at the end of it. The best it is the one I shall choose."

"Well, I'm sorry I gave the commencement, but the old gentleman manifested no further anger. Probably he gathered some here ideas in the last few minutes and found them diverting.

"What are you gaping at Alice, pray? Are you jealous? Do you want to share her out of consideration?

"Oh, no! I was only thinking how charmingly well she is looking. The air of The cabers is no doubt responsible. You, too, look wonderfully well considering. Do you would take you for a day over forty-five, if that."

"Humph!" was the old gentleman's comment. "As big a fool as ever. Your looking has given me a confounded headache. Go out of the room, for heaven's sake. Alice, take him out in the grounds and try to keep him quiet. I'm tired to death of the sight of him."

Certainly, I'll depart to my chamber, and lie down with quiet. Delighted, I am sure. Come, Alice, you must take care of me, you know."

M'KINLEY NOW TALKS,

TELLING ANALYSIS OF DEMOCRACY'S TARIFF PLANK.

The Proposition Barrel—Wait to Fix Skelet Wear Clothes.

McKinley to Nebraska.

The most telling and destructive analysis that has been made of the tariff speech in the House platform was that of Governor McKinley in his speech at Hastings, Neb. The audience was worth of the speaker and the subject. Business was suspended, the states were closed, and from many miles around the farmers flocked to the sound of the laughing voice. Some of the present law. With irresistible logic, based on undeniable facts, the governor showed how the Democratic convention had deliberately repudiated a tariff plank that recognized the interests of the workingman as worthy of protection and domestic industries as entitly of encouragement, and substituted a declaration that all productive duties are unconstitutional. He recalled the fact that the second act of the United States Congress under the Constitution was the passage of a bill whose purpose was "the support of government, the discharge of the debts of the United States and the encouragement and protection of manufactures—a bill reported formally by James Madison and signed by George Washington. Well signed by George Washington. Well signed by George Washington. Well

WHERE IS ELLIS AT?

A Political Artful Dodger Where No One Can Locate.

The political whereabouts of Abolitionist Annelbert Ellis is a perplexing puzzle to his friends and enemies. The latter are anxious to put him in "Coventry" and the latter are anxious to get at him. But neither can lay hold of him.

Two years ago Ellis was nominated and elected Mayor on a straight-out Democratic ticket. Last year he was "put up" by the Democratic party against Hazen Pingree, the Republican candidate for Governor. He was not elected, however, by a long shot. This year the Democratic party is minus Ellis. It is afraid to put him up for Congress, for fear he will be knocked out of the Democratic party. Ellis is not in the Republican party, nor is he in the Democratic party. He is neither fish nor flesh. He is a political Ishmaelite, with no friends, with no place to go, and no reason all after he has deserted his political parties, and spite to slaughter Weaver and Hill for greenback and free whisky.

That he believed up with a speech in which he said: "They can keep one blood sucker for every paper in Lenawee county, but they can't make me the Republican Pacifier. I don't believe what I read in the Democratic papers about Lenawee Democracy by those words."

Lenawee Democrats have got an article of goods in Ellis out of them. They can keep him. He is not worth the cost of his board. We don't want him. We don't want him in this state.

Two months ago Democratic newspapers were fondly hoping for Alger—anything to defeat Hill, but now they are hoping against hope that Alger will be nominated for President. Democratic papers are now calling Alger the "great lumber king," the "great pine king," the "great pine king," the "great lumber king," the "great pine king." Every time a Democrat opens his mouth or his pen he is sure to mention the name of Alger. Democrats are trying to make him the Democratic candidate for President.

Nevertheless the Democrats would like to have a good, strong, popular Democrat, who could stand up against any candidate the Republicans may put up against him.

Democrats like ordinary citizens who are strong, popular, and who can polish the backs and bumps off any kind of a candidate. Democrats like ordinary citizens who are strong, popular, and who can polish the backs and bumps off any kind of a candidate. THE COMBINE DECLARED ILLEGAL IN NEW JERSEY.

Three Georgia Children Play with a Snake and Die—The Fourth Dreamed—Mme. Adelina Patti—Hugo's Fate at the Hotel Liquidation.

Reading Unlawful.

The Reading deal is so far as the State of New Jersey is concerned, has been knocked out. The suit of the people of the Commonwealth against the combination has been decided in the people's favor. The Reading deal is unconstitutional, illegal, null and void. So says Justice McGill in a remarkable decision. The Charleville bobbs that the trust must be dissolved. It is against the public policy. Because it aims to create a monopoly in anthracite coal an article so very general consumption in the State. It is illegal, because the law expressly forbids such trusts and combinations among railroads. Four times after the trust was formed has the legislature been asked to pass a law to legalize it, but each time it failed to do so. It is also contrary to the public good, and cannot be allowed to stand. There can no doubt, so says Judge McGill, that the Reading combination is illegal. It is contrary to a given law decision, the Reading's claim to the contrary, and it is a sufficient infraction of the particular law regarding this great charter.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Kentucky, and for Harlowa, about the first vessel to run the Black-Grandeld obstacles to New York will be the big Fall French steamer La Touraine. When the French steamer left Havre it was generally said a crew full of health, by the American consul there. A few hours after she left the Havre wires authorized by the consul there that the plague had broken out among a consignment of emigrants who were to have sailed on La Touraine, and, owing to the crowded condition, there could be furnished with any compensation. The American consul replied to Secretary Foster's request for a bill of health he had stood to the charge, and asking that both the inbound going back to Italy. Secretary Foster said he would notify the Italian Ministers and the agents of the line in New York, and, aside from quarantine, the matter neither will be employed as immigrants of Venice and Naples.

Supposed Her Was a Rattlesnake.

A MOUNT CARMEL (Ill.) dispatch named Wilson left home and went to the mill, leaving his wife and four children contented and happy. Two hours afterward they found his dead body on the floor inconsolable, with four dead children alongside of him. The mother, when conscious, said she had taken the baby to the spring for a drink, and the other children in the house. Hearing their cries she put the baby down and hurried back to the house, where she found two dead, the other dying. The dying one said they had been picking their fingers through a crack in the floor and a hissing sound had frightened a creature out. The mother went back to the spring after her baby and found it had fallen into the spring and drowned. The third child died shortly after she got back to the house and the mother screamed away. Investigation showed that the supposed hiss was a rattlesnake.

Six Was Crushed from Her Railway.

At accident occurred at the Detroit, Mich., exposition grounds, that resulted in the death of Cornelia Cairns, the daring aeronaut, who succeeded Hogan, who was killed on the same spot last year. For several days the weather has been much like that of last year, so the up make an excursion early, Thursday evening Miss Cairns expended professional pride and said she would go in no matter what the result might be. A strong wind was blowing when she left the ground, and she was thrown violently against the Machinery Building it struck a projection of the high tower and dashed Miss Cairns to the ground. Her death was instantaneous.

GETS BACK AT CANADA.

RETALIATION PROCLAIMED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Canal Tolls of 20 Cents a Ton Levied on Canadian Freight—Canada Leading Up to the Retaliation—Charge of a Secret Herdzer Was Warmed.

Out on Canada.

The President has proclaimed retaliation with Canada in accordance with the authority conferred upon him by the act to enforce reciprocal relations with Canada, passed last July. The proclamation suspends the free navigation of the St. Marys Falls Canal and imposes a toll of 20 cents a ton upon all freight passing through that canal from or to any place in Canada. The proclamation of the President is as follows:

By the President of the United States of America. A proclamation.

Whereas, by an act of Congress approved July 26, 1892, entitled "An act to enforce reciprocal relations with Canada," it is provided that whenever it shall be made to appear to the President that, within a time of receiving reciprocal trade privileges, the Dominion of Canada or the United States, on and after the first day of August, 1892, whenever and so often as the President shall so advise, shall impose a toll upon the freight or any vessel or car passing through the Sault Ste. Marie or St. Mary's Falls Canal, belonging to Canadian parties, unless an amount equal to the toll so imposed shall be levied by the government within a few days that the discriminating and unfriendly act of Canadian canals against American ports and vessels, and whereas, it has been made to appear to the President that, within a time of receiving reciprocal trade privileges, the Dominion of Canada has imposed a toll upon the Sault Ste. Marie or St. Mary's Falls canal now permitted to vessels of American ports, and whereas, the President has also made to appear that, within a time of receiving reciprocal trade privileges, the Dominion of Canada has imposed a toll upon such vessel including a double prohibitive toll upon vessels of the United States, and whereas, the President has also made to appear that, within a time of receiving reciprocal trade privileges, the Dominion of Canada has imposed a toll upon such vessel including a double prohibitive toll upon vessels of the United States, or by the imposition of tonnage dues, or by such discriminations, whether related to the Sault Ste. Marie or St. Mary's Falls canal now permitted to vessels of American ports, or to American vessels, or to American ports, or to American vessels, or shall have the effect of imposing a toll upon such vessel or upon American ports, or upon

The application of Col. Loudard post, U. A. R. Petoskey has been received at Washington for quarters for 25 men.

Mrs. John Wachtel, mother of Hon. P. H. Wachtel and Mrs. Thomas Quinlan died on Saturday at the house of Thomas Quinlan in Petoskey.

Mr. Ellis was offered $4,750 cash for the fruit in his Peninsula orchard, but refused to take the offer. Some other man will be glad to give more.

Petoskey Democrat: Ike Staffer got the laugh on himself the other night. He went out in the woods to capture some woodchucks and got so far he lost his bearings. Several friends had to go out and look him up finding him about 12 o'clock.

Germans at Petoskey were out in force the 20th, celebrating Columbus day. There was an immense civic parade in which there were many beautiful floats emblematic of our progress since Christopher discovered the country.

Someone has figured it out that the white bread used by inmates of the Grand Traverse asylum would make a bread heaven, single file, 14 miles, 220 feet long, and the graham bread would make it an even 17 miles. This is for 1,000 persons.

S. S. Spalding of Elk Rapids fired a guest from his hotel one day last week, because said guest thought that Jesus was a greater passenger than God. Twas a beautiful sight to see the doubter and his satchel flying into the street. Folks have to walk spanish that stop at the Marshall.

Gov. Winans has appointed Hon. R. Goodrich of Traverse City as a member of the commission to examine into the subject of the improvement of the general highways of the state and report at the next session of the legislature. No man in the State has probably given this subject as much attention as has Mr. Goodrich.

Henry Vance of Echo township, Antrim county, while on his way to East Jordan with an ox team last week, met his death in a peculiar manner. While going down a hill the ring of the neckyoke came out, letting the wagon jump forward down the steep incline. Mr. Vance was knocked down and both wheels passed over his chest. He was 70 years of age and a well known resident, having lived in Antrim county for twenty five years past.

S. C. Barrow of Traverse City has had the patent allowed for his deep water fishing tackles consisting of a new trolling line and reel that has been used so successfully on the bay during the past year. This is an improvement wherever for trolling in the very deep water of the lake and bays. It has been thoroughly tested and is pronounced a great success by fishermen. Mr. Barrow seems to have a good thing in his patent. In nine days fishing on East Bay recently Mr. Barrow caught 1140 pounds of Mackinaw trout with this line.

East Jordan Enterprise: As will be seen by reference to our advertising columns Mr. F. E. Hessinger has decided to remain in East Jordan and has associated with himself his brother Mr. John Hessinger, of Lansing, who will remove here and enter actively into the trade. The firm name now is Hessinger Brothers & Co. and with greatly enlarged stock they will add to the laurels of the old firm, which is self-evident now the top in public favor in this vicinity. About $5,000 worth of merchandise was added to the stock here this week.

The boiler in the naptha launch owned by E. S. Noble, of Elk Rapids, exploded Monday while leaving the dock with the owner and a party of friends on board. The party consisted of E. S. Noble and wife, E. F. Davis and wife, Sam S. Owen and wife, S. H. Nelson and wife, Miss Farrand and Miss Minnie Noble, of Detroit. The machinery was torn to pieces, and Mr. Noble had one leg broke and the other seriously bruised. Miss Farrand was injured slightly being burned by escaping steam and received a slight cut. Mr. Owen was burned and cut on the left arm. The rest of the party was uninjured.

Dr. McDonald's skill in the treatment of chronic diseases is simply marvelous. He takes patients who have been given up to die and restores them to health and happiness. Dr. McDonald is not only thoroughly educated in all the schools of medicine, but he is singularly gifted by nature, be able to read at a glance all conditions of the patient's mind or body without asking any question. He cures diseases like an open book, and has made a special study, both in this country and in Europe, of those obscure, debcate and nervous diseases of all sexes. CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The most appalling marine disaster of the season, occurred Friday off Whitefish Point, Lake Superior. The mammoth steamer Western Reserve, laboring in a heavy sea, broke in two and sunk. Twenty-seven lives were lost, including the captain and his wife and daughter.

The schooner City of Toledo foundered in Lake Michigan last week Wednesday, and all hands, numbering seven persons were lost.

The yacht Bon Ami lays up here this week.

The steamer Gordon is laid up all this week and a part of last by a broken shaft.

The propeller Ossifrage, sailed by Capt A. G. Allrich, arrived in port Thursday evening on her way to Duluth, having been bought for the Duluth and Houghton route. Capt. Allrich delivered his boat at the Soo and returned here for a visit of a few days.

The schooner Kate Hinchman, which cleared Sunday, was caught in the heavy seas and the deck load of bark shifted. She returned Monday noon to trim her load.

"Monarch" flour is better than any other brand. Mint Patent is as good as any other brand. Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co. handle them.

Carpenter, Bartholomew & Co. say their flour sales the past week are larger than any week since they have been in trade. The reason is obvious.

The Rifenburg Milling Co. just shipped 250 barrels of flour to the World's Fair. Sufficient evidence that the flour is A No. 1. Try it and you will use no other.

ADVERTISEMENT SNAPS.

It is very much harder to sell a patent razor strop now than it used to be. More people shave themselves than ever, but the man who is his own barber seems much better posted on the art of how to keep his razors in order now than his ancestors were. The favorite strop now is a leather strop, costing about one-fourth what was paid for the old patent articles, and outliving them twice over. There used to be good money in selling strops from door to door, and the ladies bought frequently for their husbands. But a man would have to sell one of the modern sharpeners at nearly every house he passed in order to earn half a day's wages.

—John C. Peterson, of Ironton, raised this year a crop of oats that yielded 77 bushels to the acre.

—Harrison Bedford and Will Hampton are meandering around the southern part of the State on their bicycles.

—Geo. G. Covell, of Traverse City, was nominated for representative in the Grand Traverse, Leelanaw and Benzie district.

—Milton Savory, who will be remembered as an apprentice in the Journal office with Mr. Strang, died last week in Chicago.

—The Grand Army boys of the county held their annual reunion at East Jordan last Thursday, and they all report a good time.

—D. N. Ledin, general agent of the Western District for the magnificent "History of the World" by Bidpath, is in the city booking over the field with a view to a systematic canvass.

—Master Cyril Roderick Tyler, the boy soprano, has been engaged by Henry E. Abbey for a 24 weeks' tour for which he will receive $10,000. He leaves for New York Monday, in company with Mr. Van Vliet, who plays the accompaniments. A tour of concertments will be made in April. Charlevoix people will remember the lad who sang so charmingly at Lewis Grand Opera House this summer.

—Capt. Patsey Flanigan, of the good ship Winnie Weaver, has blood in his eye. It came about in this wise: Patsey went into Manistique with a load of tract, and, with the permission of the owners, tied up to a dock, and sold some of his cargo. He was arrested for violation of an ordinance, in not taking out a license for peddling, and consigned to a dungeon for three days. As soon as he was released, he came to Petoskey and retained Judge Dillhoff, and they went there, where suit was begun for false imprisonment, and $5,000 damages. His attorney says he has a good case, as no city ordinance can prohibit trade and commerce in a navigable harbor.

—A vigorous and economical effort should be made at once in the direction of securing a large listed on one the available sites on the north side. Our experience the season now closing proves that such an enterprise is the necessity of the hour. Charlevoix only needs facilities for hauling and feeding her summer guests, to eclipse all rivals as a resort town. A large hotel, of the Arlington or Cushman style and capacity, would be filled, and our present house would continue to do as well, if not better. The bluff overlooking Lake Michigan west of the Fountain City House, or further north, is perfectly situated for such a purpose, and could be made the most attractive spot in the whole list of Northern Michigan resorts.

—"Sl Plunkard," a Yankee comedy illustrating farm life at English's last night, had a large house. J. C. Lewis plays the leading role, and scores a great point with his wonderful whistling which is simply marvelous. He was not at his best, as he was not at at well. Sam C. Young as Felix Schmarr made a capital Dutchman and the audience insisted upon frequent repetition of his songs and dances. Another good character was Mr. Price's Moses a Jewish money lender. All of the peculiarities were strongly and comically delineated. Mr. W. C. West as Robert Denny plays the black sheep of the flock and made a very satisfactory all round rascal. He rendered the famous cuckoo song of Emmett's in excellent style. Miss Hoe made a good talkative old maid and Mrs. Jeanette Lewis as Dora interlarded several songs and dances that seemed to captivate the audience. She has a sweet voice and gives a promise of growing rapidly into an attractive actress. The orchestra produced uproarious applause with its very original treatment of popular music. Death of A. P. Myers.

Augustus P. Myers, of this place, died at Harper Hospital, Detroit, on Wednesday night of last week, aged 45 years. His remains arrived here on Friday evening, and the funeral was held from the M. E. church Sabbath morning, with Masonic honors, Rev. G. S. Barnes preaching the discourse.

Notwithstanding the drenching rain, the attendance was large. The church was tastefully decorated with flowers by the ladies of the Eastern Star.

Mr. Myers had been at Harper Hospital almost three weeks, where he went in hope of relief from the malady that had afflicted him for years. He was doomed to disappointment, however, as his decline was rapid. As a last and desperate resort a surgical operation was decided upon, which he underwent, after writing a touching farewell to his family. He only lived a few hours after the operation. His remains were taken charge of by the officers of Zion Lodge, F. & A. M., of Detroit, and by them sent to his home Lodge.

Mr. Myers has been a resident of Charlevoix county for over twenty years, removing to this village from Boyne Falls eighteen years ago, where he has been esteemed as an honest man and good citizen. He was of Danish nativity.

He leaves a wife and four children, who are possessed of a comfortable home and $2,000 from a life insurance in a Masonic Benefit Association.

Death of Sarah Aldrich.

On Monday morning Mr. D. H. Pierce received a telegram announcing the sudden death of Miss Sarah, eldest daughter of Captain and Mrs. A. G. Aldrich.

Capt. and Mrs. Aldrich, who had but just left Charlevoix on their way home to Chicago, were at Carlisle visiting their son Henry, at the time of Sarah's death. The family will have much sincere sympathy here.

Change in Train Service.

The C. & W. M. folks have discontinued their summer schedule and promulgated a new time-card that has Northern Michigan a hard blow in the neck.

Of course the "dummy" is taken off—we expected that. But instead of giving us two through trains per day, as stipulated in the conditions attached to the issue of our bridge bonds, they give us but one through train, and a local to Traverse that makes no connections.

The through south-bound leaves here at 2:02 p. m.; north, 2:55 p. m., local south, 8:02 a. m.; north, 8:35 p. m.

This arrangment is very unsatisfactory to our people.

LATER.

Commencing last evening, there will be special passenger service between Charlevoix and Petoskey as follows: Leaving Petoskey at 6:30 p. m., arriving at Charlevoix at 7:05. Leaving Charlevoix 8:02 a. m., arriving at Petoskey 8:37. Daily except Sunday.

The Republican Candidate for State Senator.

Charlevoix county Republicans can and will cordially support the candidate for State Senator. If elected, as he surely will be, the district will have a faithful and industrious representative at Lansing.

Wm. Moers was born in Canada, in 1843, and came to Kalamazoo when 12 years of age. He removed to Sherman, Wexford county, in 1876, and was judge of probate four years, and has held various town offices, from Supervisor down. He moved to Boyne Falls in 1880, where he engaged in the mercantile and milling business.

Mr. Moers went into the Senatorial convention with an instructed delegation, which indorsement but voiced the sentiment of the rank and file of the party.

That he will be elected there is not the slightest doubt.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lucy Jackson

CHAPTER A.

PRETTY OFFICE CONSIDERATION.

"Hello, old fellow! have you quite forgotten your friends, or are your thoughts too occupied with the fair damsels that you go round more like one gain an entrance into the house because of your sake?"

Jack Dunlop, sitting in the library, with his feet gracefully elevated, and an aided deep in thought, and the vapory smoke of a cigar, wafted lazily up upon him with this greeting.

He jumped to his feet at the voice of the well-remembered voice, and making a grab for Bertie's hand, waved it in some seconds in silence.

"So it is really you," he said, when he found his voice. "Bertie! I wouldn't have known you. Take a seat and make yourself as home. Had an idea you would drop in."

"Like a bad penny," put in Bertie. "By the way, that reminds me of something I meant to tell you. Have you seen Miss Bilton, lately? I was cross angling an errand I wish for you, and I thought of you. What do you say, Bertie?"

"Why, I don't remember ever seeing Miss Bilton, but I have heard of her. Is she a beauty? Is she rich? Is she a sensible, sensible girl? Is she a reputation to her parents and to society? Is she a fit companion for my sister? Is she a fit companion for a gentleman? Is she fitted in consideration to be a wife? Is she—Bertie, I'm tired of this! Tell me what you want."

"Well, Bertie, how can I tell you, when you keep on at such a rate? Yes, I have seen Miss Bilton, as they call her, in the Bayard Conservatories. She is a very pretty girl, and I thought of you at the time, and I meant to tell you. Think I have taken a fancy to the girl myself, and I'm sure you'd like her, too. Now, I'm going to tell you a little secret. I'm going to—Bertie, I'm in love!"

WHO PAYS THE TAX

A PRACTICAL LESSON ON THE TARIFF QUESTION.

How the Michigan Farmer has Encouraged Home Production and Taxed Foreign Manufacturers Without Increased Cost to Consumers—American Tin a Reality.

The voters of Michigan have not forgotten, and never shall seem to forget, the outrageous falsehoods bellowed by the Democrats during the last campaign of 1890. The Democratic cry then that the McKinley tariff was a burden some law had upon the necessaries of life and that it was intended to make the cost of living to every household dear. The Democrats told the rural voters plainly that the McKinley tariff was a tax that the increased tariff would be added to the cost of the work clothes a farmer paid out to the kitchen shelves of every poor man, and that the increased cost would go to swell the profits of wealthy capitalists. The Democrats hired a bustle of tongues, shouted them up with his war and beat them out to awaken the people to charging high prices, all on account of the McKinley tariff, as the wild. Influenced by these outrageous falsehoods, when they saw the tariff means of protecting themselves from competition, the people made the great set mistake of years and let the Democratic party power in Michigan. The latter suffered grievously for that error, and now seem only the opportunity to correct the evil.

A gentleman in Detroit, who has strong ties in the virtue of the McKinley bill interviewed a number of the leading merchants in that city in spring and in the exceedingly profitable at the results. The interviews then condensed the figures

1. That the McKinley tariff is not a tax on the consumer.

2. That the McKinley tariff is a tax on the foreigner who wishes to sell his goods in the American market.

3. That home production has been increased.

4. That prices have not been advanced, but lowered.

5. That American tin is a reality and is good and cheap as the foreign product.

One of the most interesting interviews was that had with the senior member of the firm of Fletcher, Jenks & Co., wholesale hardware and jobbers in stoves and tinware. Here it is.

Mr. Fletcher said that there hadn't been any rise of importance, nothing in their line, certainly not a rise in prices, and in certain cases, we made some. For instance, we have been selling a tin dipper for some years at 3 cents, but we have now some made which we can sell at 2½ cents, the material used and the labor being the same—made at home.

The tin plate for the dipper either has not advanced or only slightly, there is a little difference in the price of the tin plate, but the difference is so small that we can afford to stand it, and we do so, and we can still sell the dipper at the old price, and with the steadily increasing trade we have had this year we believe it will be this a very short time before we shall be able to sell it at 2 cents, and we shall do so, and we believe we shall make a good profit. American finishers have now got the process of making tin plate so well and so much cheaper, and is improving still, so well, indeed, that when the passage of the McKinley bill seemed to be certain, the Welsh manufacturers of tin plate in Indiana, application had put American made plate into their boxes, and quality is made and supplied as good, if not as cheap as our common ones.

Mr. Fletcher exhibited cards from several tin plate factories in this country, notifying him of a reduction of 10 to 20 per cent a few days prior to the McKinley bill, and of an advance of 10 per cent immediately after the passage of the bill, as an example of trifling the manufacturer is claiming advantage to himself and to the consumer, and of the perfect world the foreign manufacturers gives to guarantee and has from this side, that the McKinley bill would increase the price of tin plate, and yet the increased duty imposed added to the cost of the work clothes a farmer paid out to the kitchen shelves of every poor man, and that the increased duty would go to swell the profits of wealthy capitalists. The Democrats hired a bustle of tongues, shouted them up with his war and beat them out to awaken the people to charging high prices, all on account of the McKinley bill, as the wild. "TOO MUCH AT STAKE"

SO SAYS JUDGE MORSE TO A COMRADE

Whom He Voted to Turn Out of Office.—Democratic Soldier Seekers Preferred Veterans—The Boys Up Blue not Ungrateful—Over Marne.

Judge Morse secured his seat upon the supreme court bench, through the vote of soldier comrades. When it came his appeal to them, they overlooked his desertion to the ranks of their political haters, they believed his promises to retire from partisan politics, and they saw only his Republican record and his sheer made empty by Democratic hatred. They rallied to his support and elected him, only to find that they had been grossly taken in. He has receded in the mire of partisan politics ever since and he has spurned the very classes of comradeship, which he blinded set up. To one of the comrades who supported him for further in the supreme court, he said "I couldn't vote to keep you in, there's too much at stake." He bitterly opposed the election of Comrade J. E. Belknap to congress, from his own district, and openly refused to vote for him. The boys in blue understand the utter selfishness of Morse's comradeship and are not fumbling over one another in engrossing to support him.

Edward Voorhees, of Ionia, proprietor of the Ionia overall factory, was in Lansing the other day, where he expects to remove his overall enterprise about November 15.

"What's the political outlook in Ionia county?" was asked of Mr. Voorhees by a State Republican reporter.

"I must say it looks decidedly Republican."

"What are Mr. Ellis' chances up this way?"

"He won't carry the county."

"And Morse?"

"Well, now, the judge is a personal friend of mine, but I think he made the mistake of his life in accepting the nomination. He is certainly making a big mistake in supporting Mr. Ich. Mr. Ich is a good man, and in township where the Republicans have made a majority, out of 32 veterans, 31 pledged themselves to support Ich. I don't believe Morse can carry the county."

"We all like Mr. Morse," said an Ionia county veteran to the Lansing Republican same recently. "He is smart, and he was a good soldier, and many of us straight, solid, and voted for him for judge because he was a comrade, would fill the position well and, we believed it would give him a steady position at good pay, as long as he wanted it. But he has thrown it away and jumped into politics, and he now comes to us as a Democrat, and not as a soldier. He will be disappointed. We respect him for what he was, but he cast off the old soldiers of Ionia county into the Democratic camp. I will not vote for him, and I don't know of a Republican soldier in Ionia county who will. "No!" said another veteran, and many less since he openly refused to vote with his old comrades for Charlie Belknap. Ben couldn't expect it."

From the above it is apparent that Judge Morse cannot rely upon the soldier vote in his own county. If not in the county where he is best known, how can he expect to secure that vote in other counties. And, indeed, why should Judge Morse depend upon the soldier vote?

He represents the party whose machinations made the war a dread necessity.

He represents the party who vilified that war a failure.

He represents the party that vilified the soldier all the time he was fighting at the front.

He is disappointed by the Detroit Free Press, the sheet that threatened the soldiers with a "Tale in the rear," if they presumed to march in defense of their country.

He deserted his party because it failed to carry out the Republican mandate for Judge Scanlon in 1879—and what did other compass a deserter?

He—the—the—many an old soldier's vote for Justice of the Supreme court, upon the pain that it was a non-political office and upon the pledge that he elected to it would be out of politics afterward, but ever since he has been in the Democratic ranks he has kept his fingers in the Democratic pie, and hooted well after the appointment of his henchmen with the Cleveland administration at Washington.

He is so extreme a partisan that when asked if he would vote for his old comrade, Belknap, for Congress, he answered "Not until or my own father, if on the Republican ticket."

He has no little regard for that comradeship which he once more seeks to turn to his own profit that, after enlisting his soldier friends in Grand Rapids, whom he was addressing, that they ought all to vote regardless of party for Belknap if he made up for office, he refused to do so and condemned such action as wrong.

He refused to vote for Gen. R. A. Alger, Col. J. R. Swan, Judge Long and Capt. Edward Uhlitz, neither will he vote for Gen. Benjamin Harrison, nor for comrades Stanley W. Turner and John Ivory on the state ticket.

When asked to vote for Judge Morse and believe his one-sided idea of comradeship, every veteran should reply in his own words, "I can not vote. To me it is, 'THERE'S TOO MUCH AT STAKE.' The American system of protection, which has made this nation great, and strong, and glorious in the eyes of foreign countries, as strong, so air and comfort should be given to that party which seeks to establish British and confederate free trade in this country. The claims of comradeship cannot avail a man who has turned his back upon all the principles for the sake of which loyal men became comrades. THERE IS TOO MUCH AT STAKE.

Free Trade The Battle Cry.

The Democratic party in the states may risk anything, but if English capitalists could carry Grover Cleveland in November the White House would be theirs. We shall watch the development of the struggle with the keenest interest, and if the triumph be not attained all at once there is indeed reason for congratulation that one of the great American parties has made free trade, pure and simple, the battle cry of the future.—Liverpool (England) Journal of Commerce.

"We cannot match ages with the Democratic say more than that party has made achievements which the nation Hon. Benjamin Harrison.

WOMEN AS TELEGRAPHERS.
They Have Not Been Successful in Handling Press Reports.
In the work of receiving and sending messages women are equally as good workers as men. They may not be capable of such phenomenal bursts of speed as the male telegraphers, but at the same time extraordinary speed is not so much an element of success or necessity as accuracy and the ability to maintain a fair average rate. They perform really creditable work, and a great point in their favor is their reliability. As yet women have not been successful in the handling of press reports. Day and night the Associated Press and the United Press send many thousands of words to their subscribers in all parts of the country, and the wires are almost continuously in charge of men. The immense amount of matter to be handled necessitates a very high rate of speed, forty-eight words a minute being maintained for hours at a stretch. A woman's strength is hardly equal to such a task. Since the general introduction of the telephone telegraph offices women have taken kindly to the machines, and in their use have become proficient. The typewriter reduces the labor very materially.

MRS. COLUMBUS.
A Daring and Brilliant Woman Who Deserves to Be Remembered.
Columbus could not be 1492 or thereabout, a Miss Palestrello of Lisbon, who father had distinguished himself as a navigator. A part of Miss Palestrello's marriage dower was a great collection of valuable charts, maps and important memoranda, etc. From this childhood she had displayed women ful enthusiasm on the subject, particularly in a manner indicative of a special and adventuresome bias and the schemes in the line of geographical discovery for which Lisbon was then the headquarters. She possessed a fine education and was widely known as a lovely, brilliant woman, who was constantly urging her husband on to the path which finally took him to the southern coast of Africa, where he was familiar. While a girl Miss Palestrello had a number of hazardous voyages with her father in unfamiliar waters, and later made many geographical drawings, some of which were sold with great profit by Columbus when he had won her for his wife and set out upon his more important wanderings on the great deep.

BIG HOUSEKEEPING.
The Cure of the Capital at Washington and What It Costs.
Uncle Sam's biggest job in the house-keeping line is the care of the capitol. It costs $60,000 annually to run the building and keep it in repair. Architect Clark has charge of it. Under him, besides two clerks and a draughtsman, are seven carpenters, who have plenty of work to occupy them the year round. There are seven opera acres of painted surface inside and out, requiring the constant attention of six painters, while four plumbers do nothing but mend and renew the arrangements for water and gas. Six gardeners, aided by twenty assistants, keep the surrounding grounds and walks looking pretty and neat, and twenty-five laborers do chores, scrubbing the marble floors every morning early, washing the steps, carrying firlight, etc. There is a supermatch also, who attends to the copper roof and makes sure that it doesn't leak. All of this has nothing to do with the affairs of the senate and house of representatives. They keep house for themselves in their respective wings of the capitol.

First Piano Made by Chickering.
The original first piano made by the late Jonas Chickering, of Boston, founder of the piano industry in the United States, has just been recovered by his son, George H. Chickering, and is to be kept by the latter gentleman as a historic memento. The original bill of sale was made out to James H. Bingham, and the date, June 23, 1853, marks the time of the first sale made of a new piano at the factory, then consisting of two rooms in Tremont street, next to Mr. Chickering's grand, in a small building located where the present court building now is. Mr. Bingham was a friend of Jonas Chickering, and he bought the piano for a Miss Thankful G. Hutchinson, of Alstead, N. H., whence it was shipped. Mr. Bingham was engaged to be married to Miss Hutchinson, and subsequently did marry her. The piano sold for $275. Twice afterward the piano was sold, always remaining, however, at Alstead.

Spoiled the Sentiment.
Daniel Potter, an old resident of Gloucester, Mass., once called the attention of his guests to an old clock, a great favorite of his. He told his friends of his great attachment to this ancient timepiece, and said, in a voice full of emotion: "Gentlemen, I have sound in that clock every sigh for more than forty years." He had evidently made an impression on his visitors, when one guest, who had been carefully examining the clock, turned the dial of the clock and spoiled the story by saying drily: "Well, I should think you were sounding of an idiot! That's an eight-day clock!"

The Light of the North Star.
A ray of light upon which such amazing velocity that it might wrap around the globe seven times in two thousand five tenths of the clock, and yet it would take that ray of light fifty years to come from the North star to this earth. When we look at that star, we are actually looking at what we see it in the light that left it half a century ago and if the omnipotent hand that formed it, set it in place and added to its mass should suddenly destroy it, we would continue to see it in its own light fifty years after it ceased to exist.

Their Father's Business.
Why do not girls who spend their time sighing for a career engage in some business? A man died in Norwalk a few years ago, leaving a small carriage business that paid $5,000 a year but not one of his family of daughters was able to conduct it, and, therefore, it passed to strangers, while the family went into comparative poverty. When a real estate man died in Jersey City not long ago his daughters announced her intention to carry on the business, which had assisted her invalid father in his office and had become so familiar with the business that she is now conducting it successfully.

LOST ON THE LAKES.

TWO VESSELS AND TWELVE MEN GO DOWN.

President Harrison Will Take Steps to Prevent the Repeat of Choices—The Great Blizzard Reports in New York Harbor—A New Record.

Lake Disasters.

This season on the lakes during Tuesday and Wednesday was unusually severe, and at two, entirely unknown vessels have been lost with all hands, and many minor disasters have occurred. The schooner Lily of Dundee, bound from Saginaw with a cargo of lumber for Manistee, Mich., about two miles out, the wrecked vessel drifted to within about half a mile from shore at Lexington. All hands, seven people, were lost. A party of five men, working in a quarry on Whitefish's Island, left Bayfield, Wis., in a small boat during the storm. It is supposed they have been drowned. The small schooner Lizzie Doak was driven ashore about a mile south of the Lighthouse, Milwaukee, piers. The crew were ashore safe in the yard. The Doak was bound from Muskegon for Pullman, Illinois, with lumber. It is endangering the make Lindbergh port if missed the piers. The Doak will be a total loss.

George W. Curtis Dead.

GEORGE WILLIAMS CURTIS, the distinguished author and editor of Harper's Weekly, is dead. He breathed his last at his Lake Washington retreat, on his farm in West New Brighton. A tinge came to his end at 2 o'clock, as he sat in his chair with his son, Dr. Eliot Curtis, at his side. Death was painless. Mr. Curtis was conscious to the last, and had his faculties of the end. There he sank into sound and dreamless sleep as he died to mistrust something unintelligible, and his head fell over on his son's shoulder. Curtis and his only living daughter were at his bedside when the end came. For the time but Dr. Curtis did not commence to the side of his father.

Stillborn Monkey.

EDGEREN MEN are said to have discovered the remains of Dunbury's Ferry. Forty or fifty colored publishers were found in the bills that it was.

THE Denver, Colo., Evening Times received an anonymous letter in which the writer says that he is going to Fifth Avenue, for the purpose of killing Dickinson, the Secretary of War, who has refused to release from Leavenworth, and he will blow and garage the life of Dickinson. The Times publishes the letter and declared their article off. It is said the attacks from was made by one who did not want to go back to work, and nearly all secured employment.

Harrisburg Will Act.

CHICAGO—Indications are that Harrison's visit to Whitcomb Reid and Clyde Farm to assist in reconciliation, and has conspired to definitely the President's proposed trip through the South after his return to Lake Lake. He sent the following dispatch to Senator Hill: "Disturbances and danger of interference of choices has been so serious that I feel I should show my duty for the present my trip to the south and go to Washington, to be ready to give official protection to entitled to protect the people against unlawful and violent violence."

Walked Into a Trap.

FIVE men from San Luis Obispo County, California, arrived in the night and went to Bank Manager Ringler's residence in Fresno for the purpose of compelling him to open the safe, but anticipating an attempt at robbery Mr. Sinnler was absent and his bed was occupied by a young man named Frank Wasserman, who admitted the men to the bank. Ringler was bound and waiting for them, but four of the robbers escaped.

Chartered on Board.

THE steamship Moravia of the Hamburg-American line, from Hamburg, which arrived at New York Wednesday had twenty-two deaths on board during the passage which the ship docked says were from cholera. Twenty were of children and one of adults. Most of them were natives of Poland, five of Russia, one of Austria, and one of Hungary. All were buried at sea. The Moravia has been ordered from the port of Hamburg.

Named for Harrison.

WISCONSIN Democrats have named the following gold standard:

For Governor—GEORGE W. PEck.
For Lieutenant Governor—J. J. CUNNINGHAM.
For Secretary of State—W. J. CUNNINGHAM.
For State Treasurer—JOHN MCCAUL.
For State Superintendent—GEORGE W. PECK.
For State Attorney General—W. H. MCCAUL.
For State Commissioner—H. C. M. ROBY.

DEWITT'S ITEM.

THE Nebraska Democratic State ticket is as follows: Governor, J. Sterling Morton; Lieutenant Governor, S. N. Wallack; Secretary of State, E. M. Crow; Auditor, J. E. O. Sullivan; Treasurer, Andrew Beckman; Attorney General, Matthew Hassett; Commissioner of Public Lands, Jacob Gilgen; Superintendent of Schools, J. A. Hornberger.

A DISPATCH says that no less than twenty-three replevin suits have been commenced in the Circuit Court at Jackson, Mich., against W. F. Cowlan, the implement dealer and clothing man, who failed for over $200,000. The National Carriage Company, with a claim of over $41,000, was the latest creditor to secure a writ of replevin. The creditors fear they will lose everything.

GEORGE SONTAGE, the alleged accomplice of the Collins train robbers, was indicted by the Fresno (Cal.) Grand Jury. He is held in $25,000 bail. Vinnie, Cal., two bags containing $1,000 in silver coin have been unearthed by detectives in the place of Chris Evans, one of the Collins train robbers.

THE Potter Hotel, Kansas City, Kan., was totally destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000, with $37,500 insurance.

REPORTS from the cooperative apiaries in South Carolina indicate the nomination of Tillman for Governor by about 10,000 majority.

EASTERN.

AS THE boat Jolly Brothers, with over a hundred excursionists on board, was coming down Chest River near Tuckerton, Pa., it struck a rock on Keyser's dam and sank in thirty minutes. The boat was loaded for the shore and all the passengers were safely landed.

ADJT. GEN. FOSTER returned to Albany from Buffalo. He telegraphed Gov. Flower at Watertown that all the troops were those of the Fourth Brigade were on their way home, and that matters would quiet down sufficiently by Saturday night to withdraw the Fourth Brigade. The State will have to keep now money to pay the expenses incurred by the service of the militia, which must be refunded by Erie County. By the passage of the anti-Pinkerton law last winter at the urgent request of labor organizations the use of the militia strike fails on the people, the railroad companies even getting pay for transporting the troops.

An epidemic of typhoid-malarial fever has broken out at the Syracuse, N. Y., Institute for Feeble-minded Children. It is learned that a dozen children are convalescing from the disease, while twenty-two others, seven attended and fifteen pupils, are ill. The condition of none of them is as yet dangerous. A year ago there was an epidemic of typhoid in the same institution. Thirty pupils were stricken at that time and four died. At the same time there were fifteen cases in the village. Both institutions used city water from a separate main. The cause at that time was attributed to this. Since that the institute has used water from the lake. These have been closed.

THE Brooklyn Bridge, as far as the State of New Jersey is concerned, has been formally sold. The action was taken by the Commonwealth against the contractors who have been decided in the people's favor. The Brooklyn deal is unconstitutional, illegal and void. So says Chancellor McGill in a remark-able decision. The Chancellor holds that the trust must be dissolved. It is understood that the Brooklyn Bridge plans to create a monopoly in anthracite and in the business of consumption in the State. It is illegal, he says, and the Chancellor holds that such issues and combinations are illegal. In the times when the trust was formed the Brooklyn combination was most illegal. Illegal and void. Such Chancellor McGill put bound to the decision. The Chancellor holds that the trust must be dissolved. It is understood that the Brooklyn Bridge plans to create a monopoly in anthracite and in the business of consumption in the State. It is illegal, he says, and the Chancellor holds that such issues and combinations are illegal. In the times when the trust was formed the Brooklyn combination was most illegal. Illegal and void. Such Chancellor McGill put bound to the decision. An appeal from the decision was taken. The case will be argued in the Court of Appeals. The Brooklyn people will be represented by Mr. Jacob Worth, who has charge of the case.

WESTERN.

THE Gate City Electric street Railway Company of Seattle, Iowa, has been sold to the Seattle Electric Company, a corporation of Edward H. Ingham, and of Philadelphia, Pa., and Chicago, on the Fourth of July, was boarding one of the cars in the Seattle system.

TWO FREIGHT trains on the Missouri Pacific Railroad collided at Ashland, Neb., in consequence of a blunder by the train-hold train dispatcher. One man was killed and Engineer Joseph Condon, Brakeman William Spence and Fireman Goodman, of Atlanta, Ga., were scalded.

FIRE broke out in the kitchen of the Brakeman William Spence, a retired merchant, at Kansas City, Kan. The building was entirely destroyed, and the flames spread to the house of Mr. Alfred Albright, City Clerk, which was also destroyed. The loss on the former house is $12,000, with $8,000 insurance. Mr. Albright's loss is $4,000.

AT Metropolis, Ill., Barney Ward, convicted in 1892 of the murder of Mr. Stone, and rapidly sprout to the adjoining building, and was shot in the head and stroke on the south, stopping there. Early in the morning of a week ago the building was left standing on the square, and the fire was extinguished, loss $12,000. The fire was the work of a tramp who was discovered in the Craig & Sons's building, which being old and decrepit, was thought to be safe.

THE family of Henry Sulze, near Sulzer, Ind., has a different and unique history. Some five weeks ago Sulze died, leaving his wife and seven small children and his daughter. Besides these a lad of 16 came to the house one night and said he was a relative of the family, and was employed in Chicago

Northern Michigan News.

Three Petoskey gentlemen left Tuesday for Washington D. C. They will take their wheels with them, and from Washington will make several side trips.

Thomas Gallian of Petoskey received a dispatch Wednesday bearing his old intelligence that his aged father had died the night before at the old homestead in North Ferrisburg, Vermont.

"Has this been done with the surplus?" It has been put back into the pockets of the people by the $50,000,000 a year duties on sugar which the McKinley law has abolished. Ask something hard.

Frankfort Express: Capt. Miller has moved his family to the place recently purchased by him of John Hamilton. The Capt. has thoroughly overhauled the place and now has a very fine residence property.

The more the Democrats fight against the sugar provision of McKinley law, the better the Republicans are pleased. The people will not care under the $50,000,000 a year which that act puts into their pockets.

Work has commenced on the Manistique and Northwestern railroad. It will be about seven miles long narrow gauge and run from the tug track of Lumber to Cusino township to the Manistique Handle Company's factory at that place.

They say that President Harrison is an unpopular man, but it will be noticed that wherever he goes he is greeted with hearty demonstrations of respect and good-will. Perhaps after all the people like a man best who lives up to the dignity of his position and does not play the demagogue.

The Shore is booming. Mr. Fertebig, Asahel Tillotson and Allen Bowman are erecting residences and Mr. Shank has purchased a lot and will build in a few days. Besides these some of the resorters who cam up on the last excursion have purchased lots on the resort grounds and will erect cottages thereon this fall.

An unsurveyed island containing one and one half acres of land adjoins the property of Anthony Hamel and is connected by it with a rocky reef. Hamel wrote to the commissioner of the land office to know if it were sufficiently contiguous to be judged his property. As the official plat shows no such island Hamel's right is still in question.

The orchard on the Morgan farm near Horse City is a sight to behold. Morgan the original proprietor planted twelve or fifteen acres to apples. Subsequently he mortgaged the place and lost it, and Judge O. J. Pailthorp is now the agent of the owner who lives down south. The orchard has just come into bearing and there is a crop of about 1,000 bushels. The fruit is perfect free from scab spot or blemish and will bring the highest market price.

The President's letter of acceptance touches all questions of national concern, and satisfactorily. It gives especial prominence to the tariff, reciprocity and financial issues, and is throughy sound on each of them. The doctrine which it presents and champions is a doctrine which has been crowned with the most unqualified success in its operation. It is the doctrine of the Republican party, which is more popular this year than ever before and which is destined to keep on growing in public favor. The letter is long, but it will well repay, a careful reading.

Cranky Ann," the proprietress of the Petoskey dive and one of the inmates of the same institution created something of a sensation in our usually peaceful village last Saturday afternoon. They are good specimens of the most depraved creatures of the half world and used language so indecent as to cause the cheeks to blush and hide their faces with their hands. They drove about town, backed up on the sidewalks and ran into the lamp posts. Marshall Bradley attempted to arrest them but they managed to escape him and running the horse drove down Main street and up the hill like an inebriated procession of workingmen.—Harbor Springs paper.

Hastings from Hayes.

Mrs. Chas. Beaman and Miss Mamie Case, of Lansing, have been visiting their father, Truman Case.

The public sale of lots at Bay side Saturday was adjourned for a week.

The architects have the plans made for three $3,000 cottages to be erected this fall at Bay Side Park Resort, and three others of like dimensions and price are under contemplation.

The schooner D. A. Wells loaded with limestone for Muskegon at Sly's dock last Saturday.

Rev. W. S. Sly informs us that the plat of Bay Side village was made and recorded before Bay Shore station and post-office was named; that the sale of lots in Bay Side village is steady. Five residences are now being erected and the sixth will be under way this week. Several lots have been sold to be built upon soon.

Steps have been taken to organize a joint school district at Bay Shore. If successful, a room will be fitted up in the Orphan House building for school purposes.

N. D. Chew and son Tobie, of Montpelier, Ohio, came up on the excursion Thursday to visit relatives in this vicinity.

John Fish has been enjoying the company of his brothers, Freeman and Milo Fish and their families, from Barry county.

George Hewitt buys a great many fat cattle in the neighborhood of East Jordan. He is there this week making purchases.

Asahel Tillotson and Miss Nellie Barnett were married at the residence of the bride's parents by Rev. W. S. Sly last Sunday afternoon. They have the best wishes of the writer.

Norwood Notes.

Joe Holoshak has purchased a lot on the north side of town and will move his house on it this week.

S. B. Chase will at once move his barn to the lot lately purchased of Joe Holoshek, and will also enlarge and re-model it.

Ed Stafford has the job of moving the above mentioned buildings.

Billy Cowen has moved into his new house; H. S. Babcock has moved into G. V. Nash's tenement house and E. K. Harris moves to Ellsworth next month.

Mrs. Cassius Pearl and daughter Mrs. Emma Perry, and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, of Battle Creek, arrived on the Columbia Saturday.

Norwood is shipping lots of fruit this fall, the farmers bringing it in from 8 to 10 miles around.

School opened last Monday with forty scholars.

Another blacksmith. Elmer Mayne takes possession of the shop this week and will tell yarns to the farmers and make jumping jacks.

Pumpkin pie social at the hall Friday night for the benefit of the band. Come out and see how many pieces you can eat.

Unidilla.

Miss Abbie Willis left Monday for Cheboygan where she will visit her sisters, Mrs. Wylie and Miss Lizzie Willis.

Walter Springer, of Sheboygan, Wis., has been visiting at Mr. Tuttle's the past few weeks.

Ben Nowland has his house painted.

Mrs. P. A. Eckert is keeping house for Miss Willis during her absence.

Jesse Morea, of Mancelona, was awakened by a burglar. Instead of waking a noise he took down his Winchester and lay in wait at his window until the thief should pass by. Presently he came along outside the house laden with booty, and Morea took deliberate aim at him at a distance of six feet. The thief escaped unhurt. Mr. Morea had removed the cartridges from the gun. Mr. Morea says it was a case of "didn't know it was unloaded."

Notice.

There will be an examination held at the school house in Charlevoix on Friday, sept. 30th, for the benefit of those wishing to secure teachers' third grade certificates.

—R. M. McKee has gone to Hot Springs, Ark.

Mrs. Gale, of Alden, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Iddings.

—S. M. See & Sons have something new to say in their space this week.

—Miss Cherie Williams has accepted the Harbard school for nine months.

Mrs. Carr has a change of ad. this week. The ladies should read and profit.

—Work has been commenced on the Hatchford and Funk cottages on the Chicago grounds.

—Marshal Cooper is at East Jordan running his corn-popper, and Lightstone Ripley is Marshal pro tem.

—Mrs. Tobin, manager of H. N. Faulkner's Chicago restaurant, has been spending a week or ten days here.

—The builders for the water-works have been placed. Pipe has been laid to the depot and into the Chicago Resort grounds.

—If our Democratic friends object to Frank Myers on account of his fat, what have they to say about their candidate for President?

—Rev. D. Engle is the newly appointed Methodist pastor here. He comes from Petoskey, where he has been stationed three years.

—R. A. Emrey, agent of the Northern Michigan line of steamers, announces that the rates to Chicago are now $6, meals and berths included.

—There will be no exploitation this fall, as in times past, of lack of employment. Everybody is busy yet, with a good outlook for the late fall and winter.

—In answer to the statement that he is "too fat," Frank Myers responds with his usual promptness: "Very few prisoners are caught in a foot race."

Mrs. W. H. McCartney received a telegram from Englewood one day last week conveying the sad intelligence that her brother had been killed by the cars.

—Ballasting on the Ironton branch has been commenced. Two steam shovels are at work in the gravel-pit near the "V," one for the branch and the other for the main line south.

—Capt. Halsey Flanigan has sold the adjacent Winnie Weaver to a resorter. Mr. Clare Burleigh, who will make some changes in her for a cruise to Lake Superior next summer.

—The pubic road scraper is proving a good investment. Main avenue has been elegantly turnpiked, and the machine is kept busy in other parts of the village and Township this week.

—That bicycle of Dee Calkins' which came so near being decorated with crape, is out from its retirement. Dee says he will ride it or smash every plate glass front on Bridge street.

—On or before Oct. 1st, we shall mail statements of subscription account. Will those indebted to the SENTINEL call in and liquidate, or mail us amounts due, and save us postage expenses.

—Here is a straw. A tug man tells us that of the large fleet that has been in this port the last ten days, there were but two flying Cleveland flags, and nearly all of them had campaign streamers.

—Frank C. Myers, the Republican candidate for Sheriff, was a classmate of Will Carlisle, the poet, at Hillsdale College, and one summer they peddled maps together throughout Southern Michigan.

—Dr. Chamberlain last week attended the reunion of his regiment, the consolidated 9th and 105th New York Infantry, at Lansing. The Grand Army elected President of the western branch of the organization.

—A threshing machine run away on Bridge street is not a very pleasant thing to contemplate, but that is what we had yesterday. Jas. Adams' machine, separator and horse power, were switched around the street, the former bringing up on the sidewalk near Inst Masonic, and the latter in front of Iddings' store, both damaged considerably. The horses detached themselves on the way and got out of the street.

—Read the new ad of A. T. Washburn in this issue.

—Missing school of instruction at Petoskey to-morrow (Thursday.)

—Dr. Valle and family went home to St. Louis last Wednesday. Judge Clover and wife goes in a few days.

—Resorters are nearly all over home. A few tay-fever people tarry yet, and the hotel people on the resorts are getting ready to close up.

—John L. Stoddard, historian and lecturer, Boston, says: "I rejoice that such a work has been produced to meet the long felt need and to bring the history of our race to the easy grasp of our comprehensive millions."

—The construction cars on the Ironton branch had a smash-up Thursday at the "V." The engine and several cars were ditched, damaging the train $400. A wrecking train came up and cleared away the debris, taking the engine in for the repairs.

—By order of the Board of Education, the school closes at 4 o'clock the current year twenty-five minutes ahead of standard time. It is believed that this will accommodate a large majority of the patrons of the school. The bells will be rung at the usual times by the clock, viz: Morning, first bell, 8.27 to 8.29; 2d bell rings from 8.55 to 8.56—tardy signals at 9. Afternoon, 1st bell, 1.12 to 1.15; 2d bell rings from 1.25 to 1.28—tardy strokes at 1.30.

—Petoskey Reporter: Comrade A. J. Stroud of Horton's Bay is the nominee for probate judge on the Republican tickets in Charlevoix county. No better man for that or any other position lives in Charlevoix, and he should and probably will lead his ticket. The re-nomination of Willis Kemp for county clerk is also a matter upon which to congratulate Charlevoix Republicans, as he has proved himself to be an excellent officer, and is stronger with the people now than when elected for his first term.

—S. M. Moore was up from Chicago last week and closed the deal by which he comes into possession of the Smithson property adjoining the Chicago Resort, and will make it his future summer home. This is by all odds the finest resort home in Charlevoix and everybody in Charlevoix will be glad to see it the property of Mr. Moore. It is his intention to improve the house and grounds and to spend more time here than he has heretofore. Workmen are already engaged in making some changes in the house.

—H. V. Rifenburg don't claim to be a prophet, nor a son of a prophet, but this is what he said yesterday: "I predict the biggest boom in northern Michigan next year, that the region has ever known. There are a good many reasons for such an opinion. The effects of railroad competition will show themselves more next summer than the past; and then you may look for a renewed of the cholera excitement next spring, an adjournment of the World's fair, and a general exodus from the cities to Northern Michigan. I believe what I say."

Hastings from Hayes.

John Struthers started for Stratford, Ont., last M. ednay evening to visit friends.

Joseph Moore has been awarded the contract to carry the Bungess mail from the railroad to the post-office.

Lorra Hamlin is digging a cellar under his residence. E. Medsker is doing the stone work.

Frank Kane is digging a well for Leroy Hamlin; and, by the way, Mr. Hamlin is fitting up a pleasant home.

W. S. Baker sold his crop of fruit to Kalamazoo parties.

There are 235 school children in Hayes.

Norwood Notes.

Four coopers at work in the barrel shop, and it is hard to turn out barrels enough to supply the demand.

The farmers in this vicinity are going to get more ready money from the fruit this year than from all their other produce.

The hard boys pumpkin pie social was a 13 dollar success.

The gipsies are camped near here and several of the young folks now know all about their future.

The steamer City of Grand Rapids stops here and takes fruit over the lake to Gladstone.

Funeral of Sarah Aldrich.

The funeral of Sarah Aldrich, which occurred here Thursday afternoon last, was a very solemn and touching event.

The remains, accompanied by the parents, Mr. Will Aldrich and wife, and Mrs. C. H. Ball, (Mr. Henry Aldrich having previously arrived,) came by the three o'clock train. The funeral party was met at the station by an escort of twenty members of Charlevoix Lodge, No. 262, F. & A. M., of which Capt. Aldrich has for many years been a member, and by others of our citizens, who desired to show their sympathy for the stricken family.

The funeral cortege moved directly to the Cong. Church where brief services were held. The church was crowded, and never in the history of Charlevoix has a funeral been attended with more evidences of deep sorrow and sympathy than marked this occasion. The remains were enclosed in a beautiful white casket, upon which loving friends in Chicago had placed floral tributes.

At the grave the mortal remains of Sarah Aldrich were laid away in the presence of nearly sorrowing friends, beside little Anna, whose death but a short time ago, was such a sorrow to her who so soon was to follow.

Sarah Aldrich was the eldest daughter of Captain and Mrs. Aldrich, as was 31 years of age. A fact that adds interest and pathos to this sorrowful event, is, that deceased was born in Charlevoix,—her parents being among the first settlers of our locality. Here she has always lived, until her recent removal to Chicago with the family.

It is not a mere matter of form to say that Charlevoix sympathizes with the bereaved family. The sympathy of all a most tender and heartfelt. Words fall short in expressing its measure.

Oh, the Pity of It.

The following pathetic story will interest many of our readers. It is taken from the California, published at Bakersfield, Cal.:

"My dear husband is dead; shot down without a moment's warning, and not even a farewell word, and by his own brother, who shot and killed himself a moment after." No words could be more pathetic than these, which, in a letter received Monday, announced the tragic death of Robert T. Smith, at his home on Birch Creek, near Big Sandy, Montana.

For many years "Bob" Smith was a citizen of Kern county, and was universally esteemed for his sterling, manly qualities. Here he married a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Atchison, and here to the pair three children were born.

With his wife and little ones he left here for Montana in May, 1889, and there founded a new home, where prosperity attended him.

Now to be struck down under such tragic circumstances, is appalling, and brings an awful shock to his many friends here."

The widow of the murdered man was formerly Miss Elva Furman, who will be remembered as a Charlevoix girl.

Unidilla.

Mrs. H. Cram left Monday for Wisconsin where she will visit relatives for a month.

Fred Willis returned home last Wednesday and reports a good time.

Ben Nowland expects his mother Wednesday, she starts from Tallapoosa on Monday.

Dr. Avery to Speak Here.

The chairman of the Republican County Committee authorizes the announcement that Dr. John Avery, the Republican candidate for Congress, will speak in Charlevoix on the evening of Saturday, Oct. 1. Further announcement will be made.

Northern Michigan News.

Three Petoskey gentlemen left Tuesday for Washington D. C. They will take their wheels with them, and from Washington will make several side trips.

Thomas Quinlan of Petoskey informs the Reporter Wednesday bearing the old saw "and yet some" that his aged father had died the night before at the old homestead in North Ferrisburg, Vermont.

"What has been done with the surplus?" It has been put back into the pockets of the people by the $50,000,000 a year difference in sugar which the McKinley law has abolished. Ask something hard.

Frankfort Express: Capt Miller has moved his family to the place recently purchased by him of John Hirschler. The Capt has thoroughly overhauled the place and now has a very fine residence property.

The cause the Democrats fight against the sugar provisions of McKinley law, the letter the Republicans are pleased. The people will save under the $50,000,000 a year which that act puts into their pockets.

Work has commenced on the Manistique and Northwestern railroad. It will be about seven miles long narrow gauge and run from the log track at one of the Goodwin township lumbermen's mills to the Manistique Handle Company's factory at that place.

I say, say that President Harrison is an unpopular man, but it will be noticed that wherever he goes he is greeted with hearty demonstrations of respect and good-will. Perhaps after all the people like a man best who insists on the dignity of his position and does not play the demagogue.

Mr. Stone is leasing Mr. Perritche Arthur Tillotson and Allen Bowman are cutting cordwood and Mr. Shank has purchased a lot and will hand in a few days. Besides these some of the lumbermen who cam up on the last excursion have purchased lots on the river front and will erect cottages thereon this fall.

An unsurveyed island containing one and one half acres of land adjoins the property of Anthony Hansel and is connected by it with a rocky reef. Hansel wrote to the commissioner of the land office to know if it were available for a homestead to be judged by himself. As the official plat shows the much island Hansel's right is still in question.

The orchard on the Morgan farm, near Boyne City is a sight to behold. Morgan the original proprietor planted twelve or fifteen acres to apples. Subsequently he mortgaged the place and lost it, and Judge C. J. Plattenburg now the agent of its owner who lives down south. The orchard has just come into bearing and there is a crop of about 1,000 bushels. The fruit is perfect free from scab spot or blemish and will bring the highest market price.

The President's letter of acceptance touches all questions of national concern, and satisfactorily. It gives especial prominence to the tariff, reciprocity and financial issues, and is thoroughly sound on each of them. The doctrine which it presents and champions is a doctrine which has been crowned with the most unqualified success in its operation. It is the doctrine of the Republican party, which is more popular this year than ever before, and which is destined to keep on growing in public favor. The letter is long, but it will well repay a careful reading.

They are good specimens of the most depraved creatures of the half world and used language so indecent as to cause the chicks to blush and hide their faces with their hands. They drove about town, backed up on the sidewalks and ran into the busy public. Mrs. Chas. Beamon and Miss Minie Case, of Lansing, have been visiting their father, Truman Case.

The public sale of lots at Bay Side Saturday was adjourned for a week.

The architects have the plans made for three $3,000 cottages to be erected this fall at Bay Side Park Resort, and three others of like dimensions and price are under contemplation.

The schooner D. A Wells loaded with limestone for Muskegon at Sly's dock last Saturday.

Rev. W. S. Sly informs us that the plat of Bay Side village was made and recorded before Bay Shore station and post-office was named that the sale of lots in Bay Side village is steady. Five residences are now being erected and the sixth will be under way this week. Several lots have been sold to be built upon, soon.

N. D. Chew and son Tobie, of Montpelier, Ohio, came up on the excursion Thursday to visit relatives in this vicinity.

John Fish has been enjoying the company of his brothers, Freeman and Milo Fish and their families, from Barry county.

Clarence Hewitt buys a great many fat cattle on the neighborhood of East Jordan. He is there this week making purchases.

Asahel Tillotson and Miss Nellie Burnett were married at the residence of the bride's parents by Rev. W. S. Sly last Sunday afternoon. They have the best wishes of the writer.

Norwood Notes.

Joe Helosbek has purchased a lot on the north side of town and will move his house on it this week.

S. E. Chase will at once move his barn to the lot lately purchased of Joe Helosbek, and will also enlarge and re-model it.

Ed Stafford has the job of moving the above mentioned buildings.

Billy Cowen has moved into his new house. H. S. Babcock has moved into G. V. Nash's tenement house and E. E. Harris moves to Ellsworth next month.

Mrs. Cassius Pearl and daughter Mrs. Emma Perry, and, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, of Battle Creek, arrived on the Columbia Saturday.

Ellsworth.

Miss Abbie Willis left Monday for Chebogan where she will visit her sisters, Mrs. Wylie and Miss Lizzie Willis.

Walter Springer, of Sheboygan, Wis., has been visiting at Mr. Hazell's the past few weeks.

Ben Nowland has his house painted.

Mrs. P. A. Ackert is keeping house for Miss Willis during her absence.

Jesse Moreo, of Mancelona, was awakened by a burglar. Instead of making a noise he took down his Winchester and lay in wait at his window until the thief should pass by. Presently he came along outside the house laden with booty, and Moreo took deliberate aim at him at a distance of six feet. The thief escaped unhurt. Mr. Moreo had removed the cartridges from the gun. Mr. Moreo says it was a case of "didn't know it was unloaded."

—A threshing machine run away on Bridge street is not a very pleasant thing to contemplate, but that is what we had yesterday. Jas. Adams' machine, separator and horse power, were switched around the street, the former bringing up on the sidewalk near Ben Mason's, and the latter in front of Iddings' store, both damaged considerably. The horses, meanwhile, had been caught on the street.

By order of the Board of Education, the school clocks are set for the current year twenty-five minutes ahead of standard time. It is believed that this will accommodate a large majority of the patrons of the school. The bells will be rung at the usual time by the clock, viz: Morning, first bell, 8.27 to 8.29, 24 bell rings from 8.30 to 8.38—tardy stroke at 8. Afternoon, 1st bell, 1.12 to 1.14, 24 bell rings from 1.25 to 1.28—tardy stroke at 1.30.

Pleading Second.—Comrade A. J. Stroud of Bustard's Post is the nominee for probate judge on the Republican tickets in Charlevoix county. No better man for that or any other position lives in Charlevoix, and he should and probably will lead his ticket. The nomination of Willis Kenny for county clerk is also a matter upon which to congratulate Charlevoix Republicans, as he has proved himself to be an excellent officer, and is stronger with the people now than when elected for his first term.

—S. M. Moore was up from Chicago last week and closed the deal by which he comes into possession of the Sailboat property adjoining the Chicago Resort, and will make it his future summer home. This is by all odds the finest resort in Charlevoix and everybody in Charlevoix will be glad to see it the property of Mr. Moore. It is the intention to improve the house and grounds and to spend more time here than he has heretofore. Workmen are already engaged in making some changes in the house.

—B. V. Rifenburg don't claim to be a prophet, nor a son of a prophet, but this is what he said yesterday: "I predict the biggest boom in northern Michigan next year, that the region has ever known. There are a good many reasons for such an opinion. Tens of thousands of Chicago people will show themselves more next summer than the past, and then you may look for a renewal of the Cholera excitement next spring, on adjournment of the World's fair, and a general exodus from the cities to Northern Michigan. I believe what I say."

The steamer City of Grand Rapids stops here and takes fruit over the lake to Gladstone.

Funeral of Sarah Aldrich.

The funeral of Sarah Aldrich, which occurred here Thursday afternoon last, was a very solemn and touching event.

The remains, accompanied by the parents, Mr. Will Aldrich and wife, and Mrs. C. H. Hall, (Mr. Henry Aldrich having previously arrived,) came by the three o'clock train. The funeral party was met at the station by an escort of twenty members of Charlevoix Lodge, No 282 F. & A. M. of which Capt. Aldrich has for many years been a member, and by others of our citizens, who desired to show their sympathy for the stricken family.

The funeral cortege moved directly to the Cong. Church where brief services were held. The church was crowded, and never in the history of Charlevoix has a funeral been attended with more evidences of deep sorrow and sympathy than marked this occasion. The remains were entombed in a beautiful white casket, upon which loving friends in Chicago had placed floral tributes.

At the grave the mortal remains of Sarah Aldrich were laid away in the presence of many sorrowing friends, beside little Anna, whose death but a short time ago, was such a sorrow to her who so soon was to follow.

Sarah Aldrich was the eldest daughter of Captain and Mrs Aldrich, as was 31 years of age. A fact that adds interest and pathos to this sorrowful event, is, that deceased was born in Charlevoix,—her parents being among the first settlers of our locality. Here she has always lived, until her recent removal to Chicago with the family.

It is not a mere matter of form to say that Charlevoix sympathizes with the bereaved family. The sympathy of all is most tender and heartfelt. Words fall short in expressing its measure.

Oh, the Pity of It.

The following pathetic story will interest many, of our readers. It is taken from the California, published at Bakersfield, Cal.:

"My dear husband is dead, shot down without a moment's warning, and not even a farewell word, and by his own brother, who shot and killed himself a moment after." No words could be more pathetic than those, which, in a letter received Monday, announced the tragic death of Robert T. Smith, at his home on Birch Creek, near Big Sandy, Montana.

For many years "Bob" Smith was a citizen of Kern county, and was universally esteemed for his sterling, manly qualities. Here he married a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Atchison, and here to the end these children were born.

With his wife and little ones he left here for Montana in May, 1889, and there founded a new home, where prosperity attended him.

Now to be struck down under such tragic circumstances, is appalling, and brings an awful shock to his many friends here."

The widow of the murdered man was formerly Miss Elva Furman, who will be remembered as a Charlevoix girl.

Unidine.

Mrs R. Crane left Monday for Wisconsin where she will visit relatives for a month.

Fred Willis returned home last Wednesday and reports a good time.

Ben Nowland expects his mother Wednesday, she starts from Tallapoosa Ga. Monday.

Dr Avery to Speak Here.

The chairman of the Republican County Committee authorizes the announcement that Dr. John Avery, the Republican candidate for Congress, will speak in Charlevoix on the evening of Saturday, Oct. 1. Further announcements will be made.

Religious News.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lulu Jackson

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

Once in her room, Margaret did not go to bed, but sat down in a chair by a light wrapper she had to Miss Hilton's apartment.

"Are you asleep?" she called, softly.

Being asleep in the adjoining room, she opened the door and entered.

"Dear Miss Hilton," she cried, going to the side of the bed and placing her hand with outreaching gentleness upon the throbbing brow she knew so well. "You should have sent for me, I think."

"No, dear; I'm glad you didn't. I'm feel much better. Your bathing had a magical effect. I have been asleep over an hour, and I feel wakeful now. Did you have a pleasant evening?"

"Yes, as pleasant. The Colonel was really quite charming. I forgot he had an unhappy crew a moment."

"I hope you will always know such forgetfulness, Margaret. You have so much to make you happy, so many who love you dearly. My brave little woman must not give way to this despondency. Life is far from a failure. If you are not too tired, and we will talk. We alone quite well."

"Yes, perfectly. And so happy, Miss Hilton."

The note of pain in the low-spoken words filled Miss Hilton with vague misgiving, but she answered very quietly.

"Naturally she would be happy; she should be sorry to see her otherwise. Margaret, I want you to tell me your quite right."

There was a moment's silence after this simple question. Margaret turned her face in her hands, which were thrust down beside her on the bed, and buried her mind. Then, looking up with a new light upon her face, she said quietly, with decision:

"Yes, Miss Hilton. I have gone over that and decided it is better not to know many things. The trouble lies with my views of life. I guess I started out with ideas of ideal love. I have found reality, I guess, very different. I want, such a capacity for happiness, of pain, that I almost frighten myself. All these years are nothing within me now. I feel only love, and I hope you will sleep well."

Miss Hilton sighed, but she only replied, "Good-night, dear."

Notwithstanding this earnestly expressed hope, Margaret lay awake for many hours, thinking of Miss Hilton's words, and making many resolutions for the future.

CHAPTER XI.

"Does that your?" she called, softly.

Being asleep in the adjoining room, she opened the door and entered.

"I hope you will always know such forgetfulness, Margaret. You have so much to make you happy, so many who love you dearly. My brave little woman must not give way to this despondency. Life is far from a failure. If you are not too tired, and we will talk. We alone quite well."

"Yes, perfectly. And so happy, Miss Hilton."

The note of pain in the low-spoken words filled Miss Hilton with vague misgiving, but she answered very quietly.

"Naturally she would be happy; she should be sorry to see her otherwise. Margaret, I want you to tell me your quite right?"

There was a moment's silence after this simple question. Margaret turned her face in her hands, which were thrust down beside her on the bed, and buried her mind. Then, looking up with a new light upon her face, she said quietly, with decision:

"Yes, Miss Hilton. I have gone over that and decided it is better not to know many things. The trouble lies with my views of life. I guess I started out with ideas of ideal love. I have found reality, I guess, very different. I want, such a capacity for happiness, of pain, that I almost frighten myself. All these years are nothing within me now. I feel only love, and I hope you will sleep well."

Miss Hilton sighed, but she only replied, "Good-night, dear."

Notwithstanding this earnestly expressed hope, Margaret lay awake for many hours, thinking of Miss Hilton's words, and making many resolutions for the future.

"Dear Miss Hilton," she cried, going to the side of the bed and placing her hand with outreaching gentleness upon the throbbing brow she knew so well. "You should have sent for me, I think."

"No, dear; I'm glad you didn't. I'm feel much better. Your bathing had a magical effect. I have been asleep over an hour, and I feel wakeful now. Did you have a pleasant evening?"

"Yes, as pleasant. The Colonel was really quite charming. I forgot he had an unhappy crew a moment."

"I hope you will always know such forgetfulness, Margaret. You have so much to make you happy, so many who love you dearly. My brave little woman must not give way to this despondency. Life is far from a failure. If you are not too tired, and we will talk. We alone quite well."

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lulu Jackson

CHAPTER XI.—Continued.

The next morning Margaret received a note from the rectory asking her to come to luncheon. She was very sick. Waiting only for a hasty breakfast, and leaving Miss Hilton's instructions to stay herself warily, she departed on her mission of mercy.

Margaret's coming was a great relief to the Rector's wife, who was in the sorrow of her own heart, she might alone let in by a hundred extra attentions, but the feeling was free, waiting for the occasion to show itself. And Brian saw it, in time were on he learned to repress his natural desire and approach Margaret with only friendly warmth.

It was all wrong, Margaret was forced to admit, in her moments of self reproach, that this man was to blame. Brian or also! Marriage had wrought a greater change in her life than she had ever anticipated. With Miss Hilton's sudden parture out the sheltering care, quiet and cloistral influence which meant so much to her, she was left to her own resources. Even her dreams were tinged with the certainly unsoiled something, though what was not very clear even to her own mind. He felt it in a growing discontentedness with her surroundings, which constituted such a large portion of life's sunshine. It was in a sweet trial with unresisting love. Its focal has been the centre of her life, and she had led to the dullness of country life, the monotonous round of duty, without purpose and settled employment.

"It is selfish, I know, but I am lonely," she asserted for her own comfort. "He loves me, and I love him. I tell him. Yet there is no of everlasting friendship, and I know he'll wait. I grow to think I married him for nothing but to be rid of my lonelinessness, and I hate it. Nevertheless, he shan't keep, I think, I'm sure, I'm determined I am."

In spite of this resolution, Brian did not display any hostility, unless it was in the light in the city, where he was fond of expending his time.

At first he required home every evening, like many of his neighbors, to begin regular consumers, and Margaret was forced to accept the situation, to be failed to recognize even this liberty, and like wise to be gratified in allowed themselves into the slight inconsistency in which were passed without Margaret seeing him.

Brian was not blind to her trouble, nor his chivalry, the importunities of a lonely life.

Margaret received all in silence. "Margaret, I want you to stay in your home, dear," he said, kind.

"Why, I am in my home, Brian."

"Yes, but I want you to be happier. She had nearly started out with the determination to tell him of her earnest endeavor which she issued in the beginning of her married life, but failure was very keen. She could not bear to see the disappointment in the dentical her right to be.

"Why, certainly. Who would I have to be with? Mrs. Hilton's letter is coming, but I wouldn't allow it, if I was not sure of her coming. I am least bit lonely, and—I believe I am happy."

Brian did not allow the almost imperceptible break in her voice, but he did notice her pale face and wearied air. Without a word he rose from his chair, and seated her by it. Then bending over her, he said with unusual tenderness:

"I wish you wouldn't try your strength so much, Margaret. It will be sad for long for you."

"I don't think so, Brian. I am not blaming the walk at all. I'm afraid I'm growing lazy, and I'll not stay in-doors if I'd go out this minute and walk until dinner, if I have to drive home."

"I'd have some say in that," responded Brian, with a little of his old boyishness. "Walking for the purpose of dropping, I know, is a very pleasant performance, wouldn't it? I wish you wouldn't walk alone, Margaret, I don't like it."

Margaret elevated her eyebrows rather expressively. "Why, dear, I'm only man, and retirement I take under such circumstances, I prefer the best company I can get. I'm very fortunate in being able to have a proxy in favor of sleeping in my walks alone. Your and I have each slept half the time."

With these words, Margaret lost her fear and walked the rest home between her fingers. Brian walked to the door with her, and then stood prayed a while on the window.

"It is a brilliant here," he remarked, after a moment of this performance "and a very pleasant one, I think, if I can don't see the use of spoiling my pleasure."

"Don't spoil your pleasure for worlds. If I felt any interest in your home it likely to do so, you need only forget you have a home."

"My home!" he repeated, with a bitterness raised her half-concealed sarcasm. "When I consider my position here, do you think I can call a home?"

A change passed over her face, but for a moment she could not answer, though when she did it was in a tone whose lightness belied any deeper feeling.

"I always gave credit for a fair share of sense, Brian, but now I find you sadly mistaken. I think I am going to hunter your bad temper you are so unkind."

Brian was not mollified at these words.

"It is no use in turning it off that way, Margaret," he said, bitterly. "I tell me plainly that you married me because you felt under obligation to me so. You blame the one who marries her money, but I think marriage for pride is just as bad."

"Have done yet" broke in Margaret, when anger permitted her to speak, would you have the obligation to say such things to me, and I wonder how I can act here and let you see them. I don't excuse yourself. You are forever insulting me and then begging my pardon. I'm tired of it. Sometimes I wish you would stay in the city. That I'm don't wish anything of the kind, I'm sorry you go out of your way to accord for dinner. I will not have it. I don't intend to go to the table that way."

Brian noted upon this hint to make himself more presentable, and during Margaret's absence he tried to make his peace with her, in this he was successful, for, her lit-temper was short-lived. At the same time, he noticed that she was paler and thinner than she had been a few weeks before. What was the cause, and why had he not noticed the change?

Don't you ever grow tired of Rinaldo? he asked her, with a rather sharp glance.

"Never" was the decided answer. I love Elsie well, I believe I love Rinaldo as much as I can.

"It is strange," he added with a slight sneer, "that you manage to agree. The life which brings you happiness is the emptiness and disappointment to me. The shadow of a seeming reality."

"Yes, I know you make it only a shadow, Brian. It could be better, I know. You have the interest and advantages to make a great man."

"Yes, I know, Margaret, but not in practice. My laziness, or you will, is the cause of my failure."

"Indeed, I wish you'd find some other reason for it. I'm tired of it." "Do not let me be a burden to you, or a reproach to you." I wish you'd find some other reason for it. I'm tired of it." "I'm afraid my nature is too strong for me, and I fear I will do what I may try my skill in mould-line for your benefit." Her lips curled with scornful sneer.

CHAPTER X.—Continued.

Once in her room, Margaret did not go to bed, but sat down in a large armchair by a light wrapper she had "fixed up" for Hilton's adventure.

"Are you asleep?" she called, softly, fearing sometimes he was sensitive, she opposed the door and entered.

"Oh! Miss Hilton," she cried, going to the side of the bed and pinning her hand with extremely quaintness on her lips, thinking from "Are you better?"

"Yes, about the same as I was when you left me."

"No doubt, I'm glad I didn't, I'm so fond of you, Hilton, that nothing had a magical effect. I hope you are better."

"Do you mean, I'm a bewitched man? you have a pleasant way of putting it."

"Oh, I mean nothing, Hilton, only I really quite fascinating. I regret to tell you, I'm a sinner."

"Well, I'm sorry, Miss Hilton, you forgot to come, Margaret. You know so much more than you happy as many when you don't. My brave little woman must need and give way to this despondency, be less for a while, if you are not too tired, and we will talk. We have plenty to talk."

"Yes, perfectly. And so happy, Miss Hilton."

"The tone of pain in the low-spoken words filled Miss Hilton with vague misgivings, but she answered cheerily:

"Naturally she would be happy. I spend the rest of my life alone." Margaret, child, are you doing quite right?"

There was a moment's silence after this strange question. Margaret leaned her face in her hands, while a hundred doubts and fears flashed through her mind. Then, looking up with a new determination in her face, she said with decision:

"Yes, Miss Hilton. I have gone over that old case—this with myself so many times of late. The trouble lies with my views of life. I guess I started out with ideas of ideal bliss. I have found real life, and it is disappointing. I have sinned, I suppose, in my ideal, I also sinned in my life. All those sins are setting within me now. Your kind, I hope you will sleep well."

Notwithstanding this earnestly expressed hope, Margaret lay awake for many hours, thinking of Hilton's last words, and making many resolutions for the future.

CHAPTER XII.

WRONGS AND RIGHTS.

From the beginning Hilton had been agreed that Margaret and Alice should be near him, and the latter had, after the double wedding, left for the elegant home prepared for them in Boston, and Hilton's invalid condition was greatly improved by the presence of his sister.

The Hilton mansion was a fine specimen of architecture and the fashionable few who were admitted to its hospitality were charmed by the fine proportions and elegant furnishings.

The latter contented themselves with admiring and congratulating the wealthy young heiress who so unselfishly and so thoroughly devoted herself to her brother's comfort.

Margaret had spent a little more than a month in Boston, and that time seemed to her as the most quietly happy of her life. But otherwise her life was passing the same as it had been for the last twelve months.

Her relation toward Brian was unchanged. She was kind and considerate, but he was aware that she had their intercourse. Any demonstration of affection on his part would be met with surprise. She might could herself in the security of her own heart, she might alone for it by a honored extra attention, but the feeling was there, waiting but the occasion to show itself. And Brian saw it. In time more, he learned to repress his natural desire and approach Margaret with only friendly warmth.

It was all wrong, Margaret was forced to admit, in her moments of self reproach. But who was to blame, Brian or she? Marriage had strengthened her growth. Was it her fault that Brian had outstripped her? Was Miss Hilton's degrading influence not the strongest and most effective influence which found so in her life?

For Brian seemed to have undergone a complete change. He was earnest, generous, thoughtful. He felt it is a growth, and he was a man. He felt it is a growth, and he was a man. He felt it is a growth, and he was a man

MICHIGAN FARMERS.

WHAT THE McKINLEY BILL HAS DONE FOR THEM.

The Democratic Campaign Howls of 1890 Proved to be Gross Falsehoods—Prophets of Evil Taken in Their Own Snares.

During the state campaign of 1890 the farmers of Michigan were grossly deceived by the managers and the press of the Democratic party. The McKinley bill was passed too late for the people to learn its provisions and comprehend its true purposes before election. The Democrats took a dishonest advantage of that fact, and filled their papers full of gross misrepresentations of its provisions, purposes and probable effects. Although the Republican press strove manfully to let the people know what the new law was, not a Democratic paper helped to disseminate the truth. The Democratic managers preferred to keep the people in the dark in order to deceive them the more readily.

After telling the farmers of Michigan that the prices of tin ware, clothing, woolen goods, dry goods, hats, shoes and in fact all the necessaries of life would greatly advance, the Democrats capped the climax of their falsehoods by saying that the McKinley bill did not favor the farmer at all. Now let us see, by comparing our facts from the McKinley bill itself those facts: October 6, 1890 the tariff act took effect. On that date all entries of importations under the old tariff were closed at midnight October 6, that being Saturday night. On the following Monday, eggs, which had before come from the western counties of Ontario into Michigan free of duty, were subjected to a duty of five cents per dozen.

Up to this time the importation of eggs into Michigan had aggregated, in round numbers, the enormous quantity of 20,000 dozen per week, at an average price of 15 cents per dozen. The farmers were taking the whole trade of the home market of the Michigan farmers $225,000 every year for eggs alone and giving nothing therefor in return.

This robbery of the Michigan farmer by the foreign producer practically stopped at midnight October 6, 1890. The imposition of a tariff of five cents per dozen did the business, and the sum of $225,000 per annum, formerly paid the Canadian farmer, now goes into the pockets of the Michigan farmer—against the protest, however, of the Democratic party.

Now in this all according to the free trade theory the importation of a tariff on eggs of five cents per dozen should have raised the price of eggs to the consumer just five cents. It did nothing of the kind. October 4, the last day eggs were free, they were worth just what they had been for some time—14 cents per dozen. There was no material change in price to the consumer. Following the footsteps of the protective tariff and no other change except that they were purchased of Michigan instead of Canadian farmers.

But there is another fact which ought to puzzle the free trader and to astonish the farmer. If he cared anything about facts. Under the price of eggs was not materially changed in the Detroit market, a three thousand feet away is the BRIDGE AGAINST THE FREE FILL ACT 1890 (THE AMOUNT OF THE TARIFF, following Canadian whatever importations it remains, THE CANADIAN PAYS THE TAX.

These are not theories; they are cold, and facts. And what is true of eggs is true of nearly all farm products, as our Canadian importations are now curtailed, and especially of barley.

Prior to the McKinley act the United States was the principal market for Canada's surplus farm products. We had a surplus of the same products. Then Canada's surplus was added to ours, was it any wonder that prices were depressed and the tendency was downward?

Since the McKinley act was passed, corn has had to bear for other markets. But we encountered no competition at every turn, and she has met with but little success. It is reasonable to add that her farmers are correspondingly distressed. But the surplus of her products has been taken off our market and has left it free to our own farmers, very much to their advantage, because the expense of transportation to other markets is saved to them.

Morse's Scarecrows.

Judge Morse's opinions of the soldiers of Michigan is not a very flattering one. He thinks he can use the old ones as scarecrows. This is what he said in a Grand Rapids Democrat recently:

I talked at a meeting last night and made a splendid time. Tomorrow I go to see to another soldier's reunion, and on Friday tomorrow night. Then I go to Ionia to see the boys there. I am doing soldier's work, and I find it thus looking at you, and I think we can do it. I want to see you before we get through with it.

If he thinks he can use the "boys in blue" as scarecrows to keep Republicans out, he is much mistaken in the character of both soldiers and Republicans. The Republican party has no fear of the old soldiers.

The country is not further a soldier should be the next governor, but rather a Democrat. And the Democrats are running on a Democrat.

THE DANGER SIGNAL.

CLEVELAND TELLS WHEN IT SHOULD BE RAISED.

But the Republican Party is the Only One That Has the Wisdom and Patriotism to Raise It—Words of Timely Warning.

One of the silliest scares ever raised during a campaign to delude the people is the present Democratic howl about the so-called "force bill." And yet the Democrats, since they have been driven from their free trade and "tariff reform" entrenchments by the weapons of protection and reciprocity, have been laying great stress upon the "force bill" howl, as a campaign argument. It is but another of the usual Democratic attempts to create prejudice against Republican principles. To undertake this lawless & the Democratic outcry against force in elections, if it be necessary only to read what the Republican party demands in its national platform. This is the plank, and the only plank, against which the Democratic howl about a "force bill" is directed:

"We demand that every citizen of the United States shall be allowed to cast one unintimidated ballot and have it fairly counted, so that votes may be accurately and promptly ascertained and duly published. We will secure to every citizen, be he rich or poor, native or foreign born, without distinction, sovereign right, guaranteed by the Constitution, the free and honest popular ballot, the just and equal representation of all the people, and we will, if need be, by legislation under the laws and the foundation of our republican institutions, and the party will never relent its efforts until the integrity of the ballot and the sacred franchise shall be fully guaranteed and protected in every state.

"There is no more patriotic plank in our faith than that which calls upon the National Government to protect the ballot in elections or federal baptisms, in the polls. That plank demands nothing more than the United States consulting guarantees to every citizen nothing more than is requisite to the perpetuity of our popular government. Are constitutional rights such a logy to the Democratic party?

Grover Cleveland himself has fully approved the principles embodied in the national Republican platform. On the 22nd day of February last, he delivered a lecture at the exercises of the Michigan University, at Ann Arbor, on the subject of "Development in our National Life." After discussing a number of topics in this theme, he said:

"I have thus far spoken of a people's sentiment as something which may exist and be effective under any form of government and in any national condition. But the thought naturally follows, that if this sentiment may be active in countries ruled by a power originating outside of popular will, IT MUST, WHEN ITS EVIDENCE AND MANIFESTATION ARE WITH OUR OWN MEN, WHO RULE THEMSELVES AND ARE MASTERS THEIR LAWS. In lands less free than ours, the control of the government may be more easily maintained, if those who are set over them are fit to make concession to their sentiment; yet, with or without such concession, the strong hold of force may still support the power to govern. BUT SENTIMENT IS THE VERY LIFE BLOOD OF OUR NATION."

Cleveland is a good enough Republican to vote for Harrison and Reid.

Two of a Kind.

The Confederates have declared a protective tariff unconstitutional in their fundamental law adopted at Montgomery. Congress shall have no power to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises only necessary to pay the debts, provide for the common defense and carry on the government of Confederate States, but no bounties shall be granted from the treasury nor shall any duties or taxes on importations from foreign nations be laid to promote or foster any branch of industry.

The Democrats declare a protective tariff unconstitutional in their platform as follows:

"We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government is a government of enumerated powers and that a protective tariff declaring for the purpose of revenue only, Confederacy and Democracy are two of a kind.

A Marathon farmer discovered a farmer's nest in his barn and destroyed it by fire. There was a small insurance on the barn, but the hogs, calves, colts, wheat and farming utensils were a total loss.

The farming journal objects to John T. Rich because he has been an officeholder for 20 years. Judge Morse has been an office-holder for 21 years and in two political parties.

It cost $2,123,143 43 to run the state of Michigan from June 30, 1891, to June 30, 1892, including permanent administration. It costs $2,000,000 to run the state of Ohio for a year. Ohio is about twice as large as Michigan and has a Republican administration. The difference is due to the fact that Ohio is in favor of the Republican administration.

JUST FROM THE PRESS!
This 4 Volume Edition of
Ridpath's History of the World.

From 5002 before Christ, all nations and people up to the present time. It embraces no less than the very cream and essence of researches from 60 of all the historical knowledge of the world, besides the translation of the first, second and third hieroglyphics by Champollion at an enormous expense.

A brilliant and authentic narrative; 1500 elegant illustrations copied from the World's grandest master paintings, each one of which marks a thrilling story and incident of history. The copyright from those historical art dormement from President Benjamin Harrison, leading Senators, Governors of States, Congressmen, a large number of the most eminent scholars, and the leading press and Presidents of the country. The public are therefore no undoubted guarantee that is entirely worthy of their confidence, and we feel sure that its merit need only be known to bring it to the notice of all admirers of the grandeur of literature, the philosophy of Home, and Gibbons and Mathey, the fertility of Dickens, are all united in the pen of Ridpath, so that he has not only rivalled the dry bones of history with the flesh and blood and colors of beautiful figures and renewed the glittering pageant of a dim past, but even the humble toiler receives his just due from his great historian.

President Benjamin Harrison says: "The author's labors are deserving the highest praise. I most heartily recommend the work for study and early reference.

From J. H. Vincent D. D. LL. D., Chancellor of Chautauqua University, N. Y.: Prof. Ridpath has put the world into shape for caring, using, enjoying. This book is a permanent College chair of generally history in one's own house.

Hon. Andrew Dawson, ex-Chancellor University of Georgia, G. A.—I do have ever seen. Judging from my own experience, I cannot recommend this great work to warmly.

From Perin S. Fitch, Superintendent of State Teacher's Institute of Michigan—If every teacher had the work we would have better teachers and better schools.

PEACHBLOW PORCELAIN.

The Secret of Glass That Permeates the Ware.

The peachblow porcelain is of Chinese manufacture, and is about 200 years old. It is not, as is sometimes supposed, the designation of a particular shade of color, but a rare and peculiar glass, which not merely covers the surface of the vessel, but penetrates the entire texture of the article, so that if the same be broken the internal structure is detected with that of the surface. The method by which this result is reached is unknown, and much money has been expended in vain to discover it. The glass, we know, therefore, the result of a happy accident.

Specimens of it are rare in China today, where it is prized as highly as ever since. Most of that of which there is definite knowledge was taken from China by the Dutch in the days when they monopolized the trade with that country, and from Holland has made its way over Europe. The specimens in this country have almost all of them come either from Holland direct, or by way of France, with their pieces of it were early carried by the Dutch, arousing unusual interest among the French potters.

$50,000,000 IN MATCHES.

Value of the Yearly Output of European Factories.

The oldest and it is said the largest match manufactory in the world is in Sweden. Matches were made there long before they were in this country. Splinter of wood tipped with sulphur was the shape of the match, the use of which they were used. In twenty-five years the output of matches made in modern matches increased 1,000,000 to 500,000 a day.

Some of the machines for making matches are marvels in these days. Make 50 revolutions a minute and turn out about 2,500,000 matches daily. Rather more than this is the average load for the whole population, are made in Sweden, also the cheapest. Strange to say, the quality of these Swedish matches is nearly equal to the best that the state intends to resume the manufacture of and computes that the profits will amount to about $1,000,000.

Altogether there are in Europe about 30,000 factories, and they yearly produce matches valued at $25,000,000.

Bleeding Religious Persons.

The practice of bleeding religious persons still exists in India, as is evidenced by the following from the Allahabad, India, Pioneer. The last event occurred recently at Meerut: "A fakir, wearing merely a loincloth and 400 pounds of iron chains and bandages, recently left the cantonment station. The railway authorities refused to allow him to travel as a passenger, but sent him as goods by weight, in spite of his argument that native women were never charged for their anklets and bangles. The iron was cut off, and at once it was seen that the man had to be incessantly sprinkled with water. He is an old man and nearly died at the station."

An Appropriate Prayer.

A reverend gentleman tells this story of a little boy. The boy was tired from a hard day's play, and when he retired he was too sleepy to say his goodnight prayer. His mother tried in vain to have him say it, and finally sent the father in. He found the boy just sinking into a tired sleep, and demanded that he should get up and say his prayer. The little fellow arose wearily, sank down upon his knees by the bedside and began: "O, dear Lord! please make pops say his prayers when he's as tired as I was. Amen."

Utilizing Sleep.

The quantity of heat wasted by sleep has suggested projects for utilizing it in raising steam, but nothing practical has been obtained until recently. At Atlanta in New South Wales an unknown slag is run into the bottoms of iron chambers that can withstand internal steam pressure, and jets of water are forced on the slag in a short time the chambers are filled with steam that may be utilized in other parts of the works.

The Castle of Mary Stuart.

When Mary Queen of Scots, on Feb. 18, 1587, was led to the scaffold she held in her hand a precious crucifix, which has changed hands many a time since that date. The last owner of the greatly esteemed relic was the German poetess, Countess Hahnfelden, who left it at her death to the cathedral in the city of Mayence, where it has lately been deposited. It is no longer perfect, in consequence of small pieces having been broken off and lost, but the genuineness of the relic has been proven beyond the possibility of doubt.

"The Cave of Spiders."

The "ice caves," the "blue grottoes" and other natural freaks of this kind are completely laid in the shade by the Colorado "cave of spiders." It is situated near Buena Vista, and is said to literally swarm with spiders of a curious species and of immense size. The "cave of spiders" was discovered in 1878. The webs woven up this cold subterranean grotto are so large that it said to be as strong as ordinary "bobbin lace twine" and of a bright, shining color.

Red Sunsets and Fine Weather.

The reason for the red sunset indicating a fine day is, we come to be assured, the amount of vapor floating in the air refracts the beams of the sun and more freely transmits the red rays of light than the yellow ones. It is the degree of moisture in the atmosphere which affects the refraction of the light; and where the red rays of evening are freely transmitted the amount of moisture is not sufficient to cause a point, and therefore promises the following day to be fine.

A Lesson to Painters.

A Yarmouth captain who had a small coasting schooner lying in port decided to give a lesson to painters in general by himself painting the vessel's name on her bows. He could not reach high enough from the float, and did not care to put out a scaffold stage, so he reached down over the side to do the lettering. After finishing the job on one bow, he went astern to read his handiwork, and this is what met his gaze—SIIPDVE

"I AM SHOT."
On a Hot Night She Wellered in Soda-Water Here.

A lady stopping in New York during a "hot spell," was much troubled by fear of burglars. She had just dropped asleep one night, when she was aroused by a sharp report, like that of a pistol, and felt a tingling sensation in her shoulder. Putting up her hand, she was horrified to find her nightgown saturated with some fluid, which she was sure was blood. "Burglary, Henry!" she cried to her sleeping husband. "I am shot! I am bleeding to death!" "Nonsense, Em," her callous boyfriend replied, as he got up and lit the gas; "you have been dreaming." "But I am wet with blood," persisted the terrified woman. "You are wet, but not with blood," said the husband; "it's—ugh!—and he burst into roars of laughter. He had inserted a bottle of soda-water during the evening, "but not opened it. It lay on a table, pointing directly at the bed, and it was evident that, exploding under the heat, it had shot the cork and half the soda-water across the room, and hit the lady as she slept.

TAKES THE BUN.

A Story That Cannot Be Equaled in the Records of the Arizona Club.

Adam Hook, a real estate man of St. Louis, has a son, Walter, who is a great story-teller. He had been up to the Northern lakes replenishing his fund. He was one of the best shots he has been inflicting on his friends since his return: "One day when I was out rowing on Spirit lake I saw a single duck in the middle of a large bunch of tame again. It was terribly hot, so I got, I felt that the waves seemed to be getting tinged from a transitional state of pease to old Sol. Why, really, even the waves seemed to be getting warm. Well, maybe they weren't; but any how I knew that the water was running off them in regular wavelets. They rose in the center and spread out in rings. I was only one of them equal to the emergency. I raise right up in full view of our boat and shoot the rising bits tall above the surface by plastically begun to fall. Now, Mr. Hook, you fancy we weren't surprised? We only wished we were as cool as that duck."

She Killed the Snake and Died.

A negro woman, who lived near Charleston, S. C., left her home in pick nicics. While moving about in the hickory patch she saw a large rattlesnake coiled up ready to strike. She also started to run, but her dress caught in the bush, and in an instant she was bitten on the leg. She began screaming her hand. Be at onceweighed the fatal plunge at the snake, hacking fangs in her hand a second time. He made a third strike, this time at her face.

The poor woman, with remarkable courage, caught the snake by the neck and beat its head against a stone until it was mashed. Almost immediately she was overcome by the poison and fell unconscious a few minutes away from the body of the rattlesnake. There she was found by neighbors and revived long enough to tell her story. She died soon after being taken home.

Dreaming Had Lost His Sense.

The friends of the religion in a Moravian church, through one of its representatives, recently refused Christian burial to a countrywoman on the ground that he was minus a nose.

The case is reported by Novosti, was that of an old peasant of Rakhmanoff, who, duly laid out for interment, was visited by an intruding grimalkin during the temporary absence of the mourners. When the priest saw the corpse, and the sacristan was ordered to bring the relics to perform the last services for the dead, making it necessary for the sacristary authorities to compel burial five days later.

A New York Dog Official.

The New York gas works board of directors recently passed a dog an assistant superintendent of its works and a well-paid officer he is. His name is Beauty and he made his appearance at the works some months ago, refusing to go away on any conditions. He has a curious habit, besides catching the rats and mice about the building, of compelling a stranger to give up his portable property.

Various Barrels.

A barrel of whisky, beer or cider contains 31½ gallons, the Cincinnati lamp oil barrel has 42 gallons, the Kentucky whisky barrel from 40 to 45 gallons. In several states of the East a barrel, as a measure of articles other than liquids, is a legal fixed quantity. In a half bound of the Eastern states a barrel of grain is 5 bushels; of rice, 320 pounds; of flour, 196 pounds, and of lime 320 pounds.

Urbanity Italian Marriages.

When a marriage takes place in Italy in a princely family the bride and groom, after the religious ceremony, present themselves to the pope to receive his benediction. Then the young couple, in wedding costume proceed to St. Peter's alone, and, kneeling on the bare flags before the statue of the "Prince of the Apostles," pray.

A Gift of Slaves.

A short time ago the Moorish Kaids gave the sultan of Morocco and his son a present of 200 male and female slaves to celebrate the event of the marriage of the heir to the Moorish throne.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Life Pills, Bucklen's Arnica Salve and Electric Bitters, and have never handled remedies that sell as well, or that have given such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity purely on their merits. F. G. Hixon & Co., Druggists.

MRS. HARRISON MAY DIE

ATTENDING DOCTORS RATHER GLOOMY.

The President Will Be Designated as Long Lake Indefinitely—Cholera Has at Last Landed in New York—Proof in the Wine.

The President's Wife Very Ill.

Unless there should be a decided improvement in Mrs. Harrison's condition within the next few days, of which there is very little prospect at present, the sorrel may be expected. The President will leave Washington with Mrs. Harrison and her physicians whenever it is thought advisable. It is clearly apparent that his stay and attendance at these ceremonies are altogether contingent and indefinite. Dr. H. T. Thatcher of Washington, F. F. Dunlapp of New York and F. T. Bradford of Boston held a consultation at the President's cottage at Long Lake in regard to the case of Mrs. Harrison, and at the close issued the following statement for publication. Primary diagnosis, pneumonia tuberculosis, at right side, associated with nervous prostration, with dyspnoea, amphoric at apex, dullness, with rapid effusion of water in the right chest, necessitating two tappings, with some relief. Present condition, critical, on account of inability to expectorate of fluid. Secondary diagnosis of fatty degeneration of the myocardium, last seven years, with two tappings, with some relief. Present condition, critical, on account of inability to expectorate of fluid. Signed, Henry Mason Thatcher, Francis Fitzwalter Dunlapp, Frank Tuttle Bradford.

The following expresses the situation at Washington at present regarding the illness of Mrs. Harrison, and at the close issued the following statement of her condition. Primary diagnosis, pneumonia tuberculosis, at right side, associated with nervous prostration, with dyspnoea, amphoric at apex, dullness, with rapid effusion of water in the right chest, necessitating two tappings, with some relief. Present condition, critical, on account of inability to expectorate of fluid. Secondary diagnosis of fatty degeneration of the myocardium, last seven years, with two tappings, with some relief. Present condition, critical, on account of inability to expectorate of fluid. Signed, Henry Mason Thatcher, Francis Fitzwalter Dunlapp, Frank Tuttle Bradford.

Mr. Harrison's physicians have sent out a statement in which they say that their patient's condition is critical. The primary disease from which she is suffering is pronounced to be pulmonary tuberculosis of the right side.

Chief Murray, of the Department of Public Safety of Allegheny, Pa., and Detectives Gibson, Ackerman, Marlowe and Donaldson, who were charged with embezzlement, were acquitted. The cases were placed on the country.

Chas. Rogers, aged 7, of Kenton, O., has been sent to the reform school for back robbery.

The New York Committee of the World's Fair has adopted resolutions urging Congress to allow the Exposition to be opened on Sunday.

J. H. Marvin has been nominated for Governor of Colorado by the Cleveland wing of the Democratic party.

Returns from the Maine election give Burr 6,000 votes (Rep.) for Governor 12,000 plurality.

EASTERN.

Frank Garvin, a Pittsburg newspaper artist, aged 21 years, shot his wife Cora, through the heart at their house on Avery street, Allegheny. The couple were married last Tuesday and the cause of the deed is supposed to have been female jealousy. Mrs. Garvin was 19 years of age and was very pretty. She was the daughter of Homer Redpath of Chicago, a former resident of this city, and came on Monday to meet Church, the scoundrel is to have met her. Church, who is married, is a former employee of the company.

Maggie Jones entered the house of John Walters, a farmer 18 years of age, living near Masontown, Pa., and after binding and gagging Mr. and Mrs. Walters and their brother, Jacob, threatened to shoot them if they failed to disclose the hiding place of their money. The robbers secured $143 and then left, after extracting a promise from the old people not to tell who had taken the money. It is thought the outrage was committed by members of the Dudley gang.

Three men lost their lives in a caving building at a seaside hotel at Long Branch, N. J., on Monday afternoon. Foreman Volmond descended a ladder into the basin while in about twelve feet deep, but the instant he reached the bottom he shrieked and threw up his hands imploringly. Thomas Jones went down to Volmond's rescue, and the effort cost him his life. Why a city of children be collapsed and dropped upon Volmond's feet falling into the hole, and Volmond McNally then went down, and he too, was overcome.

The Sensation of the Hamilton Alumni on the arrival Friday at noon of the worst fears of the New York health officers were verified. Thirty-two deaths occurred during the voyage, five cases were taken ashore from the cabin passengers, two among the crew and twenty-five among the steerage. The ship is full of cholera. Dr. Soskin, organ 181 steerage passengers, twenty-eight cabin passengers and the crew numbered seventy-nine a total of 1,000 souls aboard the ship. The health officer said the ship's health officers were the most fearful. It said the Hamburg after the ship was officially reported to be infected and was the last one of the Hamburg-American Packet company's line to sail from that port with immigrants.

The following expresses the situation at New York generally on Thursday: Number of deaths, 6, new cases, 10; total deaths to date, 15; death passage, 31; sick including 31 suspects (Prince of Wales), 10; sick from the scourge, but the disease not spread to the city, 10; total number to have been sheltered, The best feeling prevails, and the Board of Health stands on unshaken balance. Six of the new cases were from the Normania. They were attended on the ship by Dr. Jenkins, and the surgeon of the Normania was taken from Hoffman Island to treat on board and with the other new cases is doing well. The Normania's cases are all steerage passengers. Dr. Jenkins, after leaving with the sick, the "suspects" remained on board his ship in quarantine preliminary to the new patients.

WESTERN.

At Visalia, Cal., the Kaweah Staples, Kentucky lodging house, and a number of other buildings were destroyed by fire. Twenty-three horses were burned. Loss, $100,000; insured for $40,000, believed not accidental. The loss was grouped Sunday morning.

Henry C. Hoyt, of St. Paul, superintendent of Telegraph for the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, is dead to an extent in the north of Minnesota, and thousands of millions of dollars, and he expects no difficulty in obtaining a new job. The little is also involved.

The Grand Trunk shed and instantly killed James W. Gilmore, his wife, with the baby, are going to the place of examination to have been caused by Asiatic cholera. Dr. Jenkins, Dr. Soskin and Dunham are now making a thorough search for the deadly germ in a fifth fatal case, in which the Hoffman Island pathologists are baffled.

Revenues received by the Iowa wagon or service from various parts of the State show that the Farmers' Alliance was very general throughout the State. The general impression has been that Missouri slope. Then is but little effective work in the Dakotas, Kansas lands along creeks and rivers. The general impression has been that of the State the frost was just beginning to be felt when the Alliance work was general throughout the southern section of Nebraska. The great storm will be retarded. Vogel also suffered but little.

Geo. Niblock an old resident of Elk Rapids and well known and liked through the surrounding country, died at his home Tuesday morning of blood poisoning.

A meeting was held at Mackinac lately of interested parties in regard to a company to build two of the finest passenger boats on the lakes to run between Mackinac and Chicago.

While Mesdames A. A. Hamby and W. C. Deacon of Kalkaska were out sailing in Rapid River township the other day they met a large bear. The albino stopped and looked at them, the bear differed. After holding a mutual admiration society for a few moments the bear turned aside and rooted into the bushes.

The finest load of peaches ever shipped from this section of the fruit belt if not the entire state, was sent from Judge Hansdell's orchard on Wednesday. Sherman's big moving van was used and the load consisted of 2500 baskets, making 100 bushels of splendid Crawfords. They were sent by team to Gladstone consigned to a photographer here before it went to the dock.

A few days ago some one approached a Harbor Springs hotel man who takes none of the leading city papers—with the news that the asiatic cholera would soon be here. Thinking it was some distinguished Frenchman about to visit us remarked I don't care damn. She can go as far as to Hoot's. I got no room as I dam sure ting I don't give her my ed not by a dam sight.

The Artesian Well, of Harbor Springs made mention of a dusky damsel walking down the street just ahead of us and through the waist of her gingham dress was read "Hannah, Lay down Best Pickles under systems." In large red letters and a set of three foot extending from one shoulder to the other. The editor notified the manufacturers and a fifty-pound sack was on the dusky maiden.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lyle Jackson

CHAPTER XIII—Continued.

She bent her head, pretending to examine the glittering atoms, but raised it immediately, to say rather slowly: "Tell me what you wish them, and you shall have it."

Brian gave a questioning glance at her half-averted face. He hesitated, but only for a second. The next he had caught her in his arms, and holding her against his leaping heart he pressed a long passionate kiss upon her pale mouth.

She made no his slightest resistance, though her face had grown very white.

He was her own, unforgivable as this sign. "You are angry," he said, allowing her to go at last.

"No, not angry, that was your Christmas gift."

Her spoke with an effort and once moved her hand to her lips. Brian watched her with a longing she felt rather than saw. Yet with his eyes she read a new fear, a shadow of the old, behind the intensity of his love.

"Is it cold," remarked Brian, after an awkward pause. "I think you had better go in before you catch a cold."

Margaret's eyes flashed. Her temper had been tried by several circumstances that morning, but none more provoking than this speech. Brian was quite unexplainable at times. Yet she was angry, he said, allowing her to go in.

"I wish you had thought of the consequence before you married me, when you turned with the bitterness that filled her breast.

"I suppose you are angry, Brian," said Margaret, at last, "but I wish you could have seen."

"Don't quarrel, please. I don't like it. If you do feel that sufficiently to be cross, you at least, is in my power. I will not have you cross."

Her eyes flashed at that determined tone, and paced her lips.

"Are you going to the city again?"

"Yes, to-morrow. I can't spare Dion a little of time like at times."

"Are all my company, Mr. Margaret, rather bitterly. "You are complimentary, decidedly."

"In standing your company, Margaret, you know my feeling perfectly well. It is of the place, not you, I complain. What could induce you to come near the place?"

"What can we do in the city? What do you do there?"

Margaret asked this question very quietly.

"What can one do? repeated Brian, ignoring the personality. "Rather ask that question of the Vanderbilts, or any fool, who, by dint, that it takes to every fool, has acquired the ability to spend money, accomplishing both. There's pleasure for everybody in the city, from amusements to fill up one's time, and a continuous hum be enjoyed and heard, he answer.

"Then you are not satisfied I am so anxious that amusement is the end and aim of the existence, I think you have enough to fill up your great mind.

"But if you had your great desire, Margaret, certainly. Reality, Margaret, you know, is a most unsympathetic young woman, and I'd be delighted if you would drop one in two of your theories by the wayside."

"You have been waiting then," he questioned, quite bewildered by his strange manner. "Margaret, I wish you would speak and tell me what I have done."

"Yes, I have been waiting," she said, with unusual gentleness. "If Brian could only see himself, I wish I could have felt your loss sincerely. It was cruel Father Brian, I know, to see me leaving him for—he might—comfort you. Marry me, Brian."

Margaret ended softly, as I leaned towards Brian, and he caught her hand. "No, Brian, no one can do that. It is impossible, Margaret, I think his sympathy would be very hard to bear. I love you, Brian, I love you, but I cannot marry you. Look only at the ugly of trouble, I am a hopeless cripple, to which misery has no part. Necessity is a very accommodating force, and has so many shades of meaning for different people. I, for working every hour to death, I'm afraid that is also an accommodating term. I beg and sight over under the slightest exertion a Step toward that insanity, the end.

"I suppose I am that lazy man?"

"I shouldn't be at all surprised. And, getting joking aside, Brian, I do think that no man has a right to do nothing. Lounging about day after day, with no thought, no care, no aim, no ambition, self would, it seems to me, make a man miserable, and I believe you would be if you tried it. Now, don't look at me in that way, Brian, I don't mean that you are miserable, I know you have other, worthy reasons, but I believe you would be if you tried it."

Margaret started. Was this dreamy, "

"You are mistaken," came the answer in Brian's tones, "I have no desire to change Brian in any respect. Please don't think of such a ridiculous thing."

"You didn't show more for her than he does for his wife. I'd show you with the greatest pleasure, if I thought it would be needed. Leaving his wife as he does, to attend to his business affairs to the lack of the neighborhood, and giving her to believe he takes not of distinction, will, every single person in the place, be discussed, and around the city like a leader, bringing in contrast the attention he pays your sister Brian. Doubt save him the other day, Margaret, he left home alone, yet dined to your sister. And Margaret has seen—Brian, I know you will be angry, but I can't help it—Brian, I know I can't get a second, you may? Do you know, Brian, I am afraid of Jessie? I think I can talk quietly and calmly when I remember that she is the same of heaven do she seem such a lovely. Why is the name of a fallen angel heaven should she have such a lovely? Why is the name of a fallen angel heaven should she have such a lovely? Why is the name of a fallen angel heaven should she have such a lovely?

THE SILK INDUSTRY.

A MICHIGAN MAN GIVES SOME INTERESTING FACTS.

American Silks in the Lead—Highest Wages in the World Paid Here—The Hodge Influence of the Protective Tariff Demonstrated.

The firm of John H. Cutter & Co. is one of the oldest silk manufacturers in the country. Their business at Germantown, Pa., was started in 1837. Mr. E. H. Fenton, of Detroit, represents this firm and travels from the Atlantic to the Pacific in search of business for his employers. He thoroughly understands and appreciates the benefits which the McKinley law has afforded the silk industry of America. From him we learned the facts embodied in this article:

The American manufacturer makes the best silks in the world as is shown by an answer given to the show firm in August by a San Francisco dry goods house for a piece of black silk to be sent to Paris, France. It was for a lady living there, who had worn this make of silk before—and was satisfied that she could find nothing to equal it in the French market.

"From the landing of Columbus to the close of the war of the rebellion, England and France supplied the American market. Macclesfield, England, was the head center of the silk industry, until England adopted free trade, when the advantage slipped from her and today Lyons, France is the silk centre of all the foreign countries.

"Imported silks in our own country began as an experiment, nearly 10 years ago, and now employs more than 200 establishments, gives employment to more than 30,000 persons and yields a yearly product, at present, valued at about $25,000,000. Looking backward 10 years, in 1882, it was $22,102,000.

"The duty on manufactured dress silks is 50 per cent. I am sometimes asked by a merchant who leans toward free trade: What will your mills do when we elect Mr. Cleveland and take the duty off of silks? I simply say 'It will make no difference in the manufacture, because we will have to cut the wages of the help to meet it. This would be the only way we could compete if we stopped running. Should we maintain the same wages, foreigners could and would advance the price of silks. We would have to close the mills for we could not compete in wages.

"Statements made before the ways and means committee of Congress, of which Roger Q. Mills, Roswell P. Flower and John G. Carlisle, among others, were members, showed that the daily labor employed in reeling silk used to cost a day. The labor on this country, for the same work, costs from 50 to 75 cents per week. In Germany the same labor costs from 25 cents to 50 cents per day.

"A witness brought before the aforesaid committee of 'reform' was asked what was the difference between the wages of labor in the manufacture of silk in the countries with which the American is supposed to compete. He answered, very sagaciously, 'Why, about 40 per cent as much as they do in England, about twice more than as much as they do in France, three times as much as they do in Italy, and six times as much as they do in China and Japan.' Against this enormous competition, our brilliant tariff protects American workers in the silk industry.

"During Cleveland's administration the wages of silk workers declined about 10 per cent, but in 1891 a change came, wages began to go up, and continued to go up until now they are equal to, and in some instances in excess of, those of the finest times before the administration referred to.

"At the time of the passage of the McKinley bill, imported silk plush cost $4.00 per yard. The McKinley bill put a duty of $1.50 a yard on silk plush. For a time the price went up, but American manufacturers started up to produce the article, and it is now sold—better article—for 75 cents per yard.

"A recent writer in the Macclesfield, (England,) Herald, after showing the effects of foreign tariffs on the silk trade of that city, concludes with the following questions: 'Is it not time yet to look into these matters? Is there any wonder that the trade of the country is hard? Do the weavers of Macclesfield know the reason that they have so many weeks of play lately, against their wishes? Shall we longer wait to see other trades drifting away from us like the silk trade? Shall we continue to find employment for the foreigner, and starve our own people? It is time we were thinking of these questions seriously.'

"The McKinley tariff has certainly caused the establishment of many new silk mills and imported vastly and expansion to many old ones, giving employment to an increased number of laborers, at higher wages than at any time during the past three or 12 years."

"The people of the United States have sold to their foreign neighbors in the first year under the McKinley law over 20,000,000 more in value than they have bought whereas, there is no other nation with such a record. Until adequate protection came this country never made such a record.

PRICES NO HIGHER

BUT IN MANY INSTANCES THEY ARE MUCH LOWER.

Statements Showing the Change of the McKinley Tariff Leave Democratic Lies About Higher Prices Completely Refuted—Plain Talk by Practical Business Men.

The Democrats, in the state campaign of 1890, told the ladies that the effect of the McKinley bill would be to increase materially the cost of imported goods, for the increased duty would be added. The ladies were also told that the domestic product would also be increased in cost, for the American manufacturer would add the increased duty. They were assured that a protective tariff was always levied only to allow the domestic producer to add to the cost of his article and that he would do so as soon as the McKinley bill went into effect. Did it work that way? Read the following interview with a member of the firm of Strong, Love & Co., wholesale dry goods dealers of Detroit:

"Happy I am to say that, with the McKinley bill advanced very materially in duty on almost every article, they had not even recently purchased necessary goods cheaper than we could have bought them for. They not only did not advance prices in proportion to the increased duty, but they made no advance at all. Some foreign goods we did have bought in advance to pay from 40 per cent. ad valorem to 48 per cent ad valorem and we have from 22 to 25 per cent ad valorem, and yet we have not advanced our prices. We have taken the increased duty out of our profits. Some items in which we have had a large business, we have reduced from 40 per cent. ad valorem to 18

The fruit in orchards near Traverse City is selling this year at from $1,000 to $5,000 per orchard. Lots of fruit from the pine belt is going to St. Paul and Omaha. The change from the small of pine to the odor of fruit is a noteworthy one.

Cross Village, Cor. Harbor Springs Will: It is very seldom that we have the pleasure of announcing a social entertainment given in honor of any of our dusky maidens but at this time we are exceedingly pleased to make mention of the entertainment given by Miss Josette Porco pinn-jaw at the family residence on Pawine street last Saturday evening. The guests were many, and from all parts of the United States and Middle Village the occasion being the departure of Miss Mary Ann Squashvine, who left Monday morning for Sturgeon Bay, to pick huckleberries.

A CALIFORNIA RAILROAD.

Run by Three Men and With Grades of Six Feet to the 100.

A curious little railroad train goes crawling up and down the mountain from Tres Pinos to Hurt's limekiln in the Gavilan range, San Benito county, California, every day. It is probably the strangest railroad that was ever seen. The train moves on a curious single track and is drawn by an engine set low on it. Both the engine wheels and those that support the cars have a single, steel-like piece of steel that sets in the slot track, for it must be borne in mind that the track has a slot in it not unlike that seen on a cable track. In addition to this each wheel has a flange on each side of it so that it cannot get off the track, no matter how abrupt the curves. The road as completed is now nine miles long, but when pushed through as intended it will be fourteen miles in length. Three men run it. These consist of an engineer, fireman and a brakeman. In one place there is an 800-foot grade mounted at the rate of six feet to the 100, yet the engine puffs right along with three loaded cars, not in the least bothered in any way. There is one grade a quarter of a mile long, in which an average of four feet is gained to the 100. One curious thing about it is that the wheels are in a sense rollers. They reach from one side to the other. The flanges hold them on, assisted by the pivot, past which each side of the wheel comes down.

SHE SOLD THE HOUSE.

How the Widow Jones Was Induced to Part With Her House.

"Yes," said an engineer of long experience to a reporter, "railroading is an exciting, yet an attractive life. It has its aches and pains, but nevertheless the 'goodies' and 'sweets,' too. If one may put it so.

"I remember a peculiar accident that happened to me on one of my trips not long ago. To go back a little, I will say that one of the many sharp curves on the road is on a fifty-foot hill that slopes down to an old farmhouse. This house was occupied by an old woman known as the 'Widow Jones.' She had been asked many times to sell out to the railroad, for fear that some accident would happen to her and her home. But the widow had refused just as often, and things went on thus.

"Well, you see, one night about 12 o'clock, as we struck the curve at a good speed, the engine broke from the train, left the track and went rolling down the hill. The fireman jumped safely, but I was not quite enough. The next moment found the engine crashing through Widow Jones' house, with myself all mixed up in the debris. I picked myself up just in time to see the widow smart out of her bed and make a 'beeline' from the house.

"Next day I knowingly smiled as I read in the paper the transfer, Widow Jones to the R. R."

HIS SONG MAY FREE HIM.

A Musical Convict in Sing Sing Prison Asks His Love Story.

Every now and then Sing Sing prison furnishes a romance, and a case in point is the story told about Alfred Sheridan, who is serving a term for forgery.

He was engaged to be married in the week he was arrested for his crime, and so devoted was his fiancee that she expressed a willingness to marry him even behind the prison bars, but this he would not allow.

She often goes to visit him, and as they are both fond of music they sing together to the delight of the prisoners.

She has written several pretty songs and sent them to Sheridan. He has also composed several songs in his prison cell. One of his compositions, entitled "Sweet Home Mary Ann," was written by jotting down the notes on a piece of cardboard as he whistled the air. He has sold it to a New York music publisher for $25 and 1,000 copies.

With the cash and what he expects to realize from his 1,000 copies he has engaged a lawyer to present his case to the governor for a pardon, and as a preliminary his sweetheart is soliciting signers to a petition to be presented to the governor at the same time.

Man or Man Ox Record.

The greatest man on record lives in Bedfordshire, England. He sold his son-in-law one half of a cow, and then he refused to divide the milk, maintaining that he had sold only the front half. The son-in-law was also required to provide the food the cow consumed, and compelled to carry water to her three times a day. Recently the cow passed the old man, and now he is suing his son-in-law for damages.

—The construction train finished work loading gravel on the Ironton branch Monday last, and went south. A force of men will be employed about two weeks in raising and lining the track, and the track will be ready for business.

—Hugh Donnelly is still in Chicago where he went for surgical treatment. It appears that the trouble is necrosis or rotting of the jaw bone, instead of a cancer, and was caused by a fracture in extracting a tooth. The surgeons give him very little hope.

—Chester Denton has purchased a half interest in the grocery business of J. Z. Linton, and the firm will be known as Linton & Denton. They will soon remove to the old Stockman store building, now occupied by Paul. The business will be considerably enlarged.

—We present our readers this week with the President's letter of acceptance. As an enunciation of Republican principles it is a model of excellence. The Republican party is content to rest their case on the arguments therein presented, because they are therein in every line and sentence. Read it.

—The first shipment of Ridpath's History of the World arrived last week for delivery, and another is on the road for this place. Who says that the people of Charlevoix are not in the front rank with those of whom the great Napoleon said—"Show me a family of readers and I will show you who moves the world."

—Hon. E. H. Green, when in Washington, met with a painful accident. He was sitting in a car, when an old soldier standing outside stuck his cane through the window, accidentally. A piece of broken glass flew into the Major's eye. He was taken to a hospital suffering badly. The glass was removed, but the injury was a severe one.

—The Methodists of Charlevoix are fortunate in securing for their pulpit Rev. David Engle, late of the Petoskey charge. Mr. Engle is an able preacher, a most intelligent and pleasant gentleman, and a pastor who is always popular with his people. He has filled some of the best appointments in the Conference, and did a grand work on the Petoskey charge. The church here has reason to congratulate itself.

—Prof. Ferris, the Populist-Democratic candidate for Congress, has infested the State Central Committee of the Peoples' party that he is fully in accord with the Omaha platform and will vote for Weaver for President. Our authority is Dr. Nothnis, chairman of that committee and editor of the Greenville Sentinel. When we consider that the Peoples' party platform and that of the Democratic party are diametrically opposite on the money question, we cannot see how the Professor can prove himself honest or consistent.

—Petoskey Record: Rev. David Engle, who has been pastor of the M. E. church here for three years past, goes to Charlevoix this year by appointment of Michigan conference. In that time he has seen a beautiful and commodious church completed and dedicated and the membership substantially increased. A spirit of unity prevails, and the outlook for future prosperity is largely due to his wise counsels and conservative management. That the debt is not lift paid is due to the adverse season of 1891 and the heroic efforts of the society the preceding year; hence, they have thought best not to put forth the necessary effort. Rev. Engle bears the good wishes and universal esteem of the people of Petoskey both inside the churches and outside to his new charge.

—Rev. Mr. Macpherson will preach at Ironton Sunday afternoon.

—Drs. Lewis, Kanagy and Bartlett last week received new surgical chairs.

—Somebody is stealing Luke Haslett's potatoes. Luke has a gun, and the party who is doing the business had better watch out.

—Mrs. H. A. Carr, the fashionable milliner, announces that beginning Oct. 13, 14 and 15, she will open to the public a new line of fall and winter goods. New ad next week.

—Dr. Lewis returned home Friday morning, and found his family quartered in the vacant store room in the Opera House block. In the fire the Doctor and his family lost nearly all their extra clothing, and a great many household articles. Those navy of are badly damaged. The doctor requests us to convey his thanks to the many acts of kindness extended to his family in their distress.

—What is this old story we used to hear about the gored ox? We are reminded of it by this bulletin concerning the local "dog episode" viz: young friend of the Democrat was at a gathering of Charlevoix last years ago. Had he been, he would remember a front window was broken in the Stockman building, now occupied by Paul, in a skirmish effort to remove the Harrison Log Cabin that round over the bandpusters door. The noise frightened away the culprits, but not before they had broken one of the traces that held it. During the same campaign the McCabe pole, then a Republican pole, bore a Harrison flag. The political genius who directs local Democratic affairs will doubtless remember that, in an attempt to remove the flag one night, the halliards were cut, but the wind blew them into an adjoining tree, safe from Democratic hands, from whence they were recovered next day. These events are still fresh in the minds of a large number of our people, and the righteous howl that fills the air concerning the removal of Democratic flags recalls them vividly.

The Campaign Opened.

The Republicans of Charlevoix opened their campaign auspiciously Saturday evening last, at Lewis' Grand Opera House, on the occasion of the visit of Hon. Ed. Ia. Lee, John Avery, the nominee for Congressman.

The Republican Club met at the Village Hall and marched in force to the Opera House behind the Petoskey City band. Although Saturday night was unfavorable, owing to the business places not closing till a late hour, the audience was large and enthusiastic.

Dr. Avery's address was a candid, logical and dispassionate expose of the tariff question from a Republican standpoint, and was frequently applauded. His arguments were "sledge hammer" in character, and sown in good ground was evinced by the close attention given the speaker from first to last.

He was followed briefly by Col. C. F. Morse, of Grattot Co in well chosen words and clear cut arguments.

Chairman Coulter and Secretary Moore, of the County Committee, occupied seats upon the stage, the latter introducing the speakers, with a few preliminary remarks.

The Republicans of Charlevoix are in line for the contest, and will do their share in raising up a good majority in the county.

Mr. Haslett to Speak Here.

Chairman Coulter, of the County Republican Committee, was in Detroit last week, and succeeded in securing Mr. Adolo Haslett for an address in Charlevoix County, which will occur in Charlevoix on Wednesday evening next, Oct. 12, at Lewis' Grand Opera House.

Mrs Haslett has for the past twenty years been one of the foremost Republican campaign speakers of the state, and has spoken in every important town with marvelous results. She is one of the most eloquent and logical speakers in the country, and the event should be made a great one.

The Republican Club.

A Republican Club of about 60 members was organized Thursday evening last at the Village Hall. Wm S. Moore was chosen President, Geo. A. Sherwood, Secretary; and H. S. Harsha, Treasurer.

The club starts out with a wide-awake spirit, and will make itself felt for Harrison and protection.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Mrs. Alexander Hay Japp

CHAPTER XIV.—Continued.

Where Margaret reached home after her ride, darting which her thoughts had not ceased to dwell upon her late lifelong knowledge, she found that Brian had arrived.

Relieved at the unwelcome, yet forting the impossibility of her being left to her then, sharp enough, but, introducing him to begin a business, Margaret had greatly exercised herself, and was feeling quite easy in her mind, when she was thrown into a state of nervous excitement by the sight of her brother.

Brian found time to course an apartment which seemed to Margaret very pleasant in all particulars, and as the time sped from noon to afternoon, she began to wonder if he meant to realize the offer of Mr. Black.

Her fire was so well kept up, her tea so well made, and she had spread so temptingly the little table, that all combined with it, that Brian was in a good humor, and was full of good suggestions, and look forward to a pleasant life, with his sister and her husband, strangers and Sassenachs surrounding them, and Brian's home quite a thing of the past, having to make it seem, she had not, and after the second meeting was over, Brian was so well satisfied with himself for he contented in that great, lonely place, with Mr. Black's proposal, that he was.

She would have stolen away quietly to have avoided the pain of eating an ill-tempered, and ill-mannered, and ill-natured, and ill-conditioned wife, that Brian had been making every the manner, if Margaret had returned.

"The old relation," thought Margaret, with a sigh, "has gone away quite from me without regret, but if I must lose a member here it would be Brian."

Vanity was said with the message that Margaret was indeed, and she hoped he would excuse her for to-night she remained with her brother. Brian had scribbled on the fly-leaf of a book.

"Hear Margaret, dear Margaret, I am sorry to go without you. Let me come up and sit with you to-morrow, and tell you all my prospects, and hurt you, if you can, with only my thoughts full down to Mr. Black's offer of a partnership."

Margaret, with only her thoughts full down to Mr. Black's offer of a partnership, sat down to read Brian's note, and was rather startled at the last sentence.

"Let you go, indeed!"

A twinge passed over her face, and he answered with a smile of pleasure.

"Perhaps you wouldn't call it enjoyment." Margaret. "I don't know, sometimes I wish I could think and act the same as other people, and have the misery of regret, and I daresay I would be happier."

"Indeed you would," she interposed, quickly. "Not in this and act as I do, precisely. I do not mean that, of course, because I cannot help it, but I do, for an example, but if you would only try it, it would be a great deal better, if things which bring regret.

"That is what I mean, Margaret, I should be perfect if that were the case, I am unfortunately of a disposition, a disconcerted nature, and I can not help it, and I believe I have been, in my, to certain things, and I am sure, my dear, I should be very happy if I could, my to like the offer."

"Well, Brian, I think it is very. I am sure, I should be very happy. I would like to see a partner in the business, and I am so sure, when he's looking at the boys and children. Of course people always have children." Of course people always have children." Well, I do, too. Yet, what a pleasure it is to be a bachelor! I suppose. Some time ago, in this or that, I thought I was in love, and it was a splendid opening, no doubt, and I was thinking of the young lady for it. So I told Mr. Fit-Boodle that he was a bachelor, and I was a bachelor. He couldn't understand my reluctance. "My dear," he said, "all bachelors are different from them." and so forth.

"Well, I am sorry you have thrown away so many advantages, if it is really a shame. I can have no patience with you."

Brian was silent, under this outburst, Margaret's tones sounded low and in sorrow, but he had no desire to provoke lively spirit from his sister.

"You know one for a very serious failing," he said, at last, gently. "There are only number of men in the world, day who have no sense of any kind. They are with a sense of fun, and they are all their time. Here, for example, is Gilmore. Here are Gilmore, and the "Man, and the only to work, there, understand." said Margaret. "Under the circumstances it is surprising that you honor Gilmore at all." Why do you speak in that manner, Brian? He regarded her with more than surprise."

"Would you wish me to arrange?" "Arrange, indeed, two fools arrange! "Are you so really and serious to be rid of me? How would you like the trouble of bothered to discuss our affairs, and—"

Margaret laughed heartily. The neighbors had laboriously discussed it on the home's evening. Be sure of that. I don't believe I can be hurt more than I have been on that score. Let me be anything rid of you, you talk without reason or sense. Brian. I do not regard you in that light, I regarded you in a light—it is sublimest, most exquisite, which I don't—quite. Sweet, the idea of making a great man, and I have decided, I am sorry, and I am endeavoring here I'll have to endure life in New York. I am going to Paris."

"Paris!" Paris, repeated Brian, startled. "Paris! Paris, repeated Brian, "Is your mind quite right? Why should you go to Paris?"

"Because I have a great, great, great heart to leave Elsewhere!"

Margaret dropped her fork and looked to pick frisky little Nell.

"Don't bring up things, I've not." "Nonsense, nonsense, Brian." "Nonsense, I can understand, I can be talked about, and I want to be so, because I am of the wonderful New York, where life is so flexible that it can stand everything. Your expression, sir. You will have to find me a resting place. Not a place that would be a bother. A small apartment with the back, please look for one, if you can find time from your important social duties."

"Yes," said Brian, gradually recovering from his surprise. "If it is what I can, most willing to your our sorts of service to my dear Brian, and a little worry made for sarcasm, from I know, I would be a fitting Sassenach. I wish I could understand the sudden whim of a young lady, and I do understand that. I've thought several times that I would be delighted to spend our winters in New York and our summers here. I shall be happy to enjoy your company and the city at the same time." Margaret did not reply to this, and when she spoke again it was on another subject.

Brian found time to course an apartment which seemed to Margaret very pleasant in all particulars, and as the time sped from noon to afternoon, she began to wonder if he meant to realize the offer of Mr. Black.

Her fire was so well kept up, her tea so well made, and she had spread so temptingly the little table, that all combined with it, that Brian was in a good humor, and was full of good suggestions, and look forward to a pleasant life, with his sister and her husband, strangers and Sassenachs surrounding them, and Brian's home quite a thing of the past, having to make it seem, she had not, and after the second meeting was over, Brian was so well satisfied with himself for he contented in that great, lonely place, with Mr. Black's proposal, that he was.

She would have stolen away quietly to have avoided the pain of eating an ill-tempered, and ill-mannered, and ill-natured, and ill-conditioned wife, that Brian had been making every the manner, if Margaret had returned.

"The old relation," thought Margaret, with a sigh, "has gone away quite from me without regret, but if I must lose a member here it would be Brian."

Vanity was said with the message that Margaret was indeed, and she hoped he would excuse her for to-night she remained with her brother. Brian had scribbled on the fly-leaf of a book.

"Hear Margaret, dear Margaret, I am sorry to go without you. Let me come up and sit with you to-morrow, and tell you all my prospects, and hurt you, if you can, with only my thoughts full down to Mr. Black's offer of a partnership."

Margaret, with only my thoughts full down to Mr. Black's offer of a partnership, sat down to read Brian's note, and was rather startled at the last sentence.

"Let you go, indeed!"

A twinge passed over her face, and he answered with a smile of pleasure.

"Perhaps you wouldn't call it enjoyment." Margaret. "I don't know, sometimes I wish I could think and act the same as other people, and have the misery of regret, and I daresay I would be happier."

"Indeed you would," she interposed, quickly. "Not in this and act as I do, precisely. I do not mean that, of course, because I cannot help it, but I do, for an example, but if you would only try it, it would be a great deal better, if things which bring regret.

"That is what I mean, Margaret, I should be perfect if that were the case, I am unfortunate of a disposition, a disconcerted nature, and I can not help, and I believe I have been, in my, to certain things, and I am sure, my dear, I should be very happy if I could my to like the offer."

"Well, Brian, I think it very. I am sure, I should be very happy. I would like to see a partner in the business, and I am so sure, when he's looking at the boys and children. Of course people always have children." Of course people always have children." Well, I do, too. Yet, what a pleasure it is to be a bachelor! I suppose. Some time ago in this or that, I thought I was in love, and it was a splendid opening, no doubt, and I was thinking of the young lady for it. So I told Mr. Fit-Boodle that he was a bachelor, and I was a bachelor. He couldn't understand my reluctance. "My dear," he said, "all bachelors are different from them." and so forth.

"Well, I am sorry you have thrown away so many advantages, if it is really a shame. I can have no patience with you."

Brian was silent, under this outburst, Margaret's tones sounded low and in sorrow, but he had no desire to provoke lively spirit from his sister.

"You know one for a very serious failing," he said, at last, gently. "There are only number of men in the world, day who have no sense of any kind. They are with a sense of fun, and they are all their time. Here, for example, is Gilmore. Here are Gilmore, and the "Man, and the only to work, there, understand." said Margaret. "Under the circumstances it is surprising that you honor Gilmore at all." Why do you speak in that manner, Brian? He regarded her with more than surprise."

"Would you wish me to arrange?" "Arrange, indeed, two fools arrange! "Are you so really and serious to be rid of me? How would you like the trouble of bothered to discuss our affairs, and—"

Margaret laughed heartily. The neighbors had laboriously discussed it on the home's evening. Be sure of that. I don't believe I can be hurt more than I have been on that score. Let me be anything rid of you, you talk without reason or sense. Brian. I do not regard you in that light, I regarded you in a light—it is sublimest, most exquisite, which I don't—quite. "Paris!" Paris, repeated Brian, startled. "Paris! Paris, repeated Brian, "Is your mind quite right? Why should you go to Paris?"

"Because I have a great, great, great heart to leave Elsewhere!"

"Paris, indeed," she answered. "I see quite well this intrigue."

Her appearance boded her words, and Brian thought it was regarded her rather than a constraint sitteness fell between them. Margaret was prepared for some remark. She found nothing to say, and Brian, after a time, rose to go, as soon as it had passed her lips

For State Representative, Richard W. Bagley.

The paper dollar of the Republican party is as good as gold in any state in the Union. The people want it kept so. They want no Chicago platform money, good only in the state that issued it. That was the case before the present currency was established. A man who was going 200 miles from home always changed his money, or was continually embarrassed in paying his bills. Every trayer and business man who dates back to that time knows this to be true.

At the state convention last week, at Grand Rapids, for the nomination of a candidate for justice of the supreme court to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Judge Morse the contest was close between Judge Hooker of Charlotte and ex Justice Cahill, of Lansing Several other names were mentioned but on the fourth ballot Judge Hooker won by a vote of 383½ to Judge Cahill's 194½ The nomination is an excellent one and will give universal satisfaction.

Thursday morning of last week General Masterworkman Powderly, of the K. of L. met C. F. Black president of Pennsylvania State League, of Democratic club at Wilkesbarre, in that State. Powderly asked Black if he could tell where Grover Cleveland stood on the tariff and the reply was: "That's more than I can tell." I tell you what," said Powderly; "I don't think he knows where he stands He is bedevilled, as it were." Continuing Mr. Powderly said: I used to admire that man, but since his meddlesome interference with the silver question I have lost confidence in him." Well, as between the Republican and Democratic parties, I am a Republican this time although I think both parties have altered their usefulness, was Powderly's parting shot. The stand Powderly takes will create a sensation in labor circles. For some reason or another he is very bitter against Cleveland.

Richard W. Bagot the nominee for Representative, is one of the oldest and best known residents in Antrim County having resided here since 1856 born in England his early life was spent as a workman in a silk mills and he knows what it is to work for English wages, but the prospects of increased pay, and broader opportunities to work one's way onward and upward, induced him to leave his native land and it is that he held near and dear and seek his home and fortune in the great Republic beyond the sea. After reaching Elk Rapids, he worked at whatever he could get to do, drove on team and swamped in the woods. Having some education his employers gave him a position as clerk in their store, and during the winter season he scaled logs. Realizing the advantages which the protective tariff laws of America gave to city and industry to all classes, over those he had lived and worked under in England, he early united himself with the Republican party, and has ever since been an active and influential worker in its ranks. To know "Dick" Bagot, as he is familiarly called is to admire him and at his home no man stands higher in the estimation of the people than he. At the organization of the new savings bank, an institution whose stock is all but by the people of Elk Rapids, Mr. Bagot was elected President over a more influential man. As the chairman said in placing his name before the convention, "in recognition of his long and faithful service in the Republican party, it is but a fitting tribute that the convention and the voters of this district drop the mantle on the shoulders of genial "Dick" Bagot. The convention gracefully acknowledged the force of this remark, now let the voters do the same and give our nominee an overwhelming vote next November.

ALL FOR RICH NOW.
REPLY TO THE DEMOCRATIC CIRCULAR LETTER.
The Attempt to Use an Old Document for a Purpose Never Intended Has Recoiled—the Sentiments Vigorously Repudiated by Many Old Veterans.
In 1884, John H. Palmer, of Lapeer City, formerly a Republican, but now a democrat, wrote a circular letter and procured the signatures of eighty-three ex-soldiers, protesting against the action of John T. Rich because he recommended the appointment of John A Stoots instead of Stewart Horton for postmaster at the City of Lapeer. There were 41 Democrats, 37 Republicans and two Prohibitionists who signed the letter, 11 of whom have since died and 16 removed from the State. Many of the signers were not patrons of the office. This letter has recently been printed in circular form by the Lapeer County Democratic Committee, and is being circulated by them all over the State to induce Republican ex-soldiers to vote for Allen B. Morse for governor. We presume so barns will come from it but in justice to Mr. Rich, and that the Republicans outside of Lapeer county may know how we feel toward him, we, the under signed, Republican ex-soldiers, who signed said letter, being all the Republicans excepting two who signed the same now living and residing in Lapeer County, do hereby protest against the use of said letter to influence ex-soldiers to vote for Allen B. Morse, and we do hereby pledge ourselves to vote for John T. Rich, and recommend all Republican ex-soldiers to vote for him for governor, as in our judgment he best represents our sentiments.

The P. of I. in Politics.
The following open letter to the editor of the Harbor Springs Republican explains itself.
EDITOR REPUBLICAN Will you be so kind as to give space in your paper for a few facts and thoughts on the above caption. Last November Mr. S. S. Partridge, grand president of P. of I. of the state of Michigan was through Northern Emmet, organizing assemblies. A number of them were formed in this section. At the time he was here he made a strong Republican speech in favor of the election of Harrison and Morton. Now I do not know that Mr. Partridge is a Republican, but I know he is an Republican in principle and I know he is a strong Republican in his sympathies. I know he is a Republican because he is a member of the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, and I know that the Republican party is the party of the farmer, and that the farmer is the Republican party. I know that the Democratic party is the party of the rich man, the party of the money lender, the party of the land shark, the party of the tariff robber, the party of the trust, the party of the monopoly, the party of the class, the party of the aristocracy, the party of the south, the party of the south against the north, the party of the south against the west, the party of the south against the east, the party of the south against the farmer, the party of the south against the laborer, the party of the south against the Union soldier, the party of the south against the Union, the party of the south against the Union and the party of the south against the south. I know that the Democratic party is the party of the south against the south because it is the party of the south against the south because it is the party of the south against the south because it Nothing that Nancy Hanks does in the way of speed seems to be impossible, as when at Terre Haute, Ind., she placed the world's record at 2:04 Wednesday afternoon when the gray's owners had prepared for the feat. Everything hoped for that all records were swept away before President Jones made the announcement, and the crowd yelled itself hoarse some of excited men rushed out on the track to congratulate the clever newsman who had placed the news of the fall on a still higher pedestal. Nancy Hanks trotted her third quarter in 30 flat, this marvelous flight enabling her to make the last half in 1:02, by this performance Budd Doble also lost the prize offered by Robert Bonner to the horse that went in 2:05 on the regulation track. Scarcely was this sensation over when George Starr, racing against time, on the smooth track, sent Monbars to beat his record of 2:14½, made at Lexington. The colts was in great form and lowered the record for 3-year-olds to 2:17¾, a mark held by Axtell twenty-two odds in 2:18¾.

CLEVELAND IS HEARD.

HE WRITES HIS LETTER OF ACCEPTANCE.

Tariff Reform the Principal Theme in His Comments—Against and Honest Pure and Civil Service Reform Demanded—Accepts of the Nomination.

Text of the Letter.

Following is the letter of Grover Cleveland accepting the nomination as the Democratic candidate for President of the United States:

To Hon. William L. Wilson and others, Committee, etc.:

GENTLEMEN: In responding to your formal notification of my nomination to the Presidency, I feel that it is fitting that I should take occasion to say to the public that I have continued reflection and observation have confirmed the faith I have heretofore held and which I have sometimes plainly and publicly declared, touching the questions involved in the contest.

This is a time when all others with these questions should be considered in the light of duty to a sober appreciation of the principles upon which our government is based and of the obligation of those who are charged with the duty of administering it to have the shall thus be supplied with a test by which to measure the fitness of candidates for public office and a disqualification of the party responsible for our worthy veterans, and of the duty of the government to care for them. The pension roll should be made a sacred trust, instead of purchasing them. They claim it as a gratuity, and it is a gross, cruel, and shameless perversion of means and purpose to make it a source of political profit.

But our pension roll should be a roll of honor, and the duty of their proper care entrusted to demagogue use. This is due to our soldiers, and it is due to the people who are asked to pay the expenses of their brave and the true. It is also due to them to remember that the ability to earn a livelihood and fortitude illustrated by our pensioners, and the patriotic spirit which they represent in public employment should be secured in preference to that which is the product of a long and ever-increasing list of those who regard and gratitude of their employment as the reward of their political work.

Reverting to the tariff question, I deem it my duty to call your attention to the fact that the time has come when the people demand that the burdens of taxation be lessened and simplified, and that the benefits of government be distributed with equal justice and with a view to the common good. This can be done without injury to any interest, and it should be done because the people who have paid the taxes which have accumulated in the treasury of the government are entitled to the benefit of the money they have paid, and because the continued collection of such taxes is not necessary for the proper support of the government.

The tariff laws should be so framed as to lessen the cost of the necessaries and comforts of life to the people who have to pay the tax, and to lessen the profits of those who are the beneficiaries of the tariff.

Recognizing these truths, the National Democracy has declared in its platform that the best principle of government is that which leaves the blessings the fruits from the government to the people who have earned them, and that the government should be administered on the lines of patriotism and national pride, and in the interest of the people, and not for the enriched American enterprise may grow and flourish in the protection which our laws should afford to all our citizens, and that the tariff reform is still our purpose. Though we have been long and earnestly at work in the direction of the practical application of our party's declaration, and have made some progress in the direction of the reform, we have not yet reached the end of the journey.

In conclusion Gen. Weaver says the notice comes from young men, and not from ex-Confederate soldiers. He says he will be in the field at meetings.

Five thousand persons gathered at the State Capitol to hear Weaver. After a long speech in which he said: "Nothing good order, a committee was sent to Gov. Weaver to come, but he declined saying: 'I have been treated with the much indignity already.' He declared that there was no free speech in this state and that the people of Nebraska the audience assured him a respectful hearing." Gen. Weaver was introduced by Gen. Northen and Chairman Atkins, of the Democratic state committee, this he would have a fair hearing.

Nothing to Embarrass.

Caveat are the principal reported in which children, and sometimes grown people, are injured by the cars on railways, it not being generally known that the law of the land requires railways to be really a duality poison. This is the law, and it is a wholesome one, and it should be made more stringent, so that poisons such as pepper, capsicum, etc., may be not used on railways. It is a fact that in very minute quantities, that the constituents of pepper, and the pepper in the manner before to be had an opportunity, this not, which contains a poisonous principle of a very deadly character, may be consumed without inconvenience in quantities sufficient to produce fatal consequences, and it is surprising, not that death occasionally occurs from its use, but that deaths are not more frequent. A fatal case has been recently reported, in which a boy of 9 years fell into a comatose condition after eating two sausages, and died within twelve hours.

'A Holland for an Oliver.'

Four years ago Joseph R. Dixon, of this place, voted for Grover Cleveland for President. This fall he is outspoken for Harrison & Reid. This is what he said in an interview with the SENTINEL scribe Saturday: "Yes, it is true that four years ago I allowed myself to be led away by free trade arguments, and voted for Cleveland. But I am not one of the kind that proposes to know it all, and since that time I have studied the tariff question with an unbiased mind. The results of my investigation, coupled with the clearly apparent results of the McKinley tariff law, have convinced me beyond a doubt that protection is best for American industries and the American laborer. Trade is like warfare; a nation must defend its own trade interests against encroachments from foreign Countries. Protection does this."

"I shall vote for Harrison & Reid and Protection, and do what little I can for the success of the cause."

It is not Judge Morse that I would oppose in his ambition, said a grizzled veteran a few days since, "but it is what Morse represents that I am opposed to. As the crippled veteran I voted to place him on the supreme bench, and he could have had my vote to keep him there, unless there was a crippled veteran, equally as worthy running against him on my ticket. Now it is different. Comrade Morse is a candite for Governor. He is the candidate of a party that never favored the veteran. It has always derided his services and opposed his recognition by the government, and it is now trying to make a president of Grover Cleveland, a man who never lost an opportunity to insult and spite an old soldier when he was president before. A vote for Morse will help to make this State Democratic. It is indirectly an indorsement of Cleveland and I'll be——if either Cleveland or the Democratic party gets a vote from me until the old confederate States stop voting for one solid."—State Republican.

Some time since the North American Review published an article headed "Labor and protection," written by General Masterworkman Powderly. The Democratic National committee are circulating garbled extracts from the article as a campaign document. Mr. Powderly has hitherto been a Democrat but never a Democrat in favor of a "tariff for revenue only" and now has come out squarely for Harrison and Reid and protection to American industries. Last Friday's issue of the Journal of the Knights of Labor edited by Mr. Powderly comes out flatfooted against Cleveland and Stevenson and the Democratic national platform and urges the laboring men, especially the members of the K. of L. to reject the Democratic party, which is antagonistic to their interests. The point the Democrats are trying to make from Mr. Powderly's article in the North American review is the one statement that "protection did not adequately protect the American working man. Mr. Powderly says that by that phrase he meant that they were not adequately protected because foreign workmen were allowed to come to this county and complete with home labor.

Dr. John Avery.

The Greenville Democrat, the largest and most influential Democratic newspaper in Montcalm Co., has the following on the candidate for Congress in this district.

"Dr. Jno. Avery has been in active practice for more than forty years. He was appointed as surgeon of the 21st. Michigan Infantry in 1862 and subsequently as brigade surgeon serving altogether two years and until the close of the war. He has held the office of supervisor in the First ward of our city for the past twelve consecutive years. He has been a member of the State Board of Health twelve years and President the past eight years. Pension Examiner for for twenty years and a member of the Board of pension examiners at Stanton. Dr. Avery has undoubtedly examined more soldiers than any other pension examiner in the state. He was elected to the state Legislature in 1890 by a large majority, filling that position one term. In his various official positions he has always shown remarkable fairness which is characteristic of him and as a consequence has won the esteem and respect of all who know him. At the last Congressional Convention he received the nomination for Congress from this district. He undoubtedly will be elected by a rousing majority. He has always had a place in the hearts of the citizens of Greenville and this district, who appreciate him as a man, a physician, a citizen and a conscientious legislator."

—The U. S. steamer Hancock arrived in port yesterday.

—Masch & Berdan have a change of ad. this week that merits perusal.

—Last week Capt. Edgar Gebo shipped in a large work team for himself.

—'Tis said that Sheriff Hird will reside in Cadillac after his term of office expires.

—Mrs. O. A. Sears and Miss Sue are visiting Miss Emma Martin at her home in Sechelt.

—Our fellow-townsman, A. D. Cruickshank is the Democratic nominee for State Senator.

—John Baker and wife left this morning on the City of Charlevoix for Milwaukee and Chicago.

—Yesterday Mrs. Dr. LeFevre left for a visit among friends in southern Michigan and Ohio. The Doctor will follow her a week later.

—Orlando Blair, the Democratic nominee for Judge of Probate, has withdrawn from the ticket, says the Fast Jordan Enterprise.

—Mrs. Mr. Adelle Hazlett is one of Michigan's most gifted women. She speaks to-night at Lewis Grand Opera House on the issues of the campaign.

—As an attorney, F. W. Mayne is without a superior in Charlevoix county. As public prosecutor, he will give the people competent and faithful service.

—Mr. Elliott, the accountant, did not make the ascent advertised for last Saturday, on account of the cold weather. The event comes off Saturday of this week.

—Mr. Bassett, who most of the present season has been steward of the steamer Puritan, is back in the N. M. Line, and has charge of the larder on the City of Charlevoix.

—Dr. Lamb requests those who are intending to have dentistry done, to make their appointments not later than Nov. 1st, as he will leave for his winter practice in Philadelphia about Nov. 20th.

—Rev. A. M. Parmenter, the founder of the Charlevoix Baptist society and for several years pastor here, has been in town the past week. He sold his residence on the south terrace to Capt. Berdan.

—Last week Geo. W. Miller purchased a lot at Council Lake, and has begun the erection of a branch store building there. Already he has opened a store there in temporary quarters. Frank M. Sears will be the resident manager.

—In another column the SENTINEL states that the most it ever received per folio for Village printing was 40 cents. We had later had the honor of illustrious printed by this paper was a four folio publication, for which we filed a bill for 50 cents per folio.

—John Ward, the Republican candidate for Register of deeds needs no "booms." We do not believe there is a Democrat in the county who does not concede that his election is certain. The only question is that of the size of his majority.

—Democrats have quit laughing at Frank Myers, the Republican candidate for Sheriff. They are beginning to realize that Frank is a good runner, if he is fat. Intelligence from all around the county are very encouraging for the entire Republican ticket.

—H. Connable & Sons are doing fair fishing here with good results thus far. They are running three tugs, and have a warehouse erected on the railroad dock. A side-track has been put in along side their icehouse, and shipments of fish are now mostly made by rail.

—Postmaster-General Wanamaker has decided to issue what will be known at the Columbian series of postage stamps, under a contract signed last Thursday. The new stamps will be of the same height as the present series but twice as long, the increased size being thought necessary in order to properly display the illustrations. They are intended to commemorate the discovery of America by Columbus. It is expected that the entire series will be put on sale January 1, 1893 and during the succeeding year will entirely supersede the present series.

—J. H. Parsons went to Chicago this morning.

—The Onekema arrived here last week and laid up for the winter.

—The steamer Pardon will be rebuilt in Grand Haven this winter.

—Mrs Wm. Stevens left this morning for Milwaukee to visit her parents.

—Work has been begun on Capt. John Beatties' residence on the cemetery road.

—It is reported on good authority that we are to have another through train next week.

—Remember Mrs. Hazlett speaks at Lewis Grand Opera House this evening. Come out.

—Bowman, the photographer, has gone to Cleveland on a visit, and the gallery is closed for a time.

—The Council on Monday evening employed E. M. Guard as water-works engineer at $600 per annum.

—Capt. Port Partridge has bought a lot on the north side just in the rear of the Bank place, and will next season build there.

—The diver was sick last week a few days, and the water-works pipe-laying under the river was delayed. It is done now, however.

—Under the present Michigan game law deer may be killed from October 15 to November 15, in the lower peninsula and in the upper peninsula between the 25th day of September and the 25th day of October. Deer must not be taken or killed in the water or by trap or pitfall, by artificial light or by the use of dogs. The partridge season is open from October 1 to January 1.

—Everybody concedes that Mr. Blair is an honest man, and has made a clean and capable public official. But, if it be true that he has withdrawn from the race for Judge of Probate, it comes unquestionably, from a realization of the fact that this is a good time to quit. The people have been very kind to Mr. Blair for the last twelve years—they have placed him where he does not need a county office in order to keep the wolf from the door. Without a doubt, the people of Charlevoix County would have retired him this fall, had he not, shown the good judgment of retiring himself.

Hayings from Hayes.

Mr. Guyles, of Grand Rapids, has been visiting Daniel Marsac, and contemplates buying land in this vicinity.

E. K. Sly is putting in a set of Fairbanks platform scale, near the depot.

One of D. O. Eley's sons found a weather bureau bottle on the north shore of Little Traverse bay last Sunday, about three miles east of Big Rock Point. It was thrown overboard by Capt. Jeffers, of the yacht Idler, two miles off Sleeping Bear Point. Mr. Eley filled out the instructions and forwarded to Washington.

Mrs. Lillian Chew and Miss Mary Scroggie, of East Jordan, were visiting in Hayes last week.

The school inspectors of Hayes and Bear Creek held a session at Bay Shore last Saturday and adjourned for further deliberation in regard to the fractional school district.

The Misses Anna and Agnes Kopf, of Petoskey, were visiting their parents Sunday.

Do not forget the large new store at Bay Shore. New goods arriving daily, and prices constantly going down. Bring your cash and see what you can do.

Upon the election of the republican presidential candidate depends the removal from Wales of ten of the largest tin-plate manufacturing concerns of Swansea." This statement was made by a son of one of the Swansea manufacturers, and his information was received from direct and reliable sources. The reason and object of this intention is easily defined. The great tin-plate manufacturers of Wales find it necessary to sell the products of their factories in the American market. They can not pay the duty and yet compete with American manufacturers of tin-plate, and they can only escape the payment of that duty by locating their factories on this side of the duty line. When they come here they will build American houses pay American taxes, patronize American merchants, pay American wages and assist in defending the American flag. Do you want them to come? Then assist in the election of the republican presidential candidate.

A Word to the Tax-Payers.

The SENTINEL has never made any fuss about this matter of Village printing, but it feels like making a lusty kick, not only in its own interests, but as a tax-payer.

The Democrat last week published the water ordinances. All things being equal, this is all right. Mr. Hampton is a member of the Council, and the fact has its weight in the award of public work.

But on Monday evening Mr. Hampton presented his bill at 70 cents per folio, or a total of $40. The most the SENTINEL has ever charged for this class of matter, or in fact any official publication, is 40 cents per folio, as the bills on file in the Clerk's office will prove. We do not censure the Council in this matter, as the law makes Mr. Hampton's bill collectable. Mr. Hampton was informed by the Clerk that the SENTINEL's charge had always been 40 cents, but Mr. Hampton refused to cut his bill, and it was allowed.

The SENTINEL has done some Village printing, including the Village Treasurer's report, the tax sales, and ordinances, and it never yet presented a bill for full legal rates, although it knew that 70 cents per folio could be collected under the law.

We should have been glad to do this work at the same price that we have always done it, which we consider a fair remuneration for a publication of that magnitude. The SENTINEL can be exhonerated from any charge of spite in this matter, as bills on file will bear us out in our claim of fairness, but as a taxpayer we kick.

The Democrat has had much to say in championship of the interests of the "dear people," and the burdens of tax-payers. It should apply some of its gospel of economy to home matters, in which it has an official voice, before promulgating any more of its "glittering generalities."

Mr. Hampton is an efficient member of the Council, and has been zealous in the discharge of his duties. It may be claimed that his services entitle him to what the law allows, on that score. But the editor of this paper served seven years on the Village Council, and never yet received full legal rates for Village printing.

A year ago the Democrat roasted the Board of Supervisors on the question of public printing, alleging favoritism and extravagance in awarding the contract to the SENTINEL. Yet as a Trustee of the Village of Charlevoix, the editor of that paper now accepts $40 for doing work which it knew could and would be done by the SENTINEL for a little more than half that amount. Mr. Hampton has himself cured "cayo" with amazing magnanimity on the SENTINEL'S bill of 40 cents per folio, yet is allowed and accepts 70 cents, aggregating a larger amount than was ever allowed the SENTINEL at one time since Charlevoix was governed by a council.

Nevertheless, we admire the masterly nerve that governs our friend in the application of that historic Democratic query, "What are we here for?"

The Democrat should have less to say hereafter about the burdens of the tax-payers.

The new postal money orders which have been ordered by the government will soon be issued. In the new system there is little or no completion. Sheets will be issued calling for amounts from 1 cent to $5, which can be torn off to suit the demands of purchasers, the postmaster will have no writing to do on it, the sender simply endorsing it the same as a check or draft. One cent will pay the tariff on amounts up to $5 instead of five cents as at present.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lucy Larcom

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

The Colonel met them at the dining-room door, and Nell, approaching rather cautiously, gave him a half-expectant half-questioning glance.

"Well, Nell, I've quite made up my mind to be good-natured for that poor Margaret, and behave just as she wants me to. I have not so much to lose by it, after all, as I should have had years ago."

"Then you will be glad to hear that Margaret is to be married in a month, and that she is engaged to a very good man, who will be able to take her home to a comfortable home of her own," said Nell, who was glad of an opportunity to tell her father something that was pleasant, and believing that he would be glad to know that Margaret was to be married so soon, he had no thought for any one else.

"I don't know how we shall do without you," he said, heaving a sigh very wistfully affection. "Bertie told me you were going, and I have been anticipating my own loneliness. Have you known this for some time?" He turned his face between his hands and regarded it with a gentleness in which a variety of emotions found expression. "You are a fairy to leave us, Margaret," he added, sadly.

"Ah, me," she hesitated to answer, in her eyes grew dim and a painful flush overspread her cheeks.

The gentleman did not answer for a second, during which his face worked with feeling and a tender light filled his eyes.

"You are a brave girl," he said, rather tremulously, at last; "I am very glad Heaven will bless you as you deserve. Don't let that consideration trouble you. It might be tempted——"

"You are so good to him, Colonel," interrupted.

"Don't blame him, I suppose, Margaret, you are like the rest of us, ready always ready to defend the man who breaks your heart." Well, well, I not be blind, for your sake, but when I think——" Here the Colonel's voice grew shrill—very one of us. Don't quite forgive you old friend, if you won't let me now ones half so true."

ALICE HAY'S eyes grew dim and she found herself incapable of an answer.

Alice, nursing her distress, broke in with some light remarks, which became sick, notwithstanding her under-lip quivered, and the mist hung in her wistful eyes.

Under the respite Margaret regained her self-possession, and began to speak quite calmly.

No further allusion to her going was made during the meal, though each one seemed quite talkative. Nell particularly strong her spirits, and, notwithstanding her regret for her temerity.

"I don't know how we shall do without you," he said, brushing one hand after another, disregarding the hand she held out to him, clasped her in his arms and kissed her forehead.

"I know it would be hard," she sobbed, breaking down completely. I know this would be harder for you."

"No, it shn't be, Margaret," he said, patting her gently on the back. "I shall wish you great joy, and, even for a moment, I am sorry for myself."

"But when the time comes!" my good Bran, "I shan't be lonely. I shall have Nell and Bertie and Alice, and I don't know how I shall do without you, either, dear." Alice, who was very fond of her, and who was very sorry to lose her, was unable to say a word, but she kissed her cousin with a fervor which was a sufficient expression of sentiment.

"Bertie, I suppose, will be married before long," she said, when she could speak.

"Not for some time, I hope," said Nell, with a little shudder.

"Why, Nell, I thought you liked him very much," said Alice, in surprise.

"I do, very much, but I don't want to be married for years and years."

"Nor I, either," said Alice, with a sigh.

"Nor I, either," said Bertie, who had come in unobserved, and who was very perfectly in accord with the sentiment.

That four-fingered Margaret at once, and, as Bertie took her hand, blushed and expressed as much like dimples of pleasure as her face was capable of. Alice, who was very fond of her brother, and who was very happy in the prospect of his marriage with her cousin, felt sympathetic for her, and, as she looked at her, thought how pretty she was, and how well she looked in her mourning, and how well it became her to be married from her father's house. She was very happy, and felt a long way to send them on something that is not here. Sometimes I am almost disposed to go to Elmwood just for a day. It isn't far from here, you know, but then I remember that I should have to leave after the day was over, and that would be hard. So I think I must always put that thought aside. Bran is so fond of us, that he hates to be alone, he likes the busy life, he finds his country call and duty, and Elmwood has not the same attraction that it had. I have to go. He simply endures it, but I—well, I could live there forever, because it is home and—I love it."

The last words were spoken in a lower tone, but William understood the meaning of her words, and his sympathy was in a state feeling with.

"I wish I could be much you to have New York for something more than to visit occasionally," he said, "but I am instinctive are very proud. We think it a great honor to have our good noisy city of Boston."

Margaret smiled. "You have many attractive characters, that is certain, but while you are proud of your wealth and your city, we are proud of our worth."

"I see and we have enough of it, Margaret, to be proud of it, and I'm glad to hear that you are so proud of your city." Margaret smiled, and, perhaps, thought of the pleasure of disappointing Bertie's family, who had expected to find a very different sort of a wife for their son.

"Can you be happy, Bran?" she said, when William had left the room, and they were alone. "Shall you be happy? I want to know that you are happy."

"Yes, I think I shall be happy. I am very happy in your happiness, Margaret. I am very happy in the prospect of your home. So, perhaps, I shall be happy in my own."

"Oh, I hope so!" she said, with a sigh.

"Why, what is the matter, Margaret? Are you not happy?"

"Yes, I hope so. That is, I don't know. I hope—I—It depends on circumstances, I think."

She spoke rather disconnectedly, and, anxious to divert any impression her words might make upon him she hastened to add.

"Bran I wonderstand me, please. I don't wish you to think I actually dislike the way. I feel it interesting to know what I may have not that faculty, which seems people feel for it. I was born in the country, and so my associations hold the memory of green fields and shady lanes, of the sea and the mountains, and of my home. I have had very walks as I passed streets like Boston, and I feel a long go to send them on something that is not here. Sometimes I am almost disposed to go to Elmwood just for a day. It isn't far from here, you know, but then I remember that I should have to leave after the day was over, and that would be hard. So I think I must always put that thought aside. "I'll bring him, but I'll leave you to convert or prove his impossibility. I know I'm equal to the energy of his either cause. You should really appreciate the compliment he pays you. I don't believe I ever heard him express a desire so much as you to see me."

"Dear me! Why, I feel quite van Lopa in his eyes."

"Oh, no. It is rather indifference. I think he has particularly resolved that he shall not care for vicinity. Pappa follow the fashion, if it is decent, and he is considered quite a satire in the environments. Any notions or anglers would be glad to lose him. The order of money, and now he must be off. I also it's be home to lunch. Good-by. I wish I could see you."

Every day Bran left Margaret with this question, and every day she answered "Not," but always after he had gone she felt she had answered unfaithfully. She was lonely—very lonely. She found as little to interest her as little to fill the long dull morning. Bran substitutes came to lunch, but no other to fill her. Her afternoons were spent in seeing the sights of New York, shopping, or calling on her few friends, and her visits at the theater, which Bran would take her, but more often at hours when he had to attend their engagement which he could not possibly defer.

Even these engagements he would return home in the night, with the heavy, shuddering steps which told them, every step, and which always struck so painfully on Margaret's heart, as she waited sleepless and anxious.

This was the record of the ten days she had spent in New York, and she felt—and was—far away from the reward the Colonel had promised her as what she left this world.

Under these circumstances she could have hardly felt precisely happy, because she was too thoroughly a child of nature not to be willing, at least, to view could understand, the restful, practical difference of her country home. Yet she could have found contentment in this charming little apartment, with its comforts and luxuries in its place, convenient and delightful, in the heart of the city, surrounded by places of interest and amusement, and near the various cities where Bran was fond of spending his leisure.

Bran was in the center of bustle and activity. From her window she could hear the thrilling pulse of a life that was never quiet, ever-moving or leaving of a tune over the sights of one of the busiest cities with the noisy, whistling cabs, the rattle of the omnibuses, the footfall of the thousands, the ever-moving, ever-changing, ever-increasing throng of the busy, hurrying, ever-changing, ever-increasing throng of the busy, hurrying, ever-changing, ever-increasing throng of the busy, hurrying

AMERICAN HATS.

BETTER THAN THE FOREIGN AND JUST AS CHEAP.

English Hats Worn Only to Gratify a Personal Whim—A Whole Tariff Argument in One Short Interview—Some Democratic Logic.

The oracles of Democracy told the people of Michigan last campaign that the McKinley tariff would increase the prices of all the necessaries of life. Now a hat, in this climate, is one of those necessaries. Hence, according to Democratic teaching, a hat ought to cost more than it did two years ago. But does it?

Democratic logic is very convincing to a man who doesn't know or believes anything more than the Democratic teach him. It works about this way:

A man must buy a hat.

A tariff duty is levied on English hats.

The tariff duty is added to the cost—or Cleveland says so.

Since a man must pay the cost and the tariff added the tariff is a tax and increases the price of the hat.

Can anything be plainer? Certainly not from a Democratic stand point. But the Republican party does not stop here. It troubles the people, even an economic fact bearing on the question. The Republican party agrees with the Democrats that a man must buy a hat and that a tariff duty is levied on English hats. But there the agreement ends, and the real process of education begins.

The Republican party teaches what the Democracy never does—that hats are made in America and that no man is obliged to buy an English hat upon which a tariff duty is levied. The Republican party also teaches that the tariff is a tax upon the foreigner who wants to get the benefit of our markets and that he cannot add the duty to the cost, for he has to meet the active competition of American manufacturers.

Why is it that Democratic orators and journals say so little about American manufactures? Simply because they wish the people to think that everyone has to buy goods upon which tariff duties are laid and because they wish the people to overlook the fact that there is any American competition to keep foreign prices down.

The whole subject is finely illustrated in an interview had with C. H. Dickerson, of Detroit, of the firm of Dickerson & Co., dealers in hats, caps, furs and straw goods. Speaking of the McKinley law, he said:

"The increased duty on felt hats correspondent claim an increased price to the consumer, and the consumer is to retain the duty. Nonsense! Felt hats are made duty exclusive, of the same quality of material. On that, however, the duty is the increased duty and he was charged added to retail the hats at the old prices, while the decorticated quality of the material as it is so inconsiderable as to be no factor in its appearance or durability."

So much for the foreign article. Now for what he said of the home product:

"The best grades of American made hats are STRONG in every way to the best FOREIGN MAKE and these goods have not been affected in any way by the McKinley BILL, AND ARE SOLD AS CHEAPLY AS EVER BEFORE."

But Mr. Dickerson lets the Democratic cat out of the bag and explains why Grover Cleveland, Joe E. Jones and other manufacturers of Democratic campaign thunder raise such a howl about a tariff on hats. American hats are not exquisite enough for them. They're not "English, y'know." Those patriotism belongs to the class of customers described by Mr. Dickerson when he said:

"There is a certain class of customers who will have the English made hat and no other. This class has grown to contemptible proportions, and are of the class who are so SNOBBISH and to whom the cost of grat-ifying their whim is of no consequence."

Patriotism in American citizens have little sympathy with such "snobbish class" contempt, for whom elegant heads an American hat is not good enough. The American vote will go with the American hat.

A correspondent of the New York Press calls to mind: "The laboring men of this country should not forget that Grover Cleveland during his administration showed his contemptuous disregard of their interests by permitting the Commissioner of Indian Affairs to purchase for the use of the Indian Bureau several hundred wagons from inmates of the Tennessee penitentiary, all of which were manufactured by convict labor."

Ben Cooper says the Democrats will carry the State this year. The state will be swept and the Capitol too, but with a Republican honor this time.

SHAFFER'S SHAM!

HOW HIS HEART "FAIRLY BLEEDS" FOR THE SOLDIERS.

His Comfortability as Great a Delusion and a Snare as Judge Morse's—Parliamentary Superior to Patriotism in the State Land Office.

From the State Republican:

Land Commissioner Shaffer is reported as saying once on a time, about two years ago, that his heart "fairly bled" for his soldier comrades. Inasmuch as Mr. Shaffer is making his run for re-election on his soldier record it may not be out of place to just recall a bit of history in connection with the land office. When the hero of Culp's farm was accidently installed as high chief magnat of the office there were Just one veteran, a Democrat by the name of Olds.

How that heart must have bled.

The places of these veterans have been filled, and are now occupied by whom?

Well, for instance. There is Stauffer, Miss Sadie, clerk state land commissioner, salary $1,200 per annum.

Shaffer, Miss Gertrude, clerk land commissioner, salary $1,000 per annum.

Shaffer, William T. S., clerk land commissioner, salary $1,000 per annum.

All of the above reside with Mr. Land Commissioner George T. at 704 Ottawa street west, and are his daughters and son.

The other employes of the office are anything but old veterans.

How do our soldiers like this record? Old soldiers, even Democrats, should hesitate, and look up this man's record before they throw away their ballot.

When the gentleman was appointed to the capacity of land commissioner he announced his intention of paying the mortgages on his farm from the proceeds of the family salary received. He did without doubt very successfully, and told a friend on the train recently that the mortgage had been "lifted" and he was on his way to Cass county to purchase an adjoining eighty acres. This last "eighty" is to be purchased with money that should have gone to veterans for services performed.

How that heart does bleed.

American and Canadian Farmers.

Immediately after his return from the Chicago convention, Don M. Dickinson retired to his country home at Trenton, to rest from his arduous labors in the nomination of Cleveland. He was called upon to address the citizens of that place at a Democratic ratification meeting, held on the evening of June 29. He spoke on the tariff question and endeavored to convince his hearers that the lot of the Canadian farmer is much happier than that of the American farmer, under the protective tariff system. That part of his speech, I lift from The Detroit Free Press report, is quoted below:

"Contrasts continued with Mr. Dickinson's rainbow-hued picture of agricultural life on the other side of the river, plunging in comparison made by the Windsor Evening Record under date of Sept. 5. Here are the two pictures in "deadly parallel":

DICKINSON.	EVENING RECORD.
Take the American farmer who is obliged to buy his implements, his clothing, his food, his fuel, his lumber, his house, his barn, his fence, his everything, at a tariff which enables the manufacturer to charge him for $12, value, every dollar he pays for the sale of the top of the plow.	A Canadian farmer purchasing a plow, pays for it according to the tariff, which is 25 per cent. Thus he pays $3 tariff on the $12 plow. Tariff according to the tariff, which is 25 per cent. Thus he pays $3 tariff on the $12 plow.
With the $12 he can purchase the following:	With the $12 he can purchase the following:

The whole subject is finely illustrated in an interview had with C. H. Dickerson, of Detroit, of the firm of Dickerson & Co., dealers in hats, furs and straw goods. Speaking of the McKinley law, he said:

"The increased duty on felt hats necessitated either an increased price to the merchant and the customer or, to retain the former price, a reduction in the quality obtainable, an inferior quality of material. So bad, however, stood a portion of the increased duty and he was thus enabled to retail the hats at the old prices, while the deteriorated quality of the material could in no ascertainable sense be so falsified in its appearance or durability."

"So much for the foreign article. Now hear what he said of the home product:

"The best grades of American made hats are superior in every way to the best foreign made and these goods have not been affected in any way by the McKinley bill, and are SOLD AS CHEAPLY AS EVER BEFORE."

So long as the American citizen can get better hats, made at home by American laborers, paid American wages, than he could get before, it will be hard for the Democrats to convince the people of Michigan that they are being swindled by the McKinley law.

But Mr. Dickerson lets the Democratic cat out of the bag and explains why Grover Cleveland, Don M. Dickinson and other manufacturers of Democratic campaign thunder raise such a howl about a tariff on hats. American hats are not exquisite enough for them. They're not "English, y'know." Those gentlemen belong to the class of customers described by Mr. Dickerson when he said:

"There is a certain class of customers who will have an English made hat and no other. This class has grown to considerable numbers, and are of the class who also to be extravagant and to whom the cost of gratification is a secondary consideration."

Patriotic American citizens have little in sympathy with such "extravagant gentlemen, for whom elegant heads an American hat is not good enough. The American vote will go with the American hat.

A correspondent of the New York Press calls to mind: "The laboring men of this country should not forget that Grover Cleveland during his administration showed his contemptuous disregard for their interests by permitting his Commissioner of Indian Affairs to purchase for the use of the Indian Bureau several hundred wagons from the inmates of the Tennessee penitentiary, all of which were manufactured by convict labor."

Don Compay says the Democrats will surrender the state this year. The state will be swept and the Capitol too, and with a Republican broom this time.

JUST FROM THE PRESS
This 4 Volume Edition of
Ridpath's History of the World.

From 3892 before Christ. All nations and people up to the present time. It embraces no less than the very cream and essence of researches from 60 of all the historical knowledge of the world, besides the translation of the first, second and third hieroglyphics by Champollion at an enormous expense.

A brilliant and authentic narrative; 1505 elegant illustrations copied from the World's greatest master paintings, each one of which marks a thrilling story and incident of history. The copyrights from these historical art paintings cost over $50,000. The work has received the most hearty endorsement from President Benjamin Harrison, leading Senators, Governors of States, Congressmen, a large number of the most eminent scholars, and the leading press and Pretentious of the country. The public has therefore an unfounded guarantee that it is entirely worthy of their confidence, and we feel sure that its merit need only be known to bring it to the notice of all and secure for it a place in the library of every intelligent household. It is admitted that the grandeur of Macaulay, the philosophy of Hume and Gibbons, the brilliancy of Prescott, the fascination of Irving, the rhetoric of Froude and Motley, the facility of Dickens, are all united in the pen of Ridpath, so that he has not only clothed the dry bones of history with flesh and blood and colors of beautiful figures and renewed the glittering pageantry of sons, but even the humble toiler receives his just due from his great historian.

President Benjamin Harrison says:—The author's labors are deserving the highest praise. I most heartily recommend the work for study and convenient reference.

From J. H. Vincent D. D. LL. D., Chancellor of Chautauqua University, N. Y.:—Prof. Ridpath has put the world into shape for caring, using, enjoying. This book is a permanent College Chair of generally history in one's own home.

From Andrew Jaccomb, ex-Chancellor University of Georgia, G. A.:—I do not hesitate to say that it is incomparably the best work of its class that I have ever seen. Judging from my own experience, I cannot recommend this great work too strongly.

From Travis S. Fitch, Superintendent of State Teacher's Institute of Michigan:—If every teacher had the work we would have better teachers and better schools.

EXTINCT MAMMOTHS.

Huge Birds Which Have Disappeared From the Earth.

Those who have read the story of "Sinbad the Sailor," will be interested to know that there is some foundation for the supposed-to-be fabulous stories he told of the roc and its monster eggs. Ornithologists have figured that it was somewhere speculation of the epic family of birds, which are known to have formerly lived in Madagascar. The prize-taken among the eggs which stood (according to skeletons which have been found in graves beds) within a fraction of twelve feet high, and laid eggs, specimens of which are now in existence, which were as large as a two gallon jug and had a holding capacity as great as one hundred and forty-eight good-sized hen's eggs! The giant moa, which did not become extinct until after Capt. Cook's visit to New Zealand, was larger, in point of weight and bulk at least, than Sinbad's roc. The moa was but nine feet high, but he weighed over a thousand pounds. It was on this that Cook's sailors had no difficulty in killing several of them with hard spikes which were used about the ship. The great auk, another species of birds now extinct, was not so remarkable for its size as for the fabulous sum of money now asked and given for specimens of its eggs. In the year 1869 an egg of the great auk sold in London for $1,225.

IT WAS INDEED WILD.

One View of the Subaru of Oregon and Washington.

In Eastern Oregon and Southeastern Washington stretches a vast sandy plain. Its existence is carefully omitted from the maps, and the traveler does not realize what gaps lies until he has swallowed a few gallons of floating, burning coal ashes. Or unless he unwisely lies on car window are battened the traveler emerges from this miniature Sahara with a mighty thirst, and he has been ploughed if run through a flower sill.

The party of Presbyterian delegates passed through this delightful sweetbox on their way to Portland. There was one man among them, though not a member of Presbyterian delegates passed through this delightful sweetbox on their way to Portland. There was one man among them, though not a member of the Presbyterian delegates, Camatilla Junction his attention was diverted from the controversial literature he was reading by the car. He looked out of the window at the warning sea of sandiness.

A solemn look stole over his countenance. The fingers of one hand wound his lips parted, and he gasped in low, rasping tones:

"I'll be darned if that blank blistered country won't have to be fertilized before the resurrection day to raise the dead.

Pius's Architectural Wonder.

The Rotunda "Leaning of Tower" of Pisa, Italy, so celebrated in the annals of the world as one of the greatest of its many wonders, was begun in the year 1173, but was not finished until after two centuries had come and gone. It was erected as a sort of triumphal tower to celebrate the victory of the Pisans and the Normans over the Saracens, the former having killed to drive the latter out of Italy. The fact that this old relic is in the market and offered for sale to the highest bidder makes it doubly timely and appropriate. The old tower is circular in shape, 100 feet in diameter, 179 feet high and is of pure white marble. It is divided into eight stories and has galleries at each story, which extend entirely around it. As above mentioned, the entire structure is of massive marble slabs, the weight of which gives it a decided over-toppling tendency, the top leaning out as it does, sixteen feet over the foundation.

Man and Beast.

A blind-hearted woman in the western part of Detroit had her sympathies appealed to a few days ago by the spectacle of a thin, attenuated horse attached to an ash cart which stopped before her door.

"It's a shame," she said indignantly to the man who had the horse and cart in charge, "to drive such a poor, half-starved beast. You ought to be punished for it."

The man approached the good woman and extended his hand.

"Pale ma arram and me ribs, ma'am, and you'll see for yourself I'm as thin as the horse," he said.

The genuine sympathizer saw that he was speaking the truth, and she at once set a more substantial form of her sympathy before him.

Dismembered by a Cow.

While walking past the house of his lady love, a few afternoons since, a certain Bainbridge, Ga., young man, having all his eyes centered upon the girl of his choice, woo was quietly seated on the piazza, walked astride a cow which was lying upon the sidewalk contentedly chewing her cud, and which he had failed to discover on looking at his inamorata. With a bellow the cow arose and began the motion of the Texas bronco. The young man, paralyzed with fright, believed also, and the young lady screamed with unaffected mirth. When the young man hit the ground, which he did on all fours, he struck it running. The trousers were rent across the knees and ripped elsewhere.

Cardinal and King.

Cardinal Wolsey was, in common with many eminentcom of olden time, an ardent lover of good dinners. Henry VIII. was fond of accepting the hospitality of the ecclesiastic, and he, who maintained his establishment with sumptuous state. The cook was a personage of such importance that his daily dress was of silk and satin with a heavy gold chain as his insignia of office. The feasts of those days were conducted on the most princely scale, and the stranger was never turned away from the door.

In the Stenographic.

Walk up, ladies and gentlemen, and see the famous lion, Mutagula. He is as sensible as any human being. A Texas stenographer once pulled out of his foot a thorn on which he had stepped. Just do you think the noble creature did? It devoured, one by one, in order of rank, all the superior officers of our regiment, until the latter found himself promoted to the grade of colonel. Walk in gentlemen; only a penny.

There are said to be some 3,000 in Japan only four inches high, which bear spaces the size of carvacts.

PROVOKED MUCH LAUGHTER.

A Forgetful Judge Startles an Audience on Remembering His Change.

Judge Austin Yates, of Schenectady, N. Y., is one of the most absent-minded of men. He went down to New York not a great while ago and visited a theater where a most sensational, sensational and affecting melodrama was in progress. He had a friend with him and he laid down a twenty-dollar bill at the box office to purchase two tickets. The man behind the ticket box tossed the pasteboards out and $17 in change.

Intent upon what he was going to see, the judge very naturally seized the tickets and went on his way rejoicing, leaving the balance of the twenty-dollars behind. He and his friend had seats in the midst of a regiment of ladies, and the play was enjoyable, and the judge, who is nothing if not earnest, sat there spellbound.

At last the villain in the play said to one of his partners in crime, and with a hard look—applicable to his stage:

"How much money does the wretch want?"

The word "money" brought the judge's thoughts back to the box office and the change he had left lying there. Forgetting where he was, and thinking for the instant that the question had been applied to him, he slapped his knee and fairly shouted:

"Seventeen dollars, by the Lord Harry!"

The effect on the audience can be imagined, but never described, and nothing can induce that villain to repeate the lines wherein money appears, for, all an actor's entreaties to the contrary, the judge's inopportune laugh and remark has given him bad luck forever.

HOUSE PLANTS.

Practical Suggestions to Growers of Plants and Flowers.

It is the fashion nowadays to decorate one's house with plants of the palm and fern variety. These plants often wither and die, or parts of the house become spotted, or perhaps all together brown, even with every care. If those who have had this trouble will observe the following directions I am sure their plants will live.

As a general thing it is well to keep water in the saucer of the plant, for then it is soaked up as it is needed. The surfaces of the leaves have hundreds of little pores in them, and if these are clogged up with dust they will cause the plant to die, by preventing the escape of the gaseous exhalations.

Once, therefore, in every two months, give palm a warm, soapy bath; that is, with a soft sponge, well soaped, wash off the dust with warm water, trimming off the dead parts, if there are any. Then with a dry piece of muslin polish the leaves; they will shine as if they were waxed, and will thus pay you for your pains, besides giving your plant fresh vigor.

Palms and screw pines do not need much sun; one day in the sun, once a month is quite sufficient.

POWER OF SELECTION.

General Belief in Such a Theory Exploded by Recent Research.

It is very generally believed that plants have the power to select from the soil in which they grow such substances as will be of advantage to them in building up of their structure, or in the healthy continuance of their life. This selection, they, however, has been exploded by recent research, and it is now definitely proved that the selective power of roots is practically nil. Whatever goes into a state of solution in the soil enters the plant, whether it be of a beneficial or useless or even highly injurious nature. Certainly some plants take in, for instance, much less of that injurious substance, silica, than others, but this difference is due to some unknown of structure, or to differences in the natural functions of respiration, and not at all to any selective or rejective power possessed by the protoplasm of the root hairs.

Eclipses of the Sun.

Every year there must be two eclipses of the sun, and there may be five. These are partial eclipses, however, except in the comparatively rare cases in which the moon passes nearly centrally over the sun's disk and produces a total obscuration of his light. Six or the seventeen eclipses occurring in 1890 there have been barely a score of total eclipses, and a number of those will not be observed because the belt of totality fell at the earth's polar regions or upon the oceans. The belt of totality is a narrow strip—never more than 170 miles wide—where the point of the moon's shadow falls upon the earth. Total eclipses rarely occur, therefore, at the same place upon the earth. At London, for example, there has been no total eclipse since the year 1140, except that of 1715, and there will be none during the next century.

A DECISIVE BATTLE.

SUCCESS OF CRESPO, VENEZUELAN REVOLUTIONIST.

Tenayuca Is Dead—The Result in Georgetown Has Not Been Quite Same—Page Is Dead—Half the Town Burned.

Date Far and Near.

—A despatch to the Chicago Times-Herald from Sao Paulo, Venezuela, a small town on the railroad line to Valencia, gives a glorious about equal to a victory that place and Valencia. Six hundred are killed, and each side government officials captured. Crespo has struck another decisive blow, which, following upon his previous successes shake the Andean hold in the land Hard, means victory for the insurgents. The fight was a hotly contested one but skirmishes at the residence of the government soldiers, lasted so far before the Crespists and were utterly routed. Crespo had all his disposal 1400 men. This the first note Acting President Villegas Pulido of his government forces, constructive this proclamation, of within one year of the crespo people.

—William B. Smith, Philadelphia's newly Mayor whose Democratic opponent everything some two days ago, is now in the hands of Judge William B. Ashman.

—John William Dunlap, a shoe dealer of Philadelphia, committed suicide Tuesday.

—Four persons accident occurred at Dunbar, Pa., Tuesday morning by the New York & New Castle Railway, by which two were killed and two injured. The dead are Thomas Jones, of Dunbar, and Thomas Jones, of Pittsburg.

FOREIGN.

—Stuart Reid, a Roman Catholic, has been elected Lord Mayor of London. He was the nominee of the Liberals and Parnellites.

—Sir Edward Watkin, the well known railroad and canal contractor, died suddenly at his home in London Tuesday. He was in his 78th year.

—Fire at the Dalton Steel Works, Sheffield, England, destroyed 600 tons of steel.

—The Cory Orphan's Asylum, Cardiff, Wales, was burned Tuesday morning. Two children were burned to death.

—The Chicago Times-Herald's cable says: Tuesday, Nov. 12, 1895, will be a day of great rejoicing in Chicago. The total loss is $10,000, nearly all insured. Henry C. Wallacey, driver of the engine, was killed while on his way to the fire by colliding with a Northern Pacific locomotive.

—In the great pottery for that report last week in the Bear River Valley, Idaho, the loss is about $100,000, nearly all insured. The entire were burned to death, and three injured. In a cable from Paris to the Times-Herald, Thursday, Nov. 14, 1895, the Chicago Times-Herald's cable says: Tuesday, Nov. 12, 1895, will be a day of great rejoicing in Chicago. The total loss is $10,000, nearly all insured. Henry C. Wallacey, driver of the engine, was killed while on his way to the fire by colliding with a Northern Pacific locomotive.

—Harry M. Stanley, Police Judge of Kansas City, has been held for criminal libel of Chicago books and photographs by mail.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

—The greatest excavation in the Homestead mill trouble since the July 6, 1892, riot, was on Friday by the Carnegie Company's officials. They caused warrants to be issued for the arrest of all the members of the famous advisory committee, charging them with treason against the commonwealth. The warrant was issued by the Carnegie people for some all the men in their beds so as to prevent any from getting away, and as it would be too late to attempt them to bail, make it necessary for them to spend a night behind the bars. The raids was not wholly successful, however, as the officers succeeded in getting but five of the men, the others having taken wind of the matter and fled.

—R. G. Dun & Co. say in their weekly review of trade:

Business continues larger than ever at this time of the year, and the commercial failures are fewer than ever before recorded. In single supply, and collections have very rarely been more generally satisfactory. The outlook of money from Western centers for purchases in the month of larger than usual, and yet there is no difficulty in the money centers, and the rate for call loans, which was at times last week very nearly 10 per cent, was at times last week very nearly 10 per cent, was at times last week very nearly 10 per cent,

Boyne Falls News: We have heard a number of people who attended speak depreciatingly of the East Jordan fair, claiming that East Jordan people themselves were lukewarm towards it, making little or no effort at a creditable show fo those who planted it. And now Boyne City jumps up and spits on its hands, saying. We can beat it,' and forthwith proceeds to have a horticultural exhibit.

On Monday morning of last week Mr. A. B. Howard of Chandler discovered a bear weighing about 120 pounds in his trap. With the aid of a couple of gentlemen from Clarion and Petoskey and a good rifle brain was dispatched, and now we learn that the gentleman from Petoskey, with an assurance peculiar to that enterprising town claims the honor of killing the bear. His companions, however says he failed to get a shot.—Boyne Falls News.

The announcement that Judge Gresham has declared his interiton to vote for Grover Cleveland simply confirms general opinn in regard to the Judge, that he is not only a political "sore head," but that his judgment has been destroyed by the burning of the presidential bee. Every since he appeared prominently as a Republican presidential possibility four years ago Gresham has been afflicted with the "big head," and has let his ambition over-power his common sense. As a result he has lost the confidence of his party, and is to-day without a following where not long ago he was seemingly warmly supported by a host. Every since Judge Gresham began toying with the Populists several months ago he has been uncomfortably unmarking his desire and his purpose in his eagerness to do what his perfidial judgement dictates as the right thing to further his ambition. He kept the leaders of the Populists in doubt in regard to their tender of the presidential nomination just long enough to give them the impression that although he refused the nomination he was with them in spirit. This was to keep within reach of a nomination by the Populists, four years hence, if by any chance their movement should develop into a third wave. By voting for Cleveland Judge Gresham undoubtedly figures that will be in position to secure a fusion nomination in 1896 as Cleveland's defeat by Harrison may so destroy Democratic confidence that the Bourbons will be willing to form a coalition on the national ticket. The Judge's latest play is thus an indirect declaration that he believes Cleveland is destined to defeat a second time by Benjamin Harrison.

SUCCESS IN BURGLARY.

The Chances Which the Professional Housebreaker Takes.

"Occasionally," said a retired burglar the other day, "a man transfers himself in a single night the accumulations of another man's lifetime; but these instances are very rare, and nothing could be further from the truth than the idea that burglary is a quick and easy road to wealth. The facts that the great majority of burglars make but a scant living, and to make even that they must encounter many difficulties and dangers. The burglar's reward, whatever it may be, is never commensurate to the risk he takes.

"I have myself acquired some property, but if I had my life to live over again I should choose some other occupation than burglary. Indeed, when you come to consider the inconvenient hours and the general worry and uncertainty of that business, the wonder is that anybody should go into it; if a man is at all inclined to be sensitive he should certainly keep out of it.

"I remember a long time ago going late one night into a room in which there was one man sleeping. His clothes were on a chair near the head of the bed. I was bending over those clothes and about to take them out into the hall when the man suddenly woke up. Without an instant's hesitation he threw his arms around me. I was young then and strong, but this man was four times as strong as I was. I think he could have crushed me if he had wanted to, and he got out of the house with the greatest ease. But before he did that he carried me over to the table and lighted a light. As he looked at me my watch chain caught his eye, and do you know that that man took my watch and chain and kept them."

Hidputh's "World."

From Mrs. H. A. Thorne, New York, Author of "Treasury of Thought" "Mother, home and heaven." The History of the World is not only the best People's History, and superior for students, but it is pre-eminently adapted to the home circle, either for personal reading, or for a book to be read aloud. In my own family the children beg to have it read to them and make it a favorite topic of conversation at the dinner table. Children will have books. They will read something, why not give them history? There is no light by which our feet may be guided but the light of experience. The experience of human race is what we call History. What man has done, is recorded on the pages of history. No mother of average intelligence can take up Dr. Hidputh's Universal History to read aloud to her children without having an attentive little audience, and at the same time being instructed and entertained herself. Facts of history learned early are rarely forgotten. Such a work as this read aloud gives an opportunity for several members to help in the entertainment of the family, and will serve to improve the whole of this charming World story upon the mind of every reader and every listener. The work is so cheap when compared with the enormous expenditure for research, copyright for illustration etc., and sold at terms that every home however humble can afford to buy it. To the mothers of the homes with children, it rests upon you a corresponding responsibility to us. Your influence in selecting good books for your home, as it is in selecting good company for them when they step outside the gate. This work has received the heartiest indorsement of our most critical scholars, and needs but to be seen and read to be admired and prized by all.

In the Siege Trade.

"Queer experiences?" says Henry Cooper, a retired Boston sea captain. "Well, I had one that was queer enough. It was in the fifties, while I was a man before the mast. I shipped one night from Havana for a voyage to Good Hope, but we didn't go there. We went up to Congo and got a cargo of slaves.

"The queer thing of it all was that the crew never got sight of the captain and when the first mate came on deck he wore a mask. The craft, a swift sailer, was apparently unarmed, but a twist or two with a handspike was sufficient to bring six ugly looking sight-de-pounders on deck.

"We were not molested, however, and on our return we stood on the coast of Cuba, and all the crew but four were sent ashore in the long boat. As we passed into the boat the masked mate put an envelope in each man's hand. Mine contained $100.

—An Oconto special to the Detroit Journal of the 14th says: "Chas. S. Hampton, Democratic game warden for the state, addressed an audience last night composed mostly of ladies and Republicans. His speech was a perfect tirade of abuse of the Republican party. He sneered Harrison and and heaped vile abuse on Gen. Alger's head. The Republicans, he said, were a set of dirty, rotten rascals and jail birds. He enlogized "Big Hearted" Dan Soper, who simply abused the privileges of his office, while his predecessors were a lot of thieving rascals who stole the government blind. He made a few touching and eloquent remarks on Friday under and hogwallow legislation. In speaking of Freedmen the speaker shed a few tears. He said that away back in the dark days, Friday eve, when a young man, had simply followed the custom of his country, and perhaps had committed a wrong, and the Republicans were mean and low enough to expose it. The abuse of the republicans became so violent that many people left the hall in disgust.

MARIA A. BRIGGS, Co. Com.

"An Amusing Little Cuss."

This was Artemus Ward's manner of alluding to the monkey which constituted the chief attraction in his menagerie. Probably Artemus' monkey had spells of surpassing cuteness that prompted his owner and master to thus speak of him.

This is what is the matter with our young friend of the Democrat. He is amusing. In reply to the SENTINEL'S article last week on the question of the water-works ordinance printing, he devotes a column and a half to his defense. He ransacts the official files, and from a period so far back that the dust of years is disturbed in the search, he finds that the SENTINEL has received full legal rates for official printing. Nearly every bill noted is from a period when the business management of the SENTINEL was in other hands, by special terms of partnership.

The last bill he notes is one rendered in 1888—four years ago, and in none of them does he give figures, or in any way indicate whether the work for which they were rendered was one folio or a hundred.

But, so far as the principle involved in this discussion is concerned, all this has no bearing, and the people will not be deceived by the false issue. Why did not Mr. Hampton hunt out the SENTINEL'S bills from 1888 down to date and give the rates per folio? Would not these have told the story?

The fact remains that the Council paid Mr. Hampton more for the publication of the water-works ordinance than it has been in the habit of paying for that class of work. Mr. Hampton was told so by the clerk and by a member of the council.

We have examined the bills of which Mr. Hampton speaks. They cover a period of five years. The greatest number of folios in any one publication was four; several are of one folio; the average is about three folios. We have counted in everything he notes for the five years, including two in which the number of folios and the rate per folio are not given, and find that the total amount is $55.98, or a little over $10 per year. The total of Mr. Hampton's bill at one meeting for one publication was $39.59.

The following is the last bill paid the SENTINEL for legal publication:

Publishing ordinance 3 times	$ 3.50
Publishing resolution to issue	0.50
Publishing notice of sale	1.50

This bill can be seen at the office of the clerk. Mr. Hampton's bill for the water works ordinance was for 56 folios at 70 cents per folio. We are content to submit our case with these figures.

The talk about the subsequent printing of the ordinance in book form did not enter into the subject. Mr. Hamton informed the council that, as the type was still up, he could print pamphlets cheaply.

But now we come down to a feature of the subject which discloses the astounding nerve with which our friend is endowed. The contract for publishing the water ordinance was not awarded the Democrat by council or committee. Immediately upon the passage of the ordinance the copy went into Mr. Hampton's inside pocket without any authority whatever. A Trustee was bold enough to inquire about the matter of publishing, and Mr. Hampton promptly replied: "I have that in my possession!" And that is why he charged 70 cents per folio for 56 folios—the council was not permitted to consider the question of economy. The editor of the Democrat secured it much as a dog secures a joint above the back window. No wonder he won't cut from legal rates.

The council, (excepting, Mr. Hampton,) now plainly acknowledge that the bill was excessive, and should not have been allowed, which, we submit, is equivalent to a condemnation of the spirit which will thus turn opportunity into gain.

The primacy in the domain of audacity clearly belongs with the editor of the Charlevoix Democrat; but the chieftainship in the realm of duplicity and forgetfulness should be vested in the person who stands behind him.

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

By Lily Jackson

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

I suppose that to a young girl, Margaret made answer to the doctor, "Yes sir, I am sorry to hear of it, everything and everybody for myself." Margaret, in her mourning garb, looked tired, trembling and pathetic. "I have a nervous feeling for Margaret, I thought—"

"I know," answered Margaret, rather contritely. "I am really crying very Doctor Wilson has excused me, and I have promised to do better for the future. So no more pleas.

No more. I had to always plan ex-cuses you need a lecture. I see you and Olivia are friends already, I thought you would be. Effects of kindred natures where did you walk, that you come in the end of creation?"

"Oh, no. Cuba within the bounds of New York. I was not gone so very long really, but I feel as if I had been there that."

"Another inappropriate remark. I wonder when you are half way to heaven if you won't turn back and say, 'In the other place, just to differ from the rest of the world.' Where have you been? Not the portion of self-will. Leaving out this little failing, she deserves a high recommendation, and I am wonderfully proud of her."

"Very commending, I break my promise, I go into your study, I dare say you are more fun in it."

"Decidedly, Margaret. I tell a wonderful story and appear in some in prima condition. I wish Wilson would make a like statement of my physical countenance. I don't experiment from you. Shall we progress?"

"I have been failing Mrs. Leigh how much I admire your cousin, I have remarked Wilson when they were unfortunately seated alone. I wish I could have always had a prepossessing apartment, but this one was ready and I converted me."

"I like Olivia," said Brian following Wilson's glance; attend the room. "Much more very fine." Brian's tone was shy rather, though Margaret gave me the cue. I must be just, give the credit for all these things, however. The room was much more cozy and comfortable, and I, now it seems real home to me, and I appreciate what a woman's hands can do.

Astonishing, repeated Wilson, mildly. "Don't remember I ever met more to estate more deeply. I, for one, think how these delicate creature can pass with my dull quarters. No wonder you don't care to stay in your study. You are such a stranger that I was wondering to day what I was to do with your self."

"What?" repeated Margaret to her own mind, while she gave Brian a rather mortified glance.

He pretended not to see it, however. "Oh, I'm sorry," he replied, in a tone of unused rather unsatisfactorily. "I could find any difference in your study, and I'd rail in upon you some night. Though while morning I'm busy."

You will be taking her about a great deal, of course, Brian, continued Mrs. Stanson dont's consider me. I hope you have sufficiently recovered from the shock when you must find it extremely wearisome. Or perhaps you know of some fortunate individuals whose embrances to always a pain to you?"

Endurance, she repeated. Many suffering from her friend and thought, you know. Doctor, I think endurance is nothing more than determination of will. It is with me, at least. I know, I have had to bear a great deal of late years, and I don't think I ever was born annoyed. Brian, I wish you would say the same. I think I have set an example when I was a child I used to preach my sins to my nurse long I could, and then when without crying, but a reporting top from my mother, I used to be the pagan of weeping. That was all my endurance.

All will," repeated Brian. "I think you for telling me. Margaret I imagine how you treat that poor old Mrs. Wilson, and I appreciate your gratitude."

Simply that one will know everything to do with our feelings. He should wants to know, I suppose, Brian, intrusive. I am afraid I cry. But I hope you, Brian, will not forget that the pavements firm my feet more dreadfully, and that when I fall I am pushed down to death. Really, Doctor, you may say what you please, I am very nervous, and yet, but I think Mr. Steele are an power to me. I have nothing to do.

"Have nothing to do, my dear, and feel nervous sometimes? Elegant sentiments, Brian, and I, as a representative of the sex, thank you. Mr. Steele's appreciation was a compliment to the sex, and I share your friend's enthusiasm.

"Yes, I suppose they think I am proud of Emmeline," she asked, after an anxious pause, for she was a little afraid of her guardian. "Do you wonder that I should be proud of a sister who's fortune brings respectability for it as I do, for her sake, here, Brian. I hope she has meant lot of business for a Bohemian cousin." Brian, I know you do, I know you do. Olivia is a most unsatisfactory sort of a cousin. I wish I could be a sister to her. I wish I could have one home spot that I could call home. I wish I could have a home to which I could hearts any affection, no matter how far we may stray."

Margaret finished with a sigh. "This, she said, looking up another prospect in some lands, I make the view of the Cuban." Brian, I wonder if you know what I mean speaking of Bertie when you came in. He has lived in the best and the unfolders profited a great success in it."

"I always thought you fortunate, Mrs. Leigh," returned Margaret, meeting Brian's admiring eyes. "Why should you think so? Simply because I am a woman. What a strange idea! The world does think religion was made for women rather than men, though I do not know why really need it. Poor women! They are delicate, you know, and must go straight in a certain beaten track. They shouldn't do this, they mustn't do that, and they must do the other, until they are so accustomed to a certain set of rules and morals that I wonder they ever any individuality left."

Thank heaven you haven't, just individuality, Margaret. Wilson, wonderfully your family calmly awhile ago, after listening to such remarks from the mouth of one woman, because of all others and rejoice at your escape."

"Come, Doctor," said Margaret, in a tone Wilson could regret, "we are in the parlor, and I promise to be very quiet and sedate for the rest of the evening. No doubt, you will find Brian's conversation much more instructive and entertaining.

"Well, Wilson had taken his departure an hour or so later. Margaret turned to Brian with the remark:

"I don't know how you caught into trouble. I take care so much."

"Indeed, I am very fortunate. I hope I am so much."

"Margaret looked up in a little surprised manner, as Brian spoke, and a glance passed from her face at dinner that you had seen some grand of money."

"I am sorry my face can not keep a secret better. Don't pretending Mr. Brian that I am as indefatigable St. Elizabeth, and I have no charitable schemes in view. I am merely a young woman who wants to know what she wants, and what she wants.

"I don't also. I think she succeeds very well in getting it. If you will place St. Elizabeth, I suppose so would of mine will have any effect. I can only hope that you will not injure yourself. But seriously, I do not like the idea of you going around to all sorts of neighborhoods and meeting all kinds of characters. Of course, where Cousin Wilson recommends, is all right, I know, entirely on your own judgment, though. I shudder at the thought."

A Strange Nothing Legacy.

Nine under nineteen who were engaged in building a cistern in the village of Yolwell Nogoe found on returning to their work early morning that the portion of the wall which they had completed the day before had fallen in pieces during the night and was lying in a heap at the ditch. Mansfield Curtin, the head mason, informed his comrades in morning lead a video from heaven, and ordered them to kneel down and pray before that their labors would run no more. Some of the men laughed, all sneer on that very morning to get out to work, and the rest, with some, he it wife, mother, daughter or sister, who should arrive with the dinner, fell down on their knees and prayed. They all took the oath, and the last had hardly been sworn when Mansfield was disappeared, carrying her husband's breakfast. The oath taken by the men was found to be the legend as "Pasta of the Fields," and it appeared that it had been passed from mouth to mouth, and when, in fact, it was found that it was not the legend as "Pasta of the Fields," it was supposed

CHAPTER XV.—Continued.

"I suppose that is a mistake to me, Margaret," said Mrs. Wilson, in a pained tone. "I am always sorry to disappoint everybody, and I always do everything I can to avoid it."

"Which needs repeating, surely, particularly friend, considering all the circumstances. I know it is a wedding for your Margaret. I thoroughly understand that."

"I know," answered Margaret, rather contrarily. "I am really very sorry. Doctor Wilson has expressed me, and I have promised to be ready for the journey. So no more please."

"Well, I hope it will be a fine day when you need a carriage. I see you and Wilson are friends already. I thought you would be. Effects of kindness instantly bestowed on such an ordinary mind the end of creation!"

"Well, I think within the bounds of New York, I was not quite so very ungracious. Just because I promised to go home with him—"

"Another inopportune distance. I was, for when you are safely at home in your own dear home and on the other side of the ocean, you will be free from the restraint of such a distance. Well, I hope the weather of midsummer will bring you this little failing, she frowned upon, and I am certain I shall present of her.

"Very good, Aunt Agnes! I think you have given me your opinion of my character very clearly."

"Decidedly, Margaret. I had a service bestowed and my opinion was in prime condition. I wish Wilson would make a decision, and I would know his countenance. I don't expect much from you, Shall, in prospect?

"I have been telling Mrs. Leigh how much I admire your character. I mentioned Wilson when they were constantly asked about the rather. I have always had a prejudice against apartments, but this one is so delightful, I converted me.

"I like them, said Brian, following Wilson's glance around the room. "Much more cozy than a hotel. I think she was my choice, though! Margaret's taste is good, and I know she has the credit for all these things, however. This room was furnished for me. Was we furnished a place in Boston, from humble. It is amazing what a little woman's hands can do.

"Astonishing, repeated Wilson, smoothly. Then he looked at Brian in outside more deeply. I fear of Son. Think how these delights, I never can pare with my dull quarters. No wonder you don't care to come home. Well, I know. You are such a stranger that I am sorry sympathizing with you. Well, I am sorry!

What" repeated Margaret to herself, own mind, while she gave Brian a rather searching glance.

He pretended not to see it, however. "Oh, I'm comfortable enough. I have covered rather uncomfortably times. I find any difference in home and abroad. I'll run in upon you some night. Though I am a bachelor quarters.

You will be taking her about a great deal, of course, Wilson, I suppose. Margaret doesn't complain of. Well, I know you must find it extraordinary. Margaret, I'm glad you are enjoying unusual pleasure unknown whose endeavor to make you happy. Good morning!

"Adieu, Margaret, Margaret, starting from her reverie. Margaret, you know, lovely. I hope, Margaret, looking more than determination to will. It is with me, Margaret, I am up my mind to bear a thing I always bear it, and I think it is the best seen amused. Brian, lit I'm sitting you Margaret, I'm sorry for Wilson. Wilson I was a child I used to pinch my arm to see how long I could stand pain without crying, but a repeating from the pain, I always got the expense of weeping. That was all wrong, see?

"All will, repeated Brian. "I think you for the pain, Margaret. I imagine how you tried that poor old Wilson. Whatever you tried to do, I trust!

Simply that our wills have crossed, to do with our feelings. Do Wilson would be sorry for me. Well, I'm sorry, I am afraid I do. But I don't know, I am sorry for Wilson. I'm sure I am sorry for my feelings. Do affect Wilson, I'm sorry for Wilson. Wilson is a good man. Wilson, what good please about your wonderful, Wilson, I'm sorry for Wilson. I'm sorry, Wilson, I'm sorry!

"I have spoken to Margaret, Wilson, for the last time, said the footer with a laugh. "Margaret, I'm sorry for you, Wilson, I'm sorry for Wilson. I'm sorry for Margaret. I'm sorry for everybody. Good morning!

"Yes, certainly. Why should they be offended? Wilson, I am proud of a disdainer for that word. It carries with it the sense of indignity, and I'm sure this is always disagreeable.

"Always! Exclaimed Wilson, rather testily. I care say you are right. Though, Dolly, I can see no reason why we are queerly constituted at last.

"I think we are tolerably well, said Margaret. "It isn't to be expected that we should agree in all things. I am sorry for Wilson, I'm sorry for Brian, I'm sorry for everybody, I'm sorry for myself, I'm sorry for the world, I'm sorry for the sun, I'm sorry for the moon, I'm sorry for the stars, I'm sorry for the sky, I'm sorry for the clouds, I'm sorry for the rain, I'm sorry for the snow, I'm sorry for the hail, I'm sorry for the wind, I'm sorry for the storm, I'm sorry for the calm, I'm sorry for the cold, I'm sorry for the heat, I'm sorry for the day, I'm sorry for the night, I'm sorry for the morning, I'm sorry for the evening, I'm sorry for the noon, I'm sorry for the midnight, I'm sorry for the—"Stop, stop! I shall be glad of the time I have to Wilson, though Margaret, so she crept into bed an hour later.

CHAPTER XVII.

A LETTER OF EXPLANATION.

To Brian, the knowledge that Margaret had not lost all feeling for him, and that her faith in him was strong, notwithstanding his many faults, was very comforting. Wilson, with the power of strong determination, could not be kept from seeing that only that old habit. Not an entire one, for he was a man of strong determination much. Sometimes a friend found it necessary to assume a stringent manner and direct their talk to her room and leave each one to reflect in peace by itself.

Under these circumstances, Margaret felt her heart considerably lightened. She could look forward to a happy life for the future, and her letters took on a cheerful tone. Wilson was pleased. Brian could not but feel sorry for the change, and yet it was a relief to Wilson, and he was cheerfully dropped an open letter to Brian, and Brian was pleased to read it when he was in the mood. That he was in, they went to find time to read it.

"I suppose we must accept your excuse, Brian, said Wilson, with a little sarcasm in his usual tone. "Don't you know how I feel about it? Don't you sense of things? Why should they all pity, Shall, in prospect? Why should they all wait for the time? Why should they wait until the others are ready?

"Because, said Brian, I suppose, if they could see the matter from your point of view, they would be ready to do it. Wilson, I'm sorry for you,

OFFICIAL BALLOTS.

HOW TO PREPARE THEM UNDER THE NEW LAW.

A Few Simple Rules Govern the Marking of Ballots—No Need of Losing a Vote—Straight Tickets and Split Tickets Illustrated.

The methods of voting under the new election law of this state is not difficult, when once the principle is understood. No elector needs to lose his vote if he will but exercise a little care. All the tickets regularly put in nomination will be printed side by side on one sheet of paper. This will be the OFFICIAL BALLOT, and is the only one allowed to be voted. The voter will be given one of these official ballots by the inspector of election. The voter should see that the inspector's initials are put on the back of the ticket in one corner. The voter must take this official ballot with him alone into the booth. At the head of the Republican ticket he will find first a vignette or design, under that the word REPUBLICAN and under the latter a small open square, thus:

Let the voter make a cross in the little square and that is all that is required of him. That makes the official ballot a straight Republican vote, counting one for each candidate on the Republican ticket.

If he wishes to vote a split ticket he can do it in this way: Suppose he wants to vote the Democratic ticket, but vote for the Republican candidate for Governor. Then he marks the Democratic ticket thus:

This shows that, although he wishes to vote the Democratic ticket, he does not want to vote for Mr. Morse. If he does nothing more, he does not vote for anyone for Governor; but, to vote for Mr. Rich, he must make a cross in the square before Rich's name, thus:

This gives his vote to Mr. Rich. This marking can be done with a black lead pencil or the stamp furnished by the inspectors of election. Remember that no other marks must be put by the voter upon the official ballot, except the crosses and the straight lines to erase names.

Bear these two rules in mind:

To vote a straight Republican ticket put a cross in the square at the head of the ticket and nothing else.

To split a Democratic ticket, put a cross in the square at the head, mark out the name of the opposite republican candidate and put a cross in the square before the Republican candidate.

To make the subject plainer a straight Republican ticket is here represented:

ticket, giving a vote for John T. Rich for Governor and Gerrit J. Dickema for Attorney General.

When the official ballot has been properly marked, it should be folded so as to conceal the face of it, but to show the initials of the inspector on the back. The voter then passes out of the booth through the door opposite to the one through which he entered and hands his ballot to the inspector at the ballot box who puts it into the box in full view.

If a voter spoils a ballot in preparing it, he can get another by returning the spoiled one to the inspector who furnishes ballots. If he is unable to read, so as to prepare his ballot, the board of inspectors may designate some one to help him. No electioneering is allowed within 100 feet of the polls.

Pretty Thin Dope.

The Democratic state central committee are hard pressed for mud to throw at John T. Rich. They are now flooding the state with circulars telling him with riding on passes while railroad commissioner he is doing what he can to prevent every road in the state during the year 1892 would have cost his state thousands of dollars if he had not used passes. Every railroad commissioner, including the present Democratic incumbent, has used passes, and should use them as much as a railroad superintendent. The commissioner is in a measure a supervisor of all the roads in the state, and in looking after and enforcing regulations for the comfort and safety of the people and the employes, it is proper that he should use passes.

One of the lady employes at the capitol writes a communication to the Jackson Citizen, bewailing her fate, and in the same breath giving away the information that the lady employes have all been assessed $1 per week for funds with which to carry on the campaign in the sixth district. She thinks this is civil service reform with a vengeance.—State Republican.

In his upper peninsula campaign, Judge Morse alluded to farmers as "hay derbs." In the lower peninsula he calls them the hurry handed sons of toil, whose labors feed and support the world, and much more of the same kind of "taffy." John T. Rich knows and sympathizes with the farmers and never speaks otherwise than respectfully of them.

Judge Newton spreads himself over two platforms with as much agility as Adolphus Aerobat Hills. People do not expect so much from an attorney, but judges who hasn't political honesty enough to declare his principles simply cut a sorry figure for a the people, as a candidate for Justice of the highest court in the state.

"Our money should be as national as our flag. That is what it is to-day, and it should be as sacred as our national honor, and as sound as the government itself. The people of this country no more want free trade and the conditions which it will impose than they want worthless state bank money."—McKinley.

The Republican party did not organize for spoils; it assembled about an altar of sacrifice and lit in a sanctuary fire with incense. Yes have not forgotten our love for liberty—free speech, free press, free schools and free territories. We have widened the last word; it is now a free nation."—Benjamin Harrison.

During his four years of office Mr. Cleveland added 1,647 pensioners and added nothing to the pension roll. Harrison's admission has added 1,570 pensioners per month and added more.

There are now 57 tinplate mills in successful operation in the United States. There would have been at least 50 of these mills at the present time, had it not been for the menace of free trade which the Democratic party has held over the country for the past two years.—Grand Rapids Eagle.

The union veterans have sized up Judge Morse thoroughly to a nicety. They will apply his own language and after he shall cease parroting as faithfully as he has done since he turned Democrat, viz:

JUST FROM THE PRESS!
This 4 Volume Edition of
Ridpath's History of the World.

From 8000 before Christ. All nations and people up to the present time. It embraces no less than five very ornate and massive volumes, containing the sum of all the historical knowledge of the world, besides the translation of the Sacred Scriptures, and their hieroglyphics by Champollion at an enormous expense.

A brilliant and authentic narrative; 1500 elegant illustrations copied from the World's greatest master paintings, each one of which marks a thrilling story and incident of history. The copyright from these historical engravings cost our publisher $50,000. The work has received the most hearty endorsement from President Benjamin Harrison, leading Senators, Governors of States, Congressmen, a large number of the most eminent scholars, and the leading press and Periodicals of the country, and is therefore an undoubted guarantee that it is entirely worthy of their confidence, and we feel sure that its merit need only be known to bring it to the notice of all admitted that the grandeur of Morality, the philosophy of Home and Children, the brilliancy of Free oil, the accuracy of Bancroft, the rhetoric of Prescott and Motley, the facility of Dickens, are all united in the pen of Ridpath, so that he has not only clothed the dry bones of history with flesh and blood and with the beautiful figures and renewed the glittering pageantry of nines, but even the humble toiler receives his share from his great historian.

President Benjamin Harrison says:—The author's labors are deserving the highest praise. I most heartily recommend the work for study and consultation.

Prof. J. H. Vincent D. D. LL. D., Chancellor of Chautauqua University, N. Y.:—Prof. Ridpath has put the world into shape for caring, using, enjoying. This book is a permanent College Chair of generally history in each own home.

From Andrew Lipscomb, ex-Chancellor University of Georgia, G. A.:—I do not hesitate to say that it is incomparably the best work of its class that I have ever seen. Judging from my own experience, I cannot recommend this great work too warmly.

From Ferris S. Pitch, Superintendent of State Teacher's Institute of Michigan:—If every teacher had the work we would have better teachers and better schools.

PREMONITION FULFILLED.
Engineer McInerney Dreamed That He Would Be Killed.

Martin McInerney, engineer in charge of the locomotive and in the transportation of supplies and material and in hauling away the dirt at the Roxborough Reservoir, Philadelphia, met with a fatal accident lately while in the performance of his duty. The locomotive machinery was not working satisfactorily and he stepped from his cab to the foot-plate on the tender to make an examination. The locomotive was going at a lively rate, and in consulting a curve McInerney lost his balance and was thrown on the track between the cab and the tender. Four trucks attached to the locomotive passed over his body, and when picked up he was a bruised and blackened mass.

His face was cut in several places, his arm was broken, one of his legs was cut off and his right hip was fractured. He was taken to the Hospital, where he died.

Early in the morning McInerney informed one of his fellow-workmen that he did not expect to be another day on earth. When asked for an explanation of his strange expression he answered that he had a premonition that before the sun went down he would be dead. Being asked the reason for this, he said, in a dream, the character of which he did not state, and after he had told the story to his companion a melancholy look spread over his countenance. During the period which followed after he made this statement until he met the accident he exercised the greatest care to attending to his duties and so remarked to his accident.

TWO STORIES
A Parrot at a Club and How It Remembered.

In a first-class club room uptown in New York on a stormy afternoon sat two members of the club playing cards. The table they were playing on was beside a window looking into the yard. Overhead at the window where the men were playing was a favorite parrot. One of the club members was very unfortunate at his game, and his partner chaffed him by saying, "Luck is against you to day." He was aggravated the loser that the glass of water which was in front of him (to get in his whiskey) he took up and fired through the cage, wetting the parrot all over (which quieted him) saying, at the same time, "There, d—n you, take that. You are talking too much."

The parrot then kept looking out of the window at the heavy raindrops and emptied a chicken coming across the yard, and when under the shelter of the window shook her wings. The parrot, looking down, said to the chicken: "Ha! ha! d—n you, you have been talking too much."

A dealer in pet birds was visited by a customer who stationed and wanted to buy a parrot which took his fancy. The salesman was an Irishman who had just been employed by the dealer. The customer said: "Do—do—does that—that parrot talk—talk good?" "Well, replied the Irish salesman, if he doesn't talk better than you I would swing for his neck off."

THE TABLE FORK.
Generally Supposed to Be a Comparative Of Modern Invention.

It is difficult for us to realize what a comparatively modern invention the table fork is, or how our ancestors managed to do without it. Queen Elizabeth never heard of such an implement, and it was many years after her death that the first table or "forke" was brought to England. From a passage in that curious work, Coryate's "Crudities," it has been imagined that its author was the first to bring the table fork to the British Isles. In the time when Coryate "made his tour in Italy I observed that the Italians always used dinner forks made of iron, steel or silver. * * * I thought it good to imitate this fashion by cutting of meat, and have since my return been called 'forcifer' only for using my fork at meals. Now, I believe that before my time the fork was in use all over Europe as early as the year 500 A. D., but if there were they made and the fork itself were lost sight of up to almost the beginning of the seventh century, when it was either discovered or rediscovered and popularized. Walton, Wesson and other antiquarians hold to the earlier date given above because a stone vessel containing coins of the Middle Ages and some iron forks was found at Sevington, England, in the early 18th.

LITTLE SHORT OF MURDER.
The Sad Fate of a Family's Devoted Old Friend.

The neighbors around a certain corner of a street in Lewiston, Maine, were alarmed one night by low sounds issuing from a closely curtained carriage that stood on the corner. A driver sat upon the seat. One of the neighbors came out and approached the team to ask what was the matter. Before he reached the corner the driver caught sight of him, and, whipping up the horses, rapidly drove off. The folks were doubly alarmed, and after a good deal of exciting talk aroused a policeman who stood at the house on the corner and ascertain who was there or if any mystery was in the means.

He talked with an excited woman who came to the door and also with a man who wiped his eyes with a handkerchief, while the neighbors stood across the street in suspicious silence. The officer came into the house and told them that the old family dog, a hero of dangers and dozens of fights and of 20 years, had been carried off by the lady's husband. The dog evidently understood his fate, for he began to moan and moan as soon as they took him from the house.

Intended Getting Even.

"What are you going to do to us, you get to be a man?" asked his father. The little fellow's face assumed the expression of a sphinx, gravity as he responded with a voice which was the dead ringer of his father's and memories of the past: "Whip papa."

The Breath of Life.

Every breath wordraw into the lungs from one and a half to two pints of air, so that it requires about two and a half gallons of pure air a minute, or sixty hogsheads every twenty-four hours properly to supply the lungs.

IN OLD BOSTON.
Curiosities of Architecture in the Early Days of the Town.

The buildings of 100 years ago were detached, none of them in blocks. The homes of many of the merchant princes and high magistrates were relatively more palatial than any in the city today. They stood conspicuous and large, surrounded by generous spaces, with lawns, trees, fruit and vegetable gardens, stables and cattle barns. There were fine equipages with liveried coachmen and footmen.

There were about 1,000 buildings, four being of stone, of which King's Chapel alone remains. King and Queen, now State and Court streets, were lined with taverns, dwellings, marts, and offices of exchange.

There were pung quaint old nooks and corners, taverns and "ordinaries," the drinking vessels in the latter not being especially adapted to that beverage. On the site of Park street church stood the graveyard, and between the foot of Park street and Beacon stood the workhouse, the poorhouse, and the Bridewell—all facing the common.

The old Hancock mansion on Beacon street, which was built in 1737, was spared till 1863, but with that except away there is little left now that the patriots and citizens of the old days would recognize if they came back.

WHEN MEN GET PANICKY.
Prompt-etter Bridegrooms Repent on the Eve of Their Marriages.

The case of an Illinois physician who writes that on the morning of his wedding day is an illustration of the tendency of impending matrimony to unbalance the reasoning faculties. It is a very common fact often enough to be easily remembered. Grooms and bridegrooms lay violent hands on themselves or run away, without any apparent reason on the eve of their marriages.

Such phenomena are probably due less to real impediments or strong aversion to marriage than to a temporary altered state of the intellectuals brought about by too serious a consideration of the seriousness of the proposed change. As the ceremony approaches it gets less, the happy man gets panicky, until suddenly his wife comes back on him and he runs. Just as grown troops often do when they are drawn up with nothing to do but await the approach of the enemy.

Curiously enough it doesn't often happen that way with brides, the reason being, perhaps, that they are too much occupied with their trousseaux and wedding plans to worry unduly as to whether marriage will suit them or not.

Stopping Electric Locomotives.

Although it has hitherto been possible to stop an electric car quickly, the reversal of the current which the motion necessitated was found in a considerable waste and caused a tendency to burn out the motors. A new method of accomplishing the stoppage has been devised. The new motors of a car are so connected that the electro motive force of each under the rotation imparted by the forward movement of the car opposes that of the other, and tends to produce a current in such a direction as to increase its overall magnetism and cut down that of the other. The car will then be checked or brought to a sudden stop if running rapidly, and if on a hill any grade will creep slowly down without any power being used to supply wire and without having the brakes on.

Bismarck's Power.

The late Emperor Frederick, while crown prince, liked to illustrate his Bismarck's great influence with the old Kaiser. He would say, "The crown prince would say, 'of Bismarck were to propose to my father an alliance with Garibaldi—my' said he, pausing, 'that is not an extreme enough case, for Garibaldi is at least a general—if Bismarck were to propose to him an alliance with Mazini, what would happen? At first my father would stamp and stamp and stamp the room exclaiming, 'Bismarck! Bismarck! what do you mean to make me? Then he would stand still in the middle of the room and say, 'Well, if you are firmly of opinion that this thing is indispensable to the interests of the State, force of reason nothing to be done in the end but to put up with it.'"

Victoria's Throne.

The English throne, used in the coronation ceremonies of the kings and queens of Great Britain, is simply an old oaken chair of curious pattern and great antiquity. Ages of use (it is known to have been used in its present capacity for more than 700 years) have made the old frame as hard and as tough as iron. The magic power attributed to the old oak like its the seat which is a large, rough sandstone. Ages before it was trimmed in Ireland and gold for the use of the Stuarts and the Tudors it served as a seat for the early kings of Scotland, tradition even asserts that it is the identical one upon which the patriarch Jacob rested his head the night he had his wonderful dream.

Fortunes of Inventors.

It is a peculiar fact, and one that has attracted considerable attention in scientific and journals, that the inventor, or at least peculiarly, of genius, is in one way is greatly on the increase. In walking along the street with a friend it is by no means unusual to notice that every time it is necessary to cross to the other sidewalk he is careful to keep on the same side of his companion, while if he cannot do this he will have his friend around in an obviously painful effort to bear. Like most all modern troubles this doubtless in one is generally attributed to the grip but whether this is so or not the fact is certainly much more common than it was a few years ago.

A Double Satisfaction.

There is a servant girl in this town whose stalapopian English is the wonder and amusement of her friends. On one of the last mornings recently her mistress inquired about the weather. "It's cloudy up some," replied Mary, "and it's dreadful salty."

Again, in speaking of the sex of the house, whom she admires very much, she said:

"Mr. Brown is such a good man, you can see it in his confidence and he shows it on his forward."

Here she ever made a circumlocution into "confidence" and forehead into "forward" is a psychological mystery.

SNAKE IN THEIR BEER.

SIX PENNSYLVANIA MINERS STRANGELY POISONED.

Young Calloerty Hivain the Famous Hionain, Cure for Snacing Maxine—Reported Attempts Made Up the Vine—Switchmen May Strike.

From Tue and Near.

Young Clifford Calloerty of Tamonia, who was conditional only a few weeks ago by a Doctor a fitting sire to the high cost of workers' firmament, Wednesday established his claim to the title of champion high wire walker of the world. Not only did he cross the Niagara Niagara, but he performed his feats in line time by real amazing methods than any one else had previously attempted the daring entertainer and gave an exhibition of marvelous feats of daring. An assemblage of not less than 10,000 people witnessed his performance. The cable over which he walked was of steel wire and three-fourths of an inch in diameter. It weighs something over a ton, and was secured in place by guy ropes fastened to the bank, and forty bags of sand weighing thirty-four pounds each as ballast. The cable was 1,000 feet in length and had a sag of 2 feet in the center. It was suspended 245 feet above the river between the cantilever and old suspension railway bridges at a point where the whirlpool rapids are where the water rushes along at a furious rate.

A strange story comes from Dunlapsville, situated some forty miles from Pittsburg, Pa., Saturday night six miles southwest in that locality purchased a quarter interest in a gold brick from a stranger of the Norwegian sort, after which they all grew sick. Medical examination showed that the doctor declared that there was evidence of poison. The usual remedies were administered, but to no avail the men all dying between Sunday night and early Monday morning. The friends of the parties, believing that poisons may have been deliberately placed in the beer opened the keg, and to their astonishment discovered a dead disgusted snake about two feet long. How the reptile got there is a mystery.

—Advices from the city of Mexico state that the Board of Charity of that city, upon its appointment, was amazed at the imported Billions worth of corn, and that on an average 300 carloads, about 15,000 pounds, have been sold daily to the suffering people at prices just to cover the cost. Part of the corn was shipped to Mexico by steamer via Vera Cruz and the Mexican Railway and part by the Mexican Central and Mexican National Railways from the United States frontier. The board has enough corn on hand to supply the needs of the needy during the month of October.

Thousands of Enthusiastic Visitors Block the Streets of the Metropolis—Imposing Parade—School Children—Great Decorations—Fireworks.

In Columbus' Honor.

The city of New York, with the handsome thing by the memory of Columbus, and did it right, too. The Jews inaugurated the celebration on Saturday, Sunday and Monday, and it was in them in their synagogues, of both which the eldest master was Columbus and the discovery of America. On Sunday the Protestants and Catholics followed it up in their churches and cathedrals with religious services, interspersed with singing and playing of National hymns and airs, and on the Sabbath morning the Jews joined some appropriately time in the chorus.

Monday was the schools' day, and school children of the public, private, parochial and Lutheran schools filled the streets through the gaily decorated crowds. In the morning Mr. Bellet Pratt's innocent cantata, "The Triumph of Columbus," was sung at one hall. There were concerts in other halls, a fine exhibition, and a display of fireworks at the East River bridge. WIPED OFF THE EARTH.

THE NOTORIOUS DALTON GANG EXTERMINATED.

Four of Them Drop in Their Tracks—Five Citizens Killed—Collyville, Kan., the Scene—A Most Daring Raid—The People Were Ready.

Good Work at Coffeyville.

The Dalton gang have been exterminated, wiped off the face of the earth. Tonight like rats in a trap, they were shot down, but not until four citizens of Coffeyville, Kan., had paid with their lives in the work of extermination.

All of the gang rode into the town wednesday morning and robbed the two banks. The raid was the boldest ever undertaken by the Dalton brothers, and when the bandits attempted to escape they were surprised by the Marshal's posse. In the battle which followed four of the desperadoes were killed outright, and one was so badly wounded that he has since died. Another escaped, but he is being hotly pursued.

The Daltons are known throughout the country as the most desperate outlaws in the United States. They have been in the saddle for years, and have committed a score of robberies. Their exploits have been the talk of the country, and they have been the terror of the people in the Indian Territory.

Emmet Dalton, who had escaped from the First National Bank, had already received a bullet in his body, but had seen trouble in getting mounted and his wounds had already made his escape doubtful. Bennett got fairly started, but, worse of the poisoned bullet, Parker would be recaptured, were allowed to escape, and quickly pursued by a posse of Indian Territory bandits. Emmet Dalton's horse fell in the rush for the broken arrows of the pursuers. As the pursuers closed on him, he mounted a fresh saddle, and fired upon his would-be captors.

The latter answered with a volley and Emmet toppled from his horse hard hit, the ball entering his temple, and died later. He made an auto-morium statement before he died, in which he confessed to the killing of which he was charged, and said that the Daltons had intended to start at his pursuers, and was killed in the attempt.

After the battle was over search was made for the bodies of the bandits, and had secured from the two banks. It was found in the banks where it had been placed by the robbers. One sack was found under the lady of Bob Dalton, who had fallen dead upon it when he was escaping from the First National Bank. Bob's pocket was found to be full of Lincoln's "Texas Jacks." Band. The money was restored to its rightful owners.

LORD TENNYSON IS DEAD.

An Attack of Bronchitis Complicated with Heart Disease Fatal.

Lord Alfred Tennyson died at 1 o'clock of Tuesday, and after a long illness of great Britain, died at 1 o'clock Tuesday morning. A slight cold became bronchitis, and complicated influenza, which caused death.

Lord Tennyson was born in Lincolnshire, Lincolnshire, England, in 1809. His father, the Rev. George Clayton Tennyson, was the rector of Somersby and Mablethorpe, and married Miss Mary Fytche, daughter of the Rev. Samuel Fytche, vicar of Louth. He was the third son of twelve children, of whom the eldest, Charles, taking the title of "Poet Laureate," Alfred succeeded to the family estate. Alfred Tennyson was born at Somersby, and was educated at home by his father, the Rev. George Clayton Tennyson, and at the Louth Grammar School. Later he went to Eton and Cambridge, where he was a member of the Apostles' Club, and gained the Chancellor's medal for his poem "Timbuctoo." He published a small volume entitled "Poems by Two Brothers." The poems received some attention, three signed "A. T." receiving the Chancellor's medal for declaring that they alone of the selections in the volume were worthy of publication. In 1842 he published a collection of his poems, in two vols. Of these, "Locksley Hall," "Ulysses," "Tithonus," "Dora," "Lady Clare," "Sir Galahad," "Sir Launfal," "Godiva," "Tears, Idle Tears," "Ode to Memory," "Love and Duty," "The Talking Oak," "Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue," "Locksley Hall Sixty Years After," "The Voyage," "Rizpah," "Northern Farmer," "Northern Farmer, New Style," "Dora," "Enoch Arden," "Aylmer's Field," "Sea Dreams," "Maud," "The Brook," "Edwin Morris," "The Gardener's Daughter," "Lucretius," "Tiresias," "Tithonus," "Ulysses," "Tiresias," "Tithonus," "Ulysses," "Tiresias," "Tithonus," "Ulysses

Not Yet, William.

The editor of the Democrat writes us a personal letter asking us to apologize for our statements concerning his publication of the water-ordinance. Not yet, William.

Before we apologize, will you please give us unequivocal answers to the following questions:

1. Were you not told by the Clerk and a Trustee when you presented your bill, that the SENTINEL did that class of work for less than the amount you charged?

2. Did you not, then and there, refuse to cut your bill?

3. Was there any act of the Council that could be construed as an award of the work to the Democrat?

4. As a trustee of the Village of Charlevoix and as a democrat, advocating economical administration of public affairs, do you consider your course in the matter one that is calculated to win the applause or commendation of the tax-payers?

5. If the SENTINEL had published the water ordinance, and presented a bill for 70 cents per folio, when the preceding bill for the same class of work was but 35 cents, would it not have been your duty, as a Trustee, to object to the bill?

Consult your boss, William, and answer these questions.

A New Enterprise.

D. M. Ferry & Co., the famous seed house, of Detroit have decided to make Charlevoix the base of their operations in this part of Northern Michigan, in the raising and shipment of seed peas.

The Manager of the concern was here two weeks ago looking over the ground. As a result, last week, Mr. D. Coulter, who for some years has had charge of one of the Company's experimental farms at Detroit, arrived here to make definite arrangements and make contracts with farmers for the growing of pea crops.

It is their purpose to lease a warehouse for this year, but their intention is to secure a suitable site and erect a warehouse in the near future.

This is an enterprise which will prove of value to Charlevoix in a double sense. It will not only make this place the base of operations in the handling of a vast amount of this profitable product, but it affords our farmers the benefit of what in other localities of Northern Michigan has proven to be a safe and lucrative staple of labor and acreage.

Mr. Coulter is now engaged in making contracts.

Columbus Day Exercises.

We give below the program of exercises prescribed by the President for the observance of Oct. 21st, Fri day next, in commemoration of the discovery of America:

1. Reading of the President's proclamation.
2. Raising of the Flag by the veterans of the G. A. R. Post.
3. Salute to the flag, and singing of "America," by school chorus.
4. Acknowledgment of God in Prayer or Scripture.
5. Song of Columbus Day, by pupils and audience.
6. Address—The Meaning of Four Centuries.
7. Ode—Columbus Donne
8. Dismissal.

The veterans will march to the school grounds, arriving at 10 a m, where they will be met by col of pupils and escorted to their position in the audience. They will then be joined by the schools, and the exercises will commence at 10 o'clock.

The public are cordially invited.

A HOME PRODUCT.

The Little Girl Did Not Go Much on Charity.

A good lady of Detroit who is very charitable has a three-year-old daughter who does not yet believe in the principle of giving

The other day a case of such genuine poverty came to the lady's attention in her own home that she felt she must immediately relieve it. But she had no change and called on her little girl for the amount in her toy savings bank.

The child studied over it, and finally asked:

"May I give the poor woman the bank, mamma?"

"Yes," said her mother, much pleased to know that the child could be so generous, "you may give her the bank too."

The child wrapped it up carefully and gave it to the poor woman with her own hands.

"It will relieve you temporarily," said the mother. "There are several dollars in it in small change."

It was not until the woman had returned to tell her that the whole bank was empty that the mother discovered the diplomacy of the infant mind. The little girl had carefully removed the money before giving away the bank. She evidently believed that charity began at home.

ABSENT-MINDEDNESS.

The Race Was Not to — Fastest Nor the Battle to the Victor.

"I was with a surveying party in New Mexico once," said an old civil engineer lately. "Our supplies ran short and it was a long way to a town. Among other things we got out of tobacco. One man found a package of cigarettes in the pocket of an old coat and there was a solitary. But a package of cigarettes did not last long, and after they had been distributed and consumed no odd cigarette remained. Six men wanted it. I was the seventh. I wanted it, too, but was too civilized to say so. Finally I proposed that the fellows race for it. It was decided that they should go half a mile, stand in line, and when they saw me fire a pistol run for the tent, the first to get the prize. They started to walk to the half-mile point. The day was warm and I sat lazily watching them. They squared round, signaled ready and I fired. The six came pushing and sweating over the sands. 'Where's my cigarette?' shouted the victor. Well, what could I say, for the stump of it was between my lips?

"A clear case," he continued, "a clear case of absent-mindedness."

CURED AND NOT CURED.

An Embalmer Made a Profit by the Services of a Dentist.

"The war was responsible for many queer things," said Dr. Eugene Hardcastle, a St. Paul surgeon. "Up in Northern Minnesota lives a man who entered the service in 1861. He was a very dull fellow, almost a fool. During one of the battles made by the confederates at Donelson he received a bushelbat in the head. The surgeons could not find it, and the wound healed. He returned to duty one of the bright best men in his company, and in time became second lieutenant. At the close of the war he returned home, married a superior woman, prospered in business and was elected sheriff of his county. Three years ago his head began to give him a great deal of trouble. He came to St. Paul and I located the bushelbat and removed it. He is sure as healthy as ever, but is the same stupid dolt that he was before the fight at Fort Donelson."

The "Crowned Flower of India."

The Erythrina Indica, a beautiful flower of the bean family, which grows wild in India, is supposed to be under a curse, and although the blossom is perfection itself both in odor and color, no true Hindoo would touch it for the world. They tell you it originally grew in the "Garden of India," in the center of heaven, where it was hourly worshipped by all the children of that blessed abode. Krishna stole it and brought it to earth, but all who worshipped at its shrine after that event died before they could leave the spot. On this account Indian is shunned as if it were a poisonous serpent.

In Marriage a Partner.

A careful woman dwells in Canterbury, N. H. She has had a lamp burning in constant use for seventeen years, and it is still without a flaw. Another careful woman has her home in Port Richmond, Staten Island. She was married eleven years ago, and began her married life with two rows of pins. She has thirty-seven of them yet, and would be happy if she could find the three missing pins.

—Wm. McNally, of Hayes, died the day last week, of "pitf" consumption, caused by years of labor in a stone quarry. The family request us to convey their gratitude for the sympathy and kindness of neighbors and friends.

—In the matter of the water-works well job, we believe the Council have done as best they could; but at this writing nothing has been accomplished, although the pumps will be ready to fill the basins the last of this week. The Council committee have made three contracts, and up to date the only results reached have been one balloon ascension and a masquerade ball. If the present fall weather continues, we hope to yet have a punch and judy entertainment and a tight-rope walk.

—The exercises on Columbus Day, under the management of Prof. H. M. Rowe, and the co-operation of Baxter Post, G. A. R., were successfully carried out. The program adopted throughout the United States was that submitted by the Fourth's Compatriots, and nothing could have been more appropriate. The program was published in these columns last week. The school children were massed fronting the school building, and as the flag was raised by Comrade Steel, man. As it reached the peak, the pupils came to a salute, repeating the following: "I pledge my allegiance to my flag, and the Republic for it stands; one Nation indivisible, liberty and justice for all." A good sentiment, and one that the boys and girls should cherish in their hearts. "Old Glory" was given three cheers by the veterans with on many a bloody field have proven that it is worth fighting for, and, if need be, dying for. Rev. Mr. Macpherson gave a scripture reading from the Psalms, and the school sang appropriate music. Then the cannon boomed a salute in honor of the occasion, and of the flag, proudly floating from the tower.

Judge Morse' Speech.

Ex-Justice Allen H. Morse, democratic nominee for Governor, addressed a large but not an enthusiastic audience at Lewis Grand Opera House last Wednesday evening.

To say that the address was a disappointment is drawing it mildly. Leading Democrats express their chagrin, and Republicans are more than ever convinced that John T. Rich will be the next Governor of Michigan. Judge Morse made plenty of points, but they were points for Republicans.

To sum it all up, it was simply an appeal to party prejudice, and a wholesale abuse of the Republican party, instead of a candid discussion of the questions which divide the parties. It was the talk of the pettifogger, instead of the argument of the jurist.

Judge Morse is doing good work for the Republicans.

Death of Mrs. Harrison.

The devoted wife of President Harrison died at the White House at 1:10 a. m. yesterday. She will be buried at Indianapolis Friday.

There is no distinction or variableness in the sympathy that goes out from the hearts of the American people to the President in his sorrow.

* * *

—J. A. Ellison, of Chicago, a brother in law of Charles Graves, has bought a lot on the north side, and will build a good residence.

—Prof. Elliott, the Jackson aeronaut, made a successful ascension on Columbus Day. The ascent was made from the space back of the pensation. Some difficulty was experienced in inflating the big 45-foot balloon, but at 4:30, Elliott gave the words "everybody let go," the big thing shot up like a rocket, with the intrepid, young man seated on the bar. Over his left shoulder he grasped the parachute bar. The balloon rose about 2,000 feet, and drifted slowly toward the north-east. When almost over the Chicago House, Elliott jumped, and for an instant shot with fearful velocity toward the earth; but gradually the parachute opened, and the aeronaut landed safely on Dexter avenue, near the Nettleton place, and was brought to town by Mr. Lewis in his buggy. The affair was a success.

—And right here we want to repeat what we have often said in these columns: A citizen who serves on the Village Council, gets his labor for nothing, as he goes along; sometimes more sometimes less, but always enough to equate the size which all feels is niggardly and niggardly. We are not altogether clear as to the Masonic philosophy of eternal punishment hereafter for the wicked, but, after a careful and dispassionate study of the question, we think the position is superfluous and unnecessary in the case of a Village Trustee. On the other hand, we think that if martyrdom counts for anything, there is laid a crown of righteousness for every unfortunate mortal who is released from his cross at the end of his two years service as a member of the governing body of a one horse town. We also repeat what we said a few months ago, that we believe the present Charlevoix Council have the best interests of the village at heart. They have made mistakes, but they have not meant to. They work for nothing, and catch hell—individually. But some one must suffer, and take his medicine.

An Exemplar in the Art of Subterfuge—Who is the Liar?

We have no desire to prolong this controversy with the Democrat, but we cannot permit to pass unnoticed its last outburst on the water-ordinance printing question, embodying, as it does, the most flagrant misrepresentation and falsehood.

Mr. Hampton publishes a certificate, signed by Trustees Washburne, Miller, Nicholls and President Harris, setting forth that Mr. Hampton stated in answer to objections to allowing the bill at 70 cents, that the books would be printed at cost; that he informed his bill for the books will be not to exceed $15, and at these figures we do not consider the charge exorbitant." etc. The last, or $15 clause, sounds like a verdict; other we find the prisoner guilty as set forth, but, as he has agreed to pay for the property, we acquit him of the charge."

Mr. Hampton supplements this certificate with the statement that "Messrs. See and Baker join the others in saying that the above is perfectly correct, but withheld their signatures through a desire to keep out of the muss."

We challenge a contradiction of the statement that Mr. Hampton never mentioned the sum of $15 until after this controversy arose; and we challenge the affidavit of one Trustee to the effect that, at the council meeting in question, the matter of printing the ordinance in book form was mentioned until after the bill for publication was allowed! This is where the subterfuge comes in.

Desperate indeed must be the cause of the editor, when he is compelled to thus misquote, misrepresent and garble. The whole thing is boiled down to the question as to whether the pamphlet work was by agreement or inference, made a part of the consideration in the allowance of the bill for publication. The "certificate" says Mr. Washburn has repeatedly told the Trustees "see and Baker say it was not; the clerk says it was not.

The clerk of the council is supposed to know about what occurs at the council meetings. This is what he says:

I have no recollection of the subject of printing the water ordinance in book form being made a part of the consideration of the bill of Mr. Hampton for publishing the same.

H. S. HARSHA.

Mr. Hampton quotes Trustee See as saying that that "was the above is perfectly correct, but" etc. This is what Trustee See says about it:

I hereby certify that the statement in the Democrat that I had said that the certificate signed by certain members of the council was correct, is untrue. I further deny that the printing of the ordinance in book form was not considered in the allowance of the bill for publishing said ordinance.

LOU SEE.

Trustee Baker, similarly quotes, disposes of the matter promptly and without reservation as follows:

Mr. Hampton does not state the truth when he quotes me as signing the certificate published in last week's Democrat. I refused to sign it because it was not true, and told him so. The printing of the ordinance in book form was not in any way made a part of the consideration of said bill at 70 cents per folio.

S. BAKER.

Only since this controversy began has Mr. Hampton made the claim set forth in the "certificate." At the time the bill was presented, and allowed not one word was said about printing the pamphlets "at cost." If he prints it at cost it is because he is compelled to by force of circumstances.

Four members of the council have told us that the bill was excessive, and should not have been allowed. Trustee Washburn has repeatedly informed us that the pamphlet printing job had not bearing in the allowance of the bill.

We do not think Mr. Hampton intends to be dishonest or dishonorable in his official capacity, but he made a big mistake, and attempted to get out of it by resorting to subterfuge and a big Hampton bluff. But bluffing doesn't go with the Sentinel.

We close this controversy by propounding this question: Who is the "colossal liar?"

A WOMAN'S INFLUENCE

CHAPTER XXII.—Continued.

"Poor Briton. What a state to be in. You shouldn't say much. The phrase is gone, and the people I meet, only hurt my heart. It's a very effective hurt, too for I confess me to appreciate my own good fortune, and it makes me feel very regretful to sit here amid so much comfort and luxury, and remember the poor victims on the world's populous. You could never imagine, Briton, what pathetic sorrows design that pow little crippled girl made to the Blessed Christ I used her and, while I watched her, I could not help thinking what a wonderful world God had made, and how little we have to do with it."

"Well, I don't know, Bess. I've met many pious people who have had their lives and their all impossible, to feel as religious and helpful as you do. I don't know, I don't believe I could even imagine being on a Sunday living on the pious social holiday which you and I had spent." Agnes' mother supported herself on the sofa, and, as she said so, when Instinct broke are plainly. I'm sure they are good, Bess, and I have taken their place. I feel Nanny the other day, and I felt as if I could cry. Now I hate them, because I know they have been kind from the least one woman's mouth. And she is not alone. I know, I know, I am living in a small corner of the earth up to this time, and I have been, I am awaking to real social life. It is a sad revelation for me. I cannot tell you how many women I saw to-day, and how many others I heard of, who are the Song of the Shirt from daylight to midnight for others, whom they know and want are a living reality. How we, who are blind to the demoralization of the lower classes! How can we preach to them? Why, Bess, I saw in the sample of the man who gave a little boy a dime to carry his valise, a man who, I'm sure, has not had a single reprehensible for a woman to pleasant deference shown in similar circumstances. So there is some consolation, for you, I am driving home. Good-bye."

"Why do, Bessie," replied Wilson, who is much as her mother, and now stood looking down upon her with a quizzical and kind expression. "I am only every day more of a fool. Good-bye, but your sweeping generalization shall be the encouraging thought of mes remainder me that I have not lost waiting for my down the street, as, as that is a GOT to which I am not to blind. I shall have to my good-night. I admit there is much justice in your remark. Nevertheless, I hope that time gazer's heart. If you had seen her a year ago you could realize what a change you must have made in her strength in such a life as being all in dying. After she has left the world, and all she loves, for his sake."

Bessie's eyes filled with indignation at the thought. I would have been Briton Wood, and dashes New York Yet after all this, she'll continue to talk to duty. Women are magnanimous. I give them up. I'd like to thrash Briton myself. It might possibly do him good."

"I can't understand him," remarked Wilson. Bessie's eyes.

"No, nor can any one else. He doesn't seem worth the understanding. I'll have to find him somehow, and send him home. I can't bear the thought of Margaret walking in such anxious dread, and knowing whether he is laughing about in the gutter or disgracing himself in some other way. Are we at your quarters already? How last we must have walked. No! I can't come in to-night. Some other time, old fellow. I'll have to make up for some of the club hours, I dare say. Well, good-night."

Bertie did not find Briton, as he had expected, in any of his probable haunts, though he went to them all, anxiously examined the sea of faces, and even questioned the waiters and attendants.

Rather disheartened after this vain search, he turned his course home to get rest. In his dilemma, he was in the habit of turning to his mother for counsel. He glanced at the street lamps telling him upon a figure in front of him, and quickened his pace to overtake it.

Briton, he said, under his breath, was a fine fellow, and he was sorry enough that only confirmed his fears. He had thought of Margaret, and hurry and caution overpowered him, for this cause he had hesitated another, and made the impulse he manged to control himself, and he was busy enough. He was in Briton's aisle, and, placing his hand on the figure, he gave his shoulder, he asked for pity.

"Where are you going? Come home?"

"Home!" repeated Briton, startled into a tone of surprise and shrinking from Bertie's glance. "Home to fire! hot! Home to the gaslight! Home to Margaret! I would not I took another drop. Yes, I think, I suppose I'll go home. Yes, I'm proud. You see no re-sight, Bertie, you see, I'm a fool. Don't forgive me, I'm sick from me! To see her blush for me! To see her face! Oh, heavens, no!"

These words made no impression on Bertie.

Don't, said Wilson, to-morrow." he said, with faulting eyes. "Come home. If you have no self-respect, remember that we have at least the decency to take your disgrace under your own roof. Come home, Briton, for Margaret's sake, and, if you can, for your mother's sake. Come home, Briton, for pity, sobbed Bertie, pulling his face in his hands. "My God, I did not intend to ruin her life."

Perhaps even the appeal of Bertie's sobbed agony, or perhaps he feared that worst now would expose too much of the secret, Briton yielded. We had left the men who came never understand the depths with which a woman can fall.

Quite silent he walked by Briton, and only left him when the door had been open him.

Bertie, for his own room Margaret heard the faltering step, and knew that Briton was home. Not even the great relief of this knowledge did not bring her sleep. All night she tossed restlessly, her mind a prey to miserable doubts and hopeless fears, and when morning came her face told its own story.

"Bessie, do we deserve?"

The Greatest Compliment.

Time wet, fogey, muddy day, a little girl was standing on one side of a street in London, waiting for an opportunity to cross over. These sides have seen London streets on such a day. Her face was pinched and pale, but, watchful the rush of cabs, hansoms, omnibuses, and carriages, will not wonder that a little girl should be afraid to try to make her way through such a tide as that. So she stood and looked about her, and looked up and down, and looked down and looked up, and looked up and looked down, and looked up and looked down, and looked up and looked down

TO OLD SOLDIERS.

AN IMPORTANT LETTER FROM COMRADE C. J. BURNETT.

Flings the Lie in the Teeth of Those Who Would Slander Honorable John T. Rich—More About the Lapeer Circulars.

To the State Republican:

The following communication speaks itself. The writer is a well-known mining citizen and is at present employed by the Capitol Investment, Building and Loan Association. His residence is on Isabella street, west, where Mr. Burnett or any of his followers can find the gentleman any time they desire to see him. Mr. Burnett was, at the time its document referred to was passed around, a resident of and doing business at Lapeer. His letter is both early and emphatic:

State Republican:

Allow me through the columns of your paper to explain to the ex-soldiers of Michigan my connection with another letter that is being printed and circulated through the state by the moneyed party, evidently hoping to lose Republican ex-soldiers for voting for Hon. John T. Rich, for Congress. The letter referred to, the statement of which I make at Lapeer several years ago, said was signed by several ex-soldiers (including myself) on residing in Lapeer county. I have the letter done Mr. Rich an injustice, as it does not represent the feelings now held by its signers towards him.

I gave my signature to the letter because some of certain statements made at the time, which I afterwards found to be misleading. If not in part untrue, afterwards repudiated the letter, upon being the facts and circumstances under which the appointment was made now that the letter is again being put before the public, as a matter of justice to Rich, as well as myself, I want to state the circumstances which I signed the letter and also to respectfully protest against the use of my name in any other letter of the same character. The letter reflects to the advantage of the gentleman at Lapeer several years ago, said was signed by several ex-soldiers (including myself) on residing in Lapeer county. I have the letter done Mr. Rich an injustice, as it does not represent the feelings now held by its signers towards him.

I gave my signature to the letter because

A CHILD MURDERER.

A TEN-YEAR-OLD BOY STABS HIS PLAYMATE.

They Had Lost a Cent in Gambling and Quarrel—Loss of Life at an Engine-wood Fire—Ada Harr Divorced.

From Far and Near.

—James Wilsons, aged 14 years, was stabbed to the heart by ten-year-old Stewart Hunter at Hickory, Pa. The boys quarreled over a cent, which he also dead, the friend player and his victim finishing it between them before they quarreled. The children were playing in an alley. The killing was done with the pocket cutter in the hands of young Hunter. Stewart Hunter jumped on the others behind in the play surface, and the boy fell with a gash in his left side. Young Hunter ran to Chartiers and told The other went after him, still picking up a stone, intend it at Hunter. The three the car back and forth until it was killed. They Stewart ran to Hunter's home, the latter immediately pinned a pen-knife into the other's breast. The figure lay in the gutter stiffen.

—Twenty buildings burned to the ground, involving a loss of $150,000, and two human lives crushed out were the appalling results of a fire which devastated the business section of Rogers, Ark., about noon Tuesday morning. The flames broke out at 4:30 o'clock in Dan Jaeger's bakery, 417 400 street, and raged for nearly three hours. The loss is thought to be fully half insurance. The fire was the conflagration which the town has had in which started would be fatal, and the entire business portion of the town was threatened with destruction. After two hours of hard and desperate fighting, however, the flames succeeded in mastering the fire fiend, and the town was saved. Two were well under control. So far as known but two lives were lost.

—Thomas S. Ball, better known to the theatrical profession as Ada Harr, the fair Southern actress, got a divorce at Sioux City, Ia., from Jay Jaeger's bakery, a close-stage name to Ada Harr. Ada Harr is an English actress of some fame. Jaeger Harr husband last summer became suspicious of her conduct with Mrs. Hopkins, an actor, who was owned as correspondent.

—An Atlanta dispatch to the Times received here are that the Mexican Central Railway is threatened to be tied up with a strike. The trouble began when the American machinists in the shops in the City of Mexico went on strike. They demanded an increase of 50 cents per day. They were then receiving $1 per day. The railroad claims that it would be the demands and the dissatisfaction spread to the shops at Tlaxcalantongo and Puebla, where the machines are also worked out. The engineers and firemen expected that the work if the machinists demands are less greater.

—Nineteen men were dropped in a rain on the bottom of a shaft in the Pittsburg at Bessemer, Mich. The traveling foot 10 feet, when the lower the wrong way, and time tied. Several of the miners all of whom were injured.

What Judge Ramsdell Says.

Frank Myers, as Deputy Sheriff, has attended 32 terms of the Circuit Court, over which Judge Ramsdell presided, and the following letter will serve to show what the Judge thinks of him.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH., OCT. 17, 1892.

MR. FRANK MYERS,
Boyne Falls, Mich.

MY DEAR SIR,—

Yours informing me of your nomination for Sheriff on the Republican ticket came to hand in due time but at a time when I was overwhelmed with fruit picking, packing and shipping, and was laid aside for leisure to answer, and forgotten until this day turned up.

You ask my candid opinion as to your fitness for the position, and say that some object to your candidacy on account of your super abundant flesh.

The office of Sheriff is an important executive office, one which requires good sound judgment, accurate knowledge of human nature, quick comprehension and quick decision. All these qualities I believe you possess in a high degree, and they are far more important than fleshiness of foot. The sheriff who is not sharp enough to catch his man without running him down would be of little account, as a culprit catcher or as a criminal detective. The office is one that requires brain more than muscle. If you are elected and fail to satisfy the people of your superior qualifications for that office, I shall be greatly disappointed. I have not learned who your competitor is, but hope he is in every way as worthy, so that whoever is elected the county will be well served. Wishing you success, I am Yours truly,

J. V. ROAMSDELL.

Canadian Fish Must Pay Duty.

There seems to be a misunderstanding among some of our fishermen as to the tariff on fish. The McKinley law levies a duty of 25 per cent. upon Canadian caught fish, and the Board of General Appraisers has rendered a decision which will put an end to the efforts of Canadian fish companies to send fish into the United States free of duty. The McKinley law requires that no fresh water fish are entitled to free entry unless the fishing boats, nets, etc., in which the fish are caught are owned by American citizens. Firms in Detroit and Buffalo attempted to get around the law by purchasing fish from aliens the ownership of whose boats and nets had been transferred in name only, to American citizens. The appraisers saw through the scheme and assessed the regular duties of 25 per cent, and the board of general appraisers upheld the assessments and declared that the alleged ownership of the fishing outfits by citizens was colorable at best and a flimsy pretext to evade the payment of duties. Charlevoix fishermen should not be led astray by false or misleading statements concerning this matter.

STRANGE COMPANIONSHIP.

A Cow, a Horse and a Pig Form a Partnership.

A notable instance of friendship among animals came under the writer's notice some years ago, at a time in a march that was largely devoted to stockraising. Cattle, horses and hogs were kept in large numbers and allowed to run at will upon the range. One night in riding over the mesa an oddly assorted trio was found in a locality at a considerable distance from any other animals. This trio was made up of a cow, a horse and a pig, and all three were feeding side by side in amicable manner. At first it was thought to be nothing but a coincidence that the three members of different families should be together, but subsequently it turned out that this trio had evidently set up an alliance offensive and defensive against all the other animals on the range. They were always together. It was a remarkable sight to see the oddly assorted trio traveling over the range. The horse usually took the lead, with the cow next and the pig last of all. Occasionally the horse looked around to see if his porkship were keeping up, and if he felt behind a halt would be made to allow him to come closer. When feeding the pig was just as apt to put his snout down by the horse's or cow's mouth and endeavor to snatch the grass from between their teeth as to graze on his own hook. One could almost see in the countenance of the larger animals a sort of half humorous, patronizing air as they regarded their diminutive companion, while the pig, on the other hand, walked with a bullying swagger and a self-confident air, for all the world like the youngster who treks along by the side of his "big brother," in the full assurance that all his battles will be fought for him.

MOTHER'S BISCUITS.

Just What the Man of Two Thousand and Ninety-Two Will Say.

This placard is on a Detroit bakery: "Ancyers soin mum over like those your aceans rain to make.

Two men, strangers to each other, stopped to read it, and one of them heaved a great sigh and said:

"Makes my mouth water just to look at 'em."

"Humph!" grunted the other savagely.

"I can remember as if it was only yesterday how they tasted. Light as flaky as snowflakes and as sweet as honeysuckles. Just set me down to 'em now with real churn butter, and maple molasses, and—Lord! It brings the tears to my eyes to think of 'em."

"Sho it does to mine, stranger," said the other man. "I can fairly taste them, an' I don't doubt your mother made exactly the same kind of biscuits mine did. They were green and yeller with saleratus, and heavy as lead, but you see its a case where distance lends enchantment to the view. I tell you my wife can discount mother's biscuit by a long sight, and I don't doubt yours can."

But the other man shook his head.

"There's some folks that can never idealize the past. If I only had the boy's appetite that went with those biscuits I could eat a section of railroad yes and be happy. There's something wrong somewhere," and he moved off in a disengaged way.

A NANTUCKET JAIL.

It Didn't Pay to Employ a Jailer to Watch One Man.

Some years ago a man in Nantucket was tried for petty larceny, and sentenced by the judge to three months in jail. A few days after the trial the judge, accompanied by the sheriff, was on his way to the Boston boat, when they passed a man who was busy sawing wood. The sawyer stopped his work, touched his hat politely, and said, "Good morning, judge." The judge looked at him earnestly a moment, passed on a little way, and then turned to glance backward, saying to the sheriff, "Why, isn't that the man I sentenced to three months in jail the other day?" "Yes," replied the sheriff, with some hesitation; "yes, that is the man. But you—why, you see, judge—we—we don't happen to have anybody else in jail just now, and we thought twould be a sort of useless expense for us to hire somebody to keep the jail for three months just for this one man, so I gave him the jail key and told him if he'd sleep there nights I guessed it would be all right."

—The schooner Stanprehe was out in the Traverse last night, and put in for a freshwater and main gaff. Ben. Campbell supplied new ones.

—"Comrade" Morse says there is too much at stake to vote for Comrade Harrison this fall. Republicans, there is considerable at at stake.

—Mason & Berdan don't want to have the public mix the tin up with any traveling tinsmiths on cents. They live here, and pay taxes here.

—The venerable S. B. Handall, of Cincinnati, who spends his summers here, has bought and ship-ped a bell for the Charlevoix Baptist church.

—Col. Wood, of New York, will speak at Lewis Grand Opera House this evening, on the issues of the campaign. Turn out and hear him, everybody.

—William Mears, the Republican candidate for Senator, is worthy of the voice of every citizen, and with it rests with them the choice of the next U. S. Senator.

—The Petoskey Democrat refers to Grover Cleveland as "a no account man." In 1881 he spoke of him as "a creature for scorn and contempt." That was when he was a gentleman.

—Married, today, at the residence of the bride's sister, Mrs. I. E. Bowman, by Rev. Mr. Hayson, Mr. Hannah P. Grover, to Miss Jay Ie G. Hastings. The young couple leave for Chicago this afternoon.

—Petoskey Record: A. M. Dolly was in the same car pioneer with Ben Morse, and when he had his arm shot off it flew away from off the field and Dolly says he didn't know what "There's too much at sixes and sevens," as the judge says.

—I. A. Lawrence and family leave to morrow for Tennessee, where they will spend the winter.

—A whale of goodly proportions, killed on the coast of Massachusetts, embalmed, and loaded on the deck of a canal boat, was towed in here last Thursday, and has been on exhibition.

—The Republicans of Charlevoix county should see to it, that every citizen of their ticket is elected. The ticket is a good one, and there is no reason why any Republican should scratch it.

—Charlevoix will lose one of its oldest and most popular resorters next season, B. A. Waterman, of Detroit, Auditor of the Michigan Central Railroad, has been promoted to Treasurer of that Company, and will remove to New York.

—Last Friday night and during a portion of Saturday the most terrific gale of the season prevailed. The smoke-stack of the Charlevoix Lumber Co.'s factory was blown down, and the main covering of the big whale canal boat was destroyed.

—Republicans should remember that the utmost hopefulness is attached to the Legislative ticket this fall. Be sure that you vote the straight Republican ticket, containing the names of William Mears and R. W. Bagot. There is a United States Senator to be elected.

—Bellaire Herald: Wm. Wallbridge says that from four acres planted to potatoes, the yield was 1,079 bushels, an average of almost 270 bushels per acre. Mr. Wallbridge clings to the opinion that Northern Michigan is all right and is destined to take front rank as an agricultural district.

—The people of the Charlevoix school house in the proper idea about the celebration of Hallowe'en. They took up a subscription among themselves, and spent the proceeds in charitable deeds. One poor family received a load of wood from the High School pupils.

—Elk Rapids Progress: You can fail as far as you can see him, by the broad smile which adorns his phiz. There are big crops of everything, and what's better still, they are going at fancy prices. We have never had a more prosperous year in every respect than the present one.

—J. H. B. in the East Jordan Enterprise says: Ash Barron spring in his country's revenue when the tocsin of war sounded, he did, but he waited till the old flag had sounded three years and a half, and they were paying $500 bounty, and now the pension shoot says that no two years Ash was deputy sheriff he never served a single paper right and couldn't.

—If you would vote your ticket straight, simply mark a cross in the square under your party heading. Nothing more need be done unless you desire to split your ticket in which case it will be necessary to find the name of the candidate you do not wish to vote for and make a cross before the name of the candidate you do wish to vote for. The manner of voting is remarkably simple, and mistakes in voting are really inexcusable.

—Judge Morse spoke at Petoskey last week, and this is the way the Petoskey Democrat puts up the business, reviewing the events "A Massively and Statesmanlike Discussion of the Tariff Question, and the Fallacies of the Protective System Thoroughly Exploded!" It must be that the Judge prepared a new speech for Petoskey. Can any person who heard him speak in Charlevoix agree with the Democrat that it was "Massively and statesmanlike?" Did anybody present on that occasion learn anything concerning the tariff, or did the speaker expose anything but his rancor and intellectual political bitterness?

—The water works plant is practically completed, and, so far as the production is concerned, will soon be in operation. But it looks as if the village would be compelled to operate the plant until next spring with no revenue from water-rates. November is here, and we have no water supply except Round Lake. Three contracts have been let, and nothing is done yet. The delay has caused much trouble, and has cut off revenue provided for winter operating expenses. As it looks now, if water supply for domestic use is provided this fall it will be almost a miracle. It seems as if responsible parties might have done more and who would have performed the work.

—Items from Undine: Mrs. Philip Howe is very sick. Leroy Hamlin is visiting in Undine this week. Mass Crane and wife, also R. Crane and wife, returned from a three weeks visit in Wisconsin last Wednesday. Ben Nowland has moved into his new house. Mrs. J. Nowland returned home Monday from Marion.

A "CORKER."

The Democratic Circular Mailed to Faithful of Charlevoix County.

A circular lands in the following circular mailed to all the faithful throughout the county by the able chairman of the Democratic County Committee. The Italics are ours. It is a "corker."

A few more days and the campaign will be ended, the final ballot will be cast, and the land-slide is coming our way all along the line. We have try to do our duty fully and our ticket will be elected, from Grover Cleveland to the County Coroner. Our state Committee has not to stone unturned. We are all over the state and believe we will win. You we leave the duty of getting the democratic vote to your town. If it is to be done, the victory is ours and we feel that you will not fail in this last duty. Judge Morse making and has made a gallant and successful fight for Governor. Hon. W. S. Ferris, our candidate for Congress, has done splendid work and still working vigorously, and reports that his prospects are excellent. Hon. A. D. Cruikshank, our candidate for Senator, is speaking every night and has almost the support of the supreme full ticket. Hon. Fred E. Mayne has made and is still making the house to house canvass throughout Representative Dist. and appears to be doing well. Judge Montgomery and his opponent, Mr. Hoisinger, as his opponent, Mr. Hoisinger, as his opponent, Mr. Hoisinger says that if he is elected he will go to Lansing and vote for Stephenson for Speaker, and that resign, as his business is too important for him to leave it for any length of time. This will leave our District without representation during the greater part of our next legislature, should he be elected.

All our nominees for County office, led by that general and noble man, Ashbell F. Horton, have been despatching work and are still at it. Being a state returned, Mr. Kane, Prosecuting Attorney, has been speaking nearly every night in different parts of the County, and the people of sterling our full ticket grow. And now it remains for the Democrats in each and every township, to see to it that the full vote is polled on the 8th of November; see that Democrat fails to vote. Keep your eyes wide open for "Rose Black" and all kinds of villainous campaign tricks at the last moment, and be ready to meet any point that are sure to fall. This is History.

In 1857, under free trade laws, average price paid by the work man for an axe was $1.42; in 1860 after 25 years of protective tariff paid for the same axe 95 cents. September, 1891, one year after passage of the McKinley bill, the 95 cents. In 1857 a pair of woolen blankets cost him $6.84½; in 1860 $4.38; last fall he paid $3.70 for pair. The idea existing that he has paid 17½ cents per yard for, boys now for 9 cents or less. Shirts that cost him $6.75 in 1857 could have bought last September $2.88½, and they are probably a lot cheaper now. The flannel he used to pay 62 cents for in 1857, he can buy after 25 years of protective tariff for 30 cents. The flannel that cost him 70 cents in free trade days now get from 30 to 35 cents. Shirts overall cost him in good, free trade times $1.20 per pair, under a protective tariff he can now buy much better articles in every respect for from 70 cents. The blanket he was asked to pay $1 cents for 1857 he buys for about 42 cents now. The hand saw that it took $2.42 his hard earned money to pay for in the days of free trade, when the Cleveland party are so anxious to restore free trade, now get for about $1.65. And on every one of these articles the price has fallen materially since the passage of the McKinley—making the date of compilation, one year prior to the passage that act. Free trade has always prevailed in this country to increase the cost of living and decrease wages, while protection has invariably increased wages and decreased work-ingman's expenses. CHAUNCY M. DEPEW.

It is motion the mighty column of nearly a hundred thousand opened an event that will go ringing down the ages as the most beautiful, the most impressive, the most a great and prosperous nation. No such multitude as was, yesterday, thronged the streets has Chicago ever before seen. Political conventions with their crowds and clamor were left far behind, and the scene on the down-town thoroughfares as the procession passed of will be long remembered alike by Chicagoans and by the visitors to the thronged city.

It was close to the noon hour when the vanguard of stalwart policemen appeared, their uniforms all dust and wheeled into line. General Miles and his brilliant, unobtrusive staff followed, and the more brilliantly gilded civilians of his staff, resplendent in gold, and yesterday the advance guard of that vast army of 100,000 men and more. Everywhere along the line of march the distinguished guests met as the organizations making the most striking display were greeted with enthusiastic cheering. Though the wind blowing was a gale, and the dust was choking, the day was hailed down by the mighty throng as the most glorious of all the days of the glorious week, nothing could damp the ardor of the crowd, and nothing that was worthy escaped their notice. From the grand stand on the Adams street front of the Auditorium Building, Vice President Levi P. Morton, the members of the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, and diplomatists from all the nations of the earth witnessed the grand civic parade as it passed in review. In the street the view was short, it cannot be called by any other name.

The was essentially people's day in the sense of companionship. Wednesday night's grand reception at the Auditorium was a notable event, but the participants were confined to the upper ten in official and social life, for ceremony, legislation and diplomacy. Thursday night's military ball was for the upper ten. Friday's military parade was confined principally to the limits of the fair grounds, to which admission could be had only for cash of invitation. But Thursday's show was while open to whoever could get a ticket from Wall to see. The bootblack and roustabout, the laborer, was as free as the millionaire or pet of society.

DEDICATORY EXERCISES

Impressive Ceremonies in the Great Manufactures Building.

Friday was the great Columbian dedication day proper, and on this day the big programme for which the whole country has been preparing for months was given.

The day's exercises began with a salute of twenty-one guns on the Lake Front.

At 9:30 o'clock the dedicatory parade was started. Gen. Miles and his staff came down the Lake Shore drive, the pride of a glittering company of United States troops. The seven lines of yellow plumes rising and falling in unison, the steady rest of the horses, the quietness and position of every movement, was a revelation to spectators unused to military pageantry.

At the head of Gen. Miles was followed a troop of cavalry, presenting a solid front of twenty horses abreast, and 10 deep. Three troops of white cavalry, with tanned and bearded faces, a troop of Indian cavalry, copper-colored and expressionless, and a troop of colored cavalry, black and smiling—that is the regular army.

The cavalry was followed by another troop of horse, but then appeared artillery, men, who rolled over the streets on the blocks almost 12th street at a smart trot. The regular artillery were followed by a battery of the National Guard. Tiny volunteer boys were not as smart as the regulars, but they looked very businesslike and full of pewter.

The escort was not yet finished, for smoothly and silently there came down upon mounted on wheels—the Toledo cadets. The troop gave the sixty men a chest as they passed, which seemed well deserved, for their soldierly appearance and the even manner in which they handled their fine steeds were very noticable.

The brilliant escort which had passed was some too brilliant for the array of power, wealth, and romance which was now to follow, when the representatives of the country and the men who have directed the affairs of the Exposition rode and drove in public parade to the dedication of the World's Fair.

First in the line of carriages which followed the troops was the highest representative of the Columbian Exposition, Vice President Morton, who was accompanied by his wife. The Vice President was President Palmer of the National Women's Fair Commission and ex-President Baird of the World's Fair.

Then followed the Governors of the different States and other notables with their aids and attendants, the whole making a glittering and interesting parade that will be remembered as long as the dedication ceremonies shall hold a place in history. The parade marched down the Lake Front boulevard to Washington Park, where the military review occurred.

Starting for the Buildings.

After this event was over the cavalry escorted the vice-president and his party to the Washington Park reviewing stand, marching up Thirty-seventh street through Midway Plaisance to the side entrance of the Fair. At this point the whole line was halted, with drawn sheets of every description, the colors of all nations being borne to the breeze in great profusion, with the flags of America and Spain the most prominent.

At the junction of Cottage Grove avenue and the Plaisance a squad of police under Lieut. Powers was stationed, at the Woodlawn intersection was Lieut. Eckles with another squad of police, while between the forces of Powers and Eckles there was a space of about half a mile in which there were no police. Into this gap the crowd rushed without hindrance and ran beneath the turnpike. All was confusion and the crowd threatened to inter-fere considerably with the progress of the procession.

But everything was under control right by the appearance of the troops, which was as nothing, a thick spot sifted and ground into the color of the picture.

When the multitude assembled the people came drifting in granular carfeats along the narrow avenues that ran along every closed open each other in the stocky push toward until it was difficult to tell one speck from another. Then the natural compression of a jostling crowd did the rest and they were molded into that mighty solid block, filling to the outer limits the floor of the lagoon building on one side.

Arrival of the Pageant.

It was just 1:45 p. m. when the impatient crowd caught sight of a glittering uniform at the back of the broad stairway leading to the speakers' stand. Milward Adams, manager of the seating arrangements, followed the guard in uniform, who had cleared the way, and proceeded down the stairway before Director General Davis, master of ceremonies. Then came Vice President Morton, Chauncey M. Depew, President Highinbotham, Mayor Washburne, Cardinal Gibbons, Archbishop Ireland, Bishop Fowler, and Dr. McCook.

By the time the showing and waiting of handkerchiefs had ended the speakers stand and seats behind were crowded with the most notable gathering of dignitaries and high officials ever seen in this country outside the national capital. Chief of these, of course, was Vice President Morton, who in his capacity as representative of the President and of the Government had the place of honor. Next to the head of the table sat Cardinal Gibbons, on his right was Bishop Fowler and Dr. McCook, who officiated as master of ceremonies, on his left. In a Dedicatory Exercises.

The dedicatory exercises were commenced by the great chorus singing the Columbian hymn.

The words of the hymn are as follows:

Lo! hail and welcome, nations of the earth!
Columbia's greeting comes from every throat,
Her welcome, ye who seek her shores for mirth,
Of freedom, ye who shall contribute her.

Let war and enmity be ever cease,
Let glorious art and commerce banish wrong
The universal brotherhood of peace
Shall be Columbia's hospitable song.

Then came the invocation of Bishop Charles H. Fowler of California. It was the first part of a speaker's voice heard by the 50,000 people assembled, instantly the fidelity of any attempt to speak to a crowd. Small and slight of great multitude. Ignorant of the religious nature of the address, the thing murmured and rustled until the sweet ring wave overwhelmed the speaker's voice and kept his words drift on a sea of sounds.

The invocation over, Director General Davis adjusted his eye-glasses, tossed back the gray locks of his head and advanced to the stand, manuscript in hand. His trumpet-like voice, his well-known features and the commanding office he represented commanded the attention of him and such a storm of silence fur into the crowd. His address was a brief recital of national triumphs, closing with a concise statement of the purpose for which the exposition had been inaugurated. The simplicity of the words and the exalted thought they contained found a response in the hearers, bringing interruptions of applause and a volley of cheers at the close.

Mayor Washburne was then introduced to deliver an address of welcome to the visitors, and he occupied a few minutes, while lacking in resonance, were enunciated so clearly and with such

MRS. SARAH CORNELL DE WOLFE

President Morton had his speech with as evident appreciation of the greatness of the occasion, passing in effective pomp and emphasis the Government sanction of the Exposition. As he tread to take his chair at the conclusion, the Diplomatic Corps rose and stood silent. He was seated. Then was the signal for more enthusiasm, cheering which continued until the inspiring "Hallelujah Chorus" silenced it.

Speech of Director Davis.

Then came the two greatest features of a great programme—the original ode by Henry Watterson and Chauncey M. Depew. Mr. Watterson sent his manuscript when Director General Davis announced his intention of making the front of the stand look his place before a thousand people and waiting and waving hats and handkerchiefs from the throng that had risen to greet him. Without hesitation, except when interrupted by applause, the speaker plunged into his subject. His earnest tones, the rich tones of his voice, the commanding personality of the man, the magnificent ode he read, did not catch his words. Rapidly he passed from point to point, the listening on to swan the progress of American from a condition of the lowest to one of the greatest solemnity. As he intoned the words of the ode, the 50,000 children sang "America" in the chorus and sent a flight of sunlight through the thunder and cloud that centered on the rugged figure of Henry Ward Beecher, a benediction had been concluded in answer to his plea. The crowd caught the sunshine and became as still as waiting for the benediction as the speaker's voice became solemn to the end of a prayer.

Depew's Address.

When Mr. Watterson reached the end of his programme and bowed toward his seat, there was an instant's pause, followed by a deafening shout that broke out again when chauncey Depew rose to his feet. The crowd caught the sun-shine in striking contrast to the sentiment of the ode, and its appreciation was spontaneous. Reading his speech, he was scarcely at a loss for the picture words. In moments of excitement he waved his arms vigorously, but never losing a word or abating for an instant the clear ringing tones of the striking phrases. His voice, forced to the volume of the occasion, rolled over the crowd and held it as with a spell. The speaker's voice was sustained instead, weight, by the stirring sentiments, spoke in forcefully and stood of elucidations of assent, just the crowd needed to hear.

In places the theme changed from Homeric grandeur to the pathetic, and moved the hearers to laughter, but it ended in a burst of feeling that was instant—light touch in a picture of Columbus.

When Mr. Depew had concluded, there was a pause, as he has to be brought. Prolonged cheering from the hundreds and they responded with reverberating shouts, a tribute such as no speech on orator could but feel deeply.

Dedicatory Ceremonies.

The great bell hung in a cavern of sorts above the Fair Building, and in elaborate warmed the tired people of the day. Hundreds were gathered in the galleries and colored by the individuals composing the programme of the day.

Mrs. Potter Palmer's address, "Work of the Board of Lady Managers," was enthusiastically received. She was introduced by Director General Davis and received with a standing salute, in which the distinguished Board of Lady Managers, and Mrs. Palmer, the President of the Board of Lady Managers, acknowledged the compliment by a bow and proceeded at once with her paper, looking down upon the waiting of handkerchiefs and smiling, expectant faces.

H. S. Bigelstaff, President of the Board of Lady Managers, made the address of the Columbian Exposition, and the President of the Columbian Commission. Mr. Bigelstaff was the author of the oratorical stand, lounged to the short, tense

AN HONEST MAN.

...ail is the kind of a Gov...nor John T. Rich is.

Ex-Governor Luce in the course of a speech at Bad Axe said: "Occasionally we hear people say that John T. Rich has been an officeseeker. This I either deny or affirm. It is possible but he has sought the office of supervisor of his township, and of representative and senator in the legislature and a seat in Congress, all of which positions he has occupied. Of this I know not, but I do know that he never sought by himself or through another, the position of railroad commissioner, and this is one of the most responsible offices he has ever held.

"When the people of this state had elected me to the high office of governor of the commonwealth I had but one single ambition, and that was to give to all of the people the best possible administration of affairs. This was only to be secured by the selection of the very best men to discharge the various duties devolving upon them, and the most important position to be filled by appointment from the governor was railroad commissioner. The law clothes him with extraordinary powers, and I wanted first of all things an honest man, and a man who would always possess the courage of his convictions. I wanted a man who would faithfully and bravely guard and protect the rights of shippers and of the people everywhere within the limit of authority conferred upon him by the law, no matter if it would a hundred times be considerate of the rights and interests of the men who run the trains, if the engineers who drive the iron horse out in the storm, through ravines and over bridges and into whose hands in keeping we trust our lives and our property. And in relation to his conduct in this regard I wanted a man who would be kind but firm. I wanted a man who would have a due regard for the rights of the men who own the roads. They have contributed to the development and prosperity of this commonwealth, and I did not want a man to hold that high office that would, among or needlessly interfere with their business and rights.

Wrinkled as Honest Man.

"For the purpose of securing a man who possessed all these varied qualifications, my mind went racing the state, canvassing the qualifications of many friends of the acquaintance I was proud, and every time that I would reach anything like a conclusion, the choice fell upon me in T. Rich. I knew him from the crown of his feet to the crown of his head, and know him to be a brave, honest man who discharged duties fearlessly and with a fidelity the worthy of emulation.

Did Not Solicit the Position.

"He did not ask for the position; I do not know that he thought of it, but I approached him to come to Lansing. I did him what kind of a man I wanted, or would go by saying, 'My opinion is, this are the man.' The position was accepted. I watched his course with solicitude, and say without solicitation that no man in this, or any other state ever discharged the complicated duties of railroad commissioner with greater wisdom and fidelity than he. He was as quick to respond to the call of the poor and unknown when complaint came to him as he was to the call of the rich or powerful. There was no point in the state so remote that when complaint came from shippers, farmers, or others, he did not reach it on the first train and investigate carefully the situation. And I believe on all occasions he used all the judgment and discretion he was master of in adjusting difficulties. If anyone suspected that a railroad bridge was weak either he or his assistant gave it immediate attention.

"I say this here tonight because a disposition is manifested in some quarters to make an effort to create prejudice. But, responsible as I am, solely and alone, for his appointment, I challenge the most careful scrutiny and searching investigation into every official act performed by him during the four years that he held the important position of railroad commissioner. He was faithful to the interests of the people in the kind to the men who run the trains he was honest and faithful to the corporations. There was nothing more to be demanded of him. He was faithful, and well, as he will in the executive chair, a position which he will occupy after the first day of January, 18..."

That Extra Session.

Judge Morse and other Democratic speakers have been telling the people that the cost of the extra session of the "squawback" legislature cost only $7,000. They know better. Here are the items of expense of that session, taken from the state records:

Mileage and attendance of members, clerks and sergeants	$6,19
Printing by the state printer at contract price, 1,000 copies	1,30
Printing the laws of the extra session in five hundred newspapers at $3	7,50
Printing the journals of the senate, congressional, judicial and railroad maps, ordered at extra session	2,56
Stationery for senate, etc.	[illegible]
Total	$17,641

That is quite near the truth as conservative statements regarding state judgs ever come.

Republicans, Awake!

A full Republican vote in Michigan this year is a matter of prime importance. It was the "stay-at-homes" that elected a Democratic state ticket last time and surrendered the state's interests into the hands of the "square backs." They must not stay at home this time. Every good Republican must not only get himself out, but give his neighbor no peace of mind if he shows any indication of shirking his duty. A few votes may determine the result in close localities. In legislative districts this is very apt to be the case and even in some congressional districts the Republican candidates need all the help they can get. The next legislature will elect a United States senator. He must be a Republican. The next legislature will be also, if Republicans, to remedy the manifest evils of square-back legislation and restore Michigan to the place of honor she occupied before lapsing into political "servitude." Keep this in view and turn out. The indications are good for a full vote, but no one should say, "There they will not need my vote." Do not sit down in the hope that some one else will perform the grand work of regeneration for you. It is a time of one errant." Take off the hand of the work when it is done and can then honestly claim a share in the honor. Republicans, OUR AND ALL THIS MEANS YOU.

Ellis' Impudence.

Attorney-General Ellis has got out a bull-dogging circular in his own behalf. If his law practice is characterized by the same kind of sophistry and misrepresentation, he is not fit for the high office of attorney-general. He claims credit for his personal attention to the duties of his office and great saving to the state thereby. He assumes to himself the credit that belongs to the people alone, and the people should resent his impudence. It will be remembered that the people raised his salary from $800 to $2,500. He can afford to stay in his office and attend to his duties. But in one of his numerous cases he was not live on the salary paid him. Every attorney general before him has kept his practice his profession outside of his office hours and duties. Furthermore the legislature passed a law making more liberal allowances for clerk hire than any other attorney-general ever had, and Ellis has had an assistant, a clerk and a typewriter to help him with a second type writer when occasion is in session, and he is the state. His claim of the credit for the reform the people made in his department is rank impudence and the people should rebuke it severely.

Morse Grows Frantic.

Judge Morse is now growing frantic in his denials that he did not call farmers "hay burners" and "hay devils." The occurrence of those words in the report of his speech printed in the leading daily Press cannot be denied. They are those in cold type. The editor and publisher of that paper is J. Maurice Finn, Democratic candidate for congress in the Twelfth district, who was present on the platform when Judge Morse used the language. This is not the only thing Judge Morse has to answer for in the present campaign. He has tried to use his army records and his G. A. R. membership as a whip to bring old soldiers into line with the party that hates them. He has himself refused hitherto to vote for congress as against civilians, but expects them to vote for him. He has used his judicial decisions as campaign dodges, thus implying that they are no better than the average political claptrap. He has made a record on the bench that while he clings to office which he declared was not political and which drawing his salary out of the state treasury. If all these things are consistent with the honorable character which his friends have always claimed for him, then the people will be called upon to reform their ideas of propriety.

Cower Says So.

In a recent interview, Gov. Flower, of New York, said of the McKinley tariff law:

"That was a dead issue in his district. Why, only a few dozen in Oswego are affected by the bill, and they are finding fault. You take my county, Jefferson. The farmers have been benefited by this measure, and they know it.

"The increased tariff has withdrawn the Canadian competition, and today they are getting better prices than in a good many years.

"It will be useless to bring any argument in our district that the McKinley bill does not benefit the farmers, for I know, and the facts bear it out. There is no one of a Democrat trying to get an office in that district on that issue, for it is a dead one."

Our Article Sentiment.

It may be of interest to the soldiers of this section to learn what the Democratic Glue club sang Monday night the following:

We need a few more verses yet,
To sing the praises of Grover,
Hold up a vile, rebel flag,
And let the Yankees shake over.

The sentiment was loudly applauded by the audience. How do the veterans like this? The Democratic blue club is cordially invited to the wigwam Wednesday evening to listen to more patriotic and loyal songs than the above.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

The Democrat papers are disposed to rejoice over the statement that two-thirds of the Republicans of Amherst college have declared for Cleveland, but they either forget or do not know that 90 per cent of the hundreds of students in that college, many of whom vote this year too, are pronounced Republicans.—Kalamazoo Telegraph.

It seems to be settled that Judge Morse will be the saloon keeper's candidate for governor. There must be some reason for this choice and it is the duty of every friend of temperance to look into the matter. The same principle of action applies to the Democratic and Republican candidate for attorney-general.

The Democrats are on the run in Michigan and the only certain way to punish them for their sins of the legislature, their infamous legislation and their disgrace of the state is to have them running. Let Republicans make their work thoroughly from now on.

The Democratic gang in the secretary of state's office who have been drawing pay for manufacturing campaign documents, turned out only by a Republican victory. Every cent paid them out of the public treasury is a steal. Put a stop to it.

When Comrade Shaffer asks for your votes for Commissioner of the Land Office against Comrade Berry, remember that Shaffer branded out of the office that crippled comrade, Merritt Lewis, to make room for his own family.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved.
From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hand, of Goshen, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold, which settled on my lungs, cougn set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my dear ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at U. G. Hines & Co's. Regular size, 50 cents and $1.00.

ALL FOR RICH NOW.

REPLY TO THE DEMOCRATIC CIRCULAR LETTER.

The Attempt to Use an Old Document for a Purpose Never Intended Has Resulted in the Sentiments Vigorously Repudiated by Many Old Veterans.

In 1884, John H. Palmer, of Lapeer City, formerly a Republican, but now a Democrat, wrote a circular letter and procured the signatures of eighty-three soldiers, protesting against the action of John F. Rich because he recommended the appointment of John Abbott instead of Stewart Gorton for postmaster at the City of Lapeer. There were 42 Democrats, 35 Republicans, and two Prohibitionists who signed the letter, 11 of whom have since died and 10 removed from the State. Many of the signers were not users of the office. This letter has recently been printed in circular form by the Lapeer County Democratic Committee, and is being circulated by them all over the State to induce Republican ex-soldiers to vote for Allen B. Morse for governor. We presume no harm will come from it, but in justice to Mr. Rich, and that the Republicans outside of Lapeer county may know how we feel toward him, we, the under signed, Republican ex-soldiers, who not signed said letter, being all the Republicans excepting two who signed the same now living and residing in Lapeer County, do hereby protest against the use of our letter to influence ex-soldiers to vote for Allen B. Morse, and in no way pledge ourselves to vote for John T. Rich, and recommend all Republican ex-soldiers to vote for him for governor, as in our opinion he best represents our sentiments.

Free Trade The Battle Cry.

The Democratic party in the states may rest assured that if English sympathy could carry Grover Cleveland in November the White House would be theirs. We shall watch the development of the struggle with the keenest interest, and if the triumph be not satisfactory to our cause it will be a reason for congratulation that one of the great Democratic states has made free trade pure and simple, the battle cry of the fellows in Liverpool (England) Journal of Commerce.

"We cannot match agin wine the Democratic gag and gammon, and we can match sobriety with sobriety. We can match logic but to less purpose."—Benjamin Harrison.

OFFICIAL BALLOTS.

HOW TO PREPARE THEM UNDER THE NEW LAW.

A Few Simple Rules Govern the Marking of Ballots—Straight Tickets and Straight Tickets and Split Tickets Illustrated.

The methods of voting under the new election law of this state is not difficult, when once the principle is understood. No electors will have to vote, if he will but exercise a little care. All the tickets regularly put in nomination will be printed side by side on one sheet of paper. This will be the official ballot, and it is the only one allowed to be voted. The voter will be given one of these official ballots by the inspector of election. The voter should see that the inspectors initials are not on the back of the ticket in one corner. The voter must take this official ballot with him alone into the booth. At the head of the Republican ticket he will find first a vignette or design, under that the word REPUBLICAN and under the latter a small open square, thus:

VIGNETTE REPUBLICAN

Let the voter make a cross in the little square and that is all that is required of him. That makes the official ballot a straight Republican ticket, counting one for each candidate on the Republican ticket.

If he wishes to vote a split ticket he can do it in the following manner: He wants to vote the Democratic ticket, but votes for the Republican candidate for governor. Then he marks the Democratic ticket thus:

VIGNETTE DEMOCRATIC
☐ ALLEN B. MORSE

This shows that, although he wishes to vote the Democratic ticket, he does not want to vote for Mr. Morse. He does nothing more, he does not vote for anyone for governor, but he votes for Mr. Rich, he must make a cross in the square before Rich's name, thus:

☒ JOHN T. RICH

This gives his vote to Mr. Rich. This marking can be done with a black lead pencil or the ink-stamp furnished by the inspectors of election. Remember that no other marks must be put by the voter upon the official ballot, except the crosses and the straight lines to cross names.

Bear these two rules in mind:

To vote a straight Republican ticket put a cross in the square at the head of the ticket and nothing else.

To vote a straight ticket, put a cross in the square at the head mark out the name of the Democratic candidate and then put a cross in the square before the Republican candidates.

To make the subject plainer a straight Republican ticket is here represented:

THE CHARLEVOIX SENTINEL.

CHARLEVOIX, - - MICHIGAN

MISS COZENS A CRANK,

HER FOOLISH UTTERANCES IN LONDON.

Wholesale Killing by Asphyxiation in Hyde Park—New Scheme to Treat the Bad—Lands Alight Unexpectedly—Sweeping Around French War Officers.

Times Use and Near.

—Miss Cissera Cozens, the female suffragist, speaking at a meeting of the Women's Emancipation Union in London, said that women should not go on talking until the crack of doom without getting redress for the injustices under which they suffer. The time had come for them to do something desperate. Women, she declared, had dynamite at their disposal. This statement was greeted with applause. Miss subsequently questioned as to whether she was serious in her reference to the use of dynamite, Miss Cozens replied that she was if other means failed.

—The Mexican relic has Gorgeous at Hyde Park, a Chicago suburb, is extremely likely to find herself in serious trouble. Within one week, six people have died of asphyxiation by the consumption of her product. The gruesome manifestation is so realistic that people think she have been Nelly burning gas. Miss this happens in a sleeping chamber the occupant is almost certain to die in the returning five will die unless with gas. That is the manner in which all six victims were killed. Their names are Curtis Goddard, John Hamann, Thos. Cole and Wm. A. B. Coffin and wife.

—Dalton Dazzle officials have just discovered a scheme whereby certain persons make considerable money by buying short distance tickets and conducting them to greater distances. The ticket is called the Lemon ticket on the stamp of which the names of all the principal cities are printed, and a notch cut in the margin indicates the station to which the fare has been paid. It is now thought it has been manufactured for some time and has caused the loss of many dollars. There is talk of prosecuting the guilty parties.

—Hundred Dollars reports a death from what is believed to be Asiatic cholera.

—The shortage of rain that has been felt locally during the entire season in West is a serious drawback to the grain trade of Minneapolis. The wheat is piling up in the elevators at every line of industry in the city, and the critical feeling the disadvantage of the accumulation of four-cent wheat is felt.

—A sensation was created on the peaceful Little Rock, Ark., when a rattlesnake was seen crawl. Mayor Fletcher had decapitated it. It measured, the chief of police. It is said that a number of irregularities in the accounts of the comptroller and chief of police have been discovered.

CRIME AND CASUALTY.

—Louis Nee, aged 21 years, an engineer of the Electric Light Company, Toledo, O., Leonia, has told the police a story that reads like a criminal romance of the highest kind. He says that last December he was working for William Pattersonson, a Polish jew dealer, and slept in the loft over the stable. One morning a few days before Christmas he was awakened by loud talking, and looking through a crack in the board partition he saw the employer and a well-dressed stranger talking. They came up stairs. The Jew Gabel showed the stranger the loft and money and he showed several bundles of bills and a few the bag of gold coin. The dealer went out and got some beer, and the two drank it. The stranger became interested, and the Jew dealer, according to Nee's story, grasped his hair, pulled his head back, and cut his throat. The police at first did not believe the story, but investigation proved positively that the Jew dealer had accepted the issue described by the lad that he had left the city about the time stated, and had somebody else in possession of money, as he had purchased a farm. The chief sent for Detectives Bonds to the city, without saying what he wanted for. The man replied "If want to do, I have not killed anybody." A warrant was then issued and the Jew was arrested.

—Three more lives have been sacrificed in the cause of science. The Ward Line steamer Ville Havre, bound for Havre, has been in collision with the Norwegian bark Ingrid, which was so badly damaged that she was abandoned. Her crew were taken off by the steamer. The Ingrid was bound from Sydney, C. B., for Rouen, with a cargo of coal. The crew numbered twenty-three men, and it is feared that they have been killed, as no tidings of them have been received since the collision, which occurred on Tuesday morning.

—Two Italians were killed and two others badly injured by a blast near Ishpeming, Mich., Tuesday afternoon. The men had drilled a hole in a boulder and were about to place a charge of dynamite in it when the stone exploded, killing two and injuring the others. The men were Frank Tollivar, married, leaves a family; Frank Tollivar married the widow of one of the Italians killed in the mine last spring. The other Italian, John Sheridan, being one of them. The relief fund formed from this contribution, amounts now to $1,000.

—At some places around Port Huron, Mich., it is actively discussed to provide tanks of the locomotives, to prevent the people from carrying 2 lbs water. He likewise stated that on one of the 40 blocks of the Lehigh Valley Railroad the water to supply the locomotives is transported for a distance of 7 miles. Reading is one of the few cities in the Schuylkill Valley where water supply has not been affected by the drought, owing to the drought possible few have broken out at several places.

—At the closing session of the Presbyterian synod at Albany, when the Rings Theological Seminary, located at Hamilton Beecher, of Auburn Seminary, offered this substitute for both the minority and majority reports. "In the matter of the case from the presbytery of Buffalo, we plead to be in order but recommend that the synod dismiss the case, through the action of the General Assembly and of the Presbytery of New York, is again before the Presbytery, and the confirmation will have their recently to their own hands." Dr. Hamilton said he would not be unwilling to accept the substitute if it were offered. Dr. Beecher said he would be willing to accept the substitute if it were offered. Dr. Beecher's substitute was accepted by a vote of 115 to 1, and the resolutions as then adopted as the report of the committee.

—There is great excitement in Oshkosh over the loss of the Bank. The sudden and remarkable cause reported to have just been discovered in persons who have been working at the entire necessity set up here with capital of $50,000. Anna Hughes, aged 14 years, who had been crippled since youth, and thinks away for months and walks as well as anyone. A Mrs. Rent, for years a cripple, has been cured after the doctors gave her up.

—At Gladson, Texas, in the Federal Court the jury in the breach of promise suit for $25,000, brought by Miss Mary Fox, Peale, of Cincinnati, against Dr. J. A. Gibbins of Texas, returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $15,000. A new trial was granted on the ground that the verdict was excessive.

—The Supreme Court of South Dakota Monroe for the Southern Dakotaites voted to the prior session 1891 at St. Louis.

—In interview with leading businessmen of the Omaha, Neb., valley they expressed themselves as opposed to the imposition of the proposed tax on bank checks. The feeling was that it would have more to fell you, Mr. Harrison." Mr. Harrison said he would be willing to accept the tax, and he asked why the people of the Omaha valley were so opposed to it. The reply was that it would be a tax on the poor. The people are not used to paying taxes and may be scared. The population of the village are in a panic at the excitement at the possibility of the loss of every dollar in the bank. Cashier, editor, and are making every effort to prevent the disaster.

—Pugilist Jim Corbett has been arrested at Cincinnati for participating in a Sunday prize fight at Newport.

FINANCIAL AND INDUSTRIAL

—The strike on the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad is off and all trains are running on time.

—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, who has been in conference with the officials of the Knights of Labor for several days past, left Pittsburg for Philadelphia. Before leaving he said he expected that he would recommend to the Federation that a boycott be instituted on all Carnegie Steel Company products throughout the country. He said he would resort either to commercial orders or to the collection of strength's carrying by all employed Federation members. He said the Federation would be ready to begin the boycott on Monday.

—Thomas Lynch, a member of the McCoy faction of the famous Hatfield-McCoy feud, was shot and killed near Pikeville, Ky., and sentenced to the penitentiary for life.

—Robert E. Wilson, one of Buffalo's distinguished lawyers, died after an illness extending over several weeks. He was 70 years of age. Left a family.

—Rev. Dr. Thomas Chase, of Brown University, Providence, R. I., has resigned the presidency of the Rhode Island Industrial Conference, view F. A. Walker, who was compelled to resign.

—A permanent exposition of Brooklyn's commercial interests will be made, Mr. Fatally injured Michael Bacciglio, a laborer for the Ingersoll Sergeant Rock Drill Company, died at Phillipsburg, N. J., Tuesday morning. Dr. Thomas McIntyre, Surgeon-General of the Marine Hospital Service, died of paralysis.

—Ex-Senator Dorsey, of Arkansas, has been appointed Commissioner of Pensions, vice Tanner, resigned

A Word About the Speech of Judge Morse.

To the Editor

"Disappointment lurks in every prize." So wrote the poet, and so realized the people who assembled at the opera house on the evening of the 19th inst. They went expecting to hear an able and fair statement of the issues involved in the present campaign, but instead, they were treated to a rehash of statements made long ago by our former political cigar maker, Phillips, with the trifling addition of a weak reference to the tariff.

He painted the woes of the farmer and the laborer in the reddest of crimson. He belabored Alexander Hamilton until that poor man must have turned over in his grave, and thought—"rats!" He called old John Adams an aristocrat because he was driven in a coach-and-four to his inauguration, and he thanked God that we have had no more Presidents like him. He praised Thomas Jefferson because he wrote the Declaration of Independence, and had hitched his single horse to the gate-post to be inaugurated "the only real president we have ever had till we elected Cleveland."

He had no word of praise for any of the other presidents, unless by inference, when he expressed the hope that the government might be restored to what it was when Democracy had control. That would seem to reflect a little credit on Buchanan, of blessed memory. He even passed over the wonderful achievements of the great and only squawk-lock legislature of our own State, some of the acts of which he, as a Justice of the Supreme Court, helped to review.

He held the system of protection responsible for every riot and strike that has taken place in the last thirty years. In fact, from his standpoint, protection is the sum of all villainies! On account of the troops had recently been called out in several states. That being so near the truth as any statement he made, let us look into it. The miners of Tennessee revolted because a Democratic legislature persisted in requiring them to work with the convicts. They were put down by democratic bullets and bayonets, and must now either work with convicts or go idle. The railroad switchmen at Buffalo struck for fewer hours and more pay, and troops were sent there by a democratic governor. The people on Fire Island revolted against the landing of passengers from cholera infected ships. The same governor suppressed the rebels with his soldiers. The union men in the mines of the far west attempted to drive out "scab" labor with force of arms, and troops were sent to keep the peace. The workmen of Homestead struck on account of a trifling reduction in the wages of some of the more skilled of their number, who were getting from $5 to $6 per day, and a change of the time for beginning the labor year. Here again a democratic governor ordered out troops, and the Homesteaders lost the strike. The nonpartisan Senate committee, in its report on this case, differs with Judge Morse.

Perhaps, after all, protection is at fault; for had we only tariff for revenue, there would have been no Homestead. The speaker told us of the manufacturers of the East appearing before the committee on ways and means and asking to have the tariff taken off wool. But he did not tell us that Bill Springer, the chairman of that Democratic committee at once reported a bill embodying their wishes. It proposed to take the tariff off wool, but to retain it on woolen goods. A democratic blow aimed at that "privileged class!"

The Judge told us that the tariff on woolens discriminated against the common people in favor of the rich. Let us see. The duty on woolens is based on the price of unwashed wools. Thus: If a pound of unwashed wool is valued at 30 cents, the duty imposed by the McKinley act on woolen goods shall be three times the duty imposed on a pound of unwashed wool, and in addition, 40 per cent ad valorem. If valued at more than 30 and less than 40 cents per pound, the duty shall be three and one half times more than the duty on one pound of unwashed wool, and 40 per cent ad valorem added. And so on. Thus we see, as the value of the goods increases per pound, the duty increases also. He must have had the Mills bill in his mind.

He told us that the protective system was selfish and mean. If it is selfish for a prosperous, industrious farmer to fence his crops from the inroads of his neighbor's cattle then it is also selfish for a great Nation to protect its rights and the rights of its citizens from the inroads of foreign nations. The position of England on this question is because of her absolute need of our bread and raw material. She does not think her position with reference to this country is best for her colonies; so, in order that they may prosper, she selfishly pays to the selfish and mean colonies a duty on the goods she imports to her own colonial subjects.

The distinguished Judge had no use for a government that would by tariff protect the interests of its laborers, farmers and manufacturers, and asked what the Republican party had ever done for the farmer. The answer is easy. It gave free farms to thousands, against the protests of the Democratic party. It took the embargo off their meats that the French and Germans had imposed. It opened a free market with many of our neighboring nations for our farm products. And yet he longed for the good old days of Democracy, when in times of profound peace this government was forced into the markets of the world to borrow money at a high rate of interest to pay its running expenses.

Norwood Notes.

After an absence of four years Perrene Ann is again on deck, and will edit the Norwood notes as long as long as the proprietor of the paper and Psyche can agree.

Any one having anything unusual befall them, and wish the same to be made public through the columns of the Sentinel, can have their desire gratified by reporting their case to us at our office in Norwood.

This is our salutatory!

George H. Van Pelt is with us once more and will remain long enough to cast his vote for the ——— man who won't be elected.

Mrs. Van Pelt and daughter Naomie have gone to Florida to spend the winter and will not return until May or June next.

Art Meech will move to Ellsworth sometime this week and will work for G. V. Nash selling Sign.

Mrs. Levi Stafford died on Friday. Funeral service was held at the church on Sunday and was largely attended.

E. L. Stafford has been at Charlevoix for the past ten days moving buildings. Only give Ed half a decent good men and full swing and he would move and attach the village of Charlevoix to Norwood before you know it.

The new ballot box for Norwood has arrived. It is one of sixteen bought for use in this county at the present election. After election if I can make satisfactory arrangements with the town board I am going to rent one for a patent churn or ice cream freezer.

The apple buyers have finished gathering apples and gone. Over 5,000 barrels of apples, about 1,000 barrels of pears and crab apples together with a large quantity of plums have been shipped from Norwood this fall, and the barrels were all made here to send them in. About $15,000 was paid for the fruit shipped. Owing to the blightedness of fruit this fall there will likely be many new lines set next spring and those having good locations and ground can hardly go amiss in planting them.

Candidates for county offices have not been very thick in this part of the county and the boys have rather suffered in this respect for office. However the minority was broken the latter part of last week by Mr. Tillitson, of Hayes, and the irrepressible Ash Horton, candidate for Sheriff on the democratic ticket. On Saturday evening Fred Mayne put in his appearance. Now the chances are three those will be elected and the others will be left out in the cold cold world.

PERRENE ANN.

IT'S GROVER.

Cleveland Elected President of the United States.

New York and Illinois Did the Work.

Grover Cleveland is elected President of the United States. New York and Illinois went Democratic by small majorities, and they did the work. As we go to press the returns are unsagre owing to overcrowded wires.

MICHIGAN.

The Republicans have elected Rich Governor by 10000 majority, and elected Congressmen and electors in the 5th, 4th, 6th, 8th, 9th, 11th and 12th; the Democrats carried the 1st, 3th, 7th, with the 10th in doubt.

Means is elected Senator and Bagot Representative by good majorities.

CHARLEVOIX COUNTY.

Here is where we holler! Charlevoix county, on the National and State ticket, gives 339 plurality. In 1890 it was 155. Every man on the Republican county ticket is elected by good majorities, thanks to Chairman Coulter's good work and Chairman Crouter's type-writer.

Charlevoix county has never before in its history elected a full Republican ticket. The Populist vote was 7.9.

Means carried the county by 349 and Bagot by 155 plurality. The pluralities on the county ticket are as follows: Kerns, 442; Stroud, 332; Ward, 287; Hipp, 261; Myers, 217; Field, 208; Mayne, 117.

CHARLEVOIX TOWNSHIP.

Charlevoix township, with the click of the type-writer a fresh and recent memory, with a total vote of 595, beats its best record and gave a Republican majority of 98. In the hour of sorrow the Republican vote of Charlevoix and Charlevoix county is a solace like unto the Balm of Gilead. The type-writer, like the bicycle, is one of the greatest inventions of the age.

C. L. S. C.

The C. L. S. C. will give a Special Union Vesper Service in the congregational church, Sunday evening Nov. 13, 1892. Program as follows: Hymn, Solo—Mrs. Florence Sherwood. Quartette—W. A. Smith, Mrs. Estelle King, Miss Kate Smith and Rev. W. H. Macpherson. Remarks—Mrs. Lamb. Duett—Mrs. Estelle King and W. A. Smith. Solo—Miss Winnifred Bartholomew. Vesper Service, led by Rev. Englis, and prayer by Rev. Hagans. Duett—Mrs. Estelle King and Rev. W. H. Macpherson. Address—Superintendent Elsas. Quartette—W. A. Smith, Mrs. Estelle King, Miss Kate Smith, Rev. W. H. Macpherson. Benediction—Rev. W. H. Macpherson.

The Chautauqua Circle will met with Miss Edith Hawkins, Friday evening, Nov. 18. Program as follows: Devotional—Mrs. L. M. Kalnagy. Chautauqua song. First twenty questions in Grecian History. Ten questions—Cities of Greece. Recitation—Miss Pearl Durff. First fifteen questions on U. S. History and Foreign Powers. Ten questions on Practical Science. Topic on Spiders—Miss Ella Carr. Questions on Required Reading by President. Roll call response. Selection from favorite Authors.

Hastings from Hayes.

There are 191 registered voters in Hayes and we know six voters who failed to register.

The Bay Shore Sunday School has purchased an organ.

Wm. Dunn and family were visiting at Geo. Van Settelins Sunday.

John Bilbo and family were the guests of Christian Yohr the first of the week.

Leroy Hamlin has purchased a beehive outfit and will start deer hunting immediately.

There were 105 trees fell across the railroad fence on the Bay Shore division, during the late storm.

THE GALLED JADE WINCES

Last week we published a circular letter, one of a number sent out by the chairman of the Democratic county committee. We published it because it contained a false statement concerning a candidate upon the Republican ticket. Had we failed to do so we would have been recreant to duty as a Republican journalist.

The circular letter was given to us by a citizen. The address of the individual to whom it seemed to have been originally sent had previously been torn out. It was put in type Saturday. On Tuesday Mr. Cameron entered our office and claimed the circular, which, in the absence of anything to prove ownership, we declined to surrender.

After the Sentinel appeared everything grew lurid. The atmosphere around Democrat headquarters became heavy with the odors of brimstone and bichloride of razzle-dazzle. The wild geese in their flight southward swerved to the westward over Lake Michigan before they reached Mount Mackinaw. The "literary bureau" for the moment ceased its activity, and the licking of postage stamps was temporarily postponed.

On the wings of the wind came reports of impending arrest for larceny, possession of stolen property, etc. Indeed, every time the door latch was raised we expected to see the Sheriff. But we are yet out of the calabooze.

The Democrat of last Saturday breathed upon by the Harrity of the local democracy, denounces the editor of this paper as "no better than a thief!" We have no fear of the charge, coming from the source it does, taking root in the public mind, and will only say in reply that when Mr. Cameron, or any other man, says that the editor of this paper has, or ever had, in his possession, knowingly, any letter or circular belonging to the aforesaid Mr. Cameron, he tells a deliberate falsehood! We have never for one instant had in our possession any letter or circular bearing Mr. Cameron's name.

If the document in the circular concerning Mr. Bagot had been true the Democrat would not have been big enough to contain it; but because it was a lie, it was sneaked out of the "literary bureau" in sealed envelopes to such of the faithful as could be trusted to use it "judiciously." "What was it Pilatus said to the Greek Lexicoder?—That where the lion's skin fell short, he eked it out with the fox's." It was very foxy.

The editor of this paper is characterized as no better than a thief. For the whole precious gang, from the bewhiskered chief of the county Democracy, and the begoggled sharpsee who imagines he adds brains and respectability to the crowd, down through the line of fawning sycophants and blatant swashbucklers who crawl around the foot of the throne and do the royal bidding, to the sneak who yet avows his allegiance to the union jack, and who says he would not have a Republican in his employ, we express our most cordial contempt.

Make good some of your threats, gentlemen, or crawl into your holes.

—Mrs. Geo. H. Van Pelt and children, of Norwood will spend the winter in Florida.

—The steamer Friant arrived from Chicago Saturday, and proceeded to Harbor Springs to lay up. She will be overhauled some this winter for the World's Fair trade.

—The big white canal boat went out Friday in an effort to tow up the shore, and came back with one side of her deck house knocked in. She went into Charlevoix yard Saturday for repairs to her hull.

—The potato market is opening active with Chicago buyers and their agents here loaded with sacks and horse. Prices range from forty-five to fifty cents per bushel. Movements are getting lively, and steamboats are loaded every trip with tubers from this and other points on the route. Farmers are fortunate in having good crops, good stock and good prices. The potato crop this year makes the grangers happy all winter.

THE MODEL HUSBAND.

Most wives will end their story with:
"Oh well, what can a poor woman do?"
Hang to her chains!

A Lady happy woman.

Through all the sunshine lighted years,
Lived one in unshaken peace,
My husband's word thought never vain,
Yet caused a sad reflection.

Whatever the business of the day,
Pleasure, care, toil, or what it may,
To bear his part, the larger half—
I always find him ready.

Hopeless-looking sources brings us brown
Ever ready to relieve our pain,
Ever with cheerful smile and kind deed
He makes life very sunshiny.

Our evening pair is always sweet,
Of quiet contemplation,
We never change our pleasant seat
To "keep up conversation."

Our years of sojourn from Fair moonlight of September,
Always with me have been happy,
Active, pitiless thoughts.

Each seems to say she is even
Some new grace to endow,
Fitting her companion for 1884,
I will say praise God!

Fly like an arrow hard through us
How sweeter this blessed life
My husband! 19; a friend in his Life I am sheltered fully.

LORD ANGUS.

The dog show had been a great success. Everybody who could pay the great hall sale so, and the President of the American Kennel Association watched the great crowd of people the last day with great satisfaction.

All around the hall were ranged the reputable benches divided into compartments, and in these compartments sleek, resting dogs from strays, were dogs and dags. They all looked as clean and healthy and happy that the spectators could hardly keep from patting each one.

But the most attention was given to a dance or so, great rough-coated St. Bernards who lay on their straw with well-bred indifference and scarcely acknowledged the admiring crowd. The largest crowd of all centers were gathered around a compartment which was marked with a large square board at the back, "Lord Angus, A. K. C. S. B. 1471." On one corner of the board was tacked a narrow blue ribbon.

In this compartment itself was seated a great, dignified St. Bernard, whose eyes sometimes wandered over the ground of spectators, but for the most part fixed themselves on the figure of a small boy who sat beside him on the straw, his legs hanging over the bench and one hand resting on the dog's broad back.

The boy stared at the bestatamed with complete self-possession. He was a dirty poorly-clothed little boy, but he seemed to have the utmost regard of all his surroundings, except the dog. The latter seemed jealous, and every now and then tugged a little at his chain, but at a word from the boy he would lie down, turn his head quickly and cover the boy's face with his caresses. The latter did not object to the unusually unwelcome attention.

"I know, Lord Angus," said the boy finally, "it's about time for me to take our exercise. Probably Peter may be onnice now enough. Anyhow you see Peter now, Lord Angus, you don't want to lark at your chain the way you did yesterday morning. 'Cause then Peter it say to me, 'No, sonny boy, you ain't big enough to hold Lord Angus this morning. He's got away from you. Then we can't go out together.' Why, see?

Lord Angus at this evidently appreciated better the value of self-control, for his tongue came out just in his short sleeve, he was gentle as any young lamb. And I guess you could give him his walk, Johnny.

"Yes, sir," said Johnny, and spilled with flattering deference, "like the same as you told me yesterday, sir." Here mother his hat and put the cap and the boy started off, Lord Angus wagging his hanging tail with suppressed importance.

Johnny had a leading chain, but for that matter he and Lord Angus seemed to the directing of their walk, when Lord Angus wished to greet his fellow-dog, or to pick a grasshopper up from the sidewalk and crush it with his big jaws, or to pick a dandelion for his button-hole, Johnny never hindered. He—except in yesterday when he forgot himself almost of his feet, running behind, for he never let go the chain. But for other mishaps Lord Angus always spoke great as soon as he found what had happened through his ill-judged haste, and he seem than he would be very considerate. When Johnny on his part, wished to go somewhere in particular, he would put his arm round Lord Angus's white neck and turn him.

It was a sot such a pleasing walk as usual. Every time they met afternoon, Peter had told him that Lord Angus's owner was coming out that afternoon and he didn't know just what would become of Lord Angus. At any rate Johnny thought, he wouldn't see Lord Angus any more. And though he was just as careful as ever of Lord Angus's whole, the latter shared his depression. After the half hour's exercise was over, however, Johnny had arrived at his mother's door and the two returned to Lord Angus's place in good spirits.

There was the usual crowd about Lord Angus's compartment, and Johnny pushed scarcely through. Lord Angus jumped quietly into his place, and Johnny snapped a heavy chain at his collar. Then the boy sat down beside him in the straw, some more dangled his small legs and stared quietly one or two of the weaker unbelief spectators out of countenance; but the thought would come when was to become of Lord Angus when his owner came. He what the staring people would leave Lord Angus and live alone.

But here one of them, a woman, took the opportunity of asking the very little boy a seemingly harmless question.

The little boy looked up at her fiercely. "Is Lord Angus a pure-blooded St. Bernard?" he asked with witherlike reiteration. "He he? Ah! do you think they'd have gotte the first prize here to any Else? Nick. Do you see these ribbons? marchings to be added, kicking the bench with his heels and swing the standard woman with one outstretched arm and right, flirty forefinger. The earthlings all gave white, on his forehead (see 3ft up your head, Lord Angus) and a white collar round his neck, and on its breast, and on every end of its tail. Then all the end of line is orange. There's signs of a pedigree, I tell you. Look at the high legs and the hangin' of his ears, and he weighs more than Hitts. Say, Peter," he called, sharply, "this here lady wants to know is Lord Angus pure-bredd."

But the woman had gone.

"Say, Peter," said the boy deferentially, when there was a cessation in the crowd of sympathetic the Crowd the hour drew near, "seems it down Lord Angus? He, mean he might rich and likes dogs."

Peter looked doubtfully at the boy for a moment, but the man was naturally very character. "Well, he said, "I guess he's got plenty of money that he was bin to Europe and Lord Angus's pedigree. Yes, I guess he wants here much more than. There isn't that the a spot nowon half his mind, and he's got the collar a couple of years ago. But, what I say is that he's gotte a lot of power for Lord Angus here. Why he never came out to the Kennels when I had Angus was sick, from the underkeeper, it's setting him out on the straw, and cages by mistake. Not a veterinary. Now, he ain't no owner for a dog like Lord Angus."

The last footman eagerly

"I don't wonder at it, sir, Lord Angus ought to be was dead or gone, pick up."

"Now, indeed," answered Peter, unsuspicious, "I don't know, I'm sure I care that. He'd ought to be comin' pretty soon, I'm sure. Lord Angus's young man," he continued remonstrative, "I don't know, I'm sure, more than he's said to me. Lord Angus's owner, he's there and he's there, and he's there wants to. He don't care for himself or anything else. But, Well, I've been talkin' too much already. I got to go home to my dinner. Lord Angus's owner can be there for aught I know, I don't care. I'm sure I'm sorry I ever let Lord Angus out the last time."

As soon as Peter had walked to the other side of the Kennels he turned to the footman and looked quickly around. The crowd was marching Keepers were hurrying here and there with their charges, the small dogs were being loosed and the larger ones were being put on their chains. Silence in the spike hair of the dog's neck, and the Lord Angus's owner wagged his tail. In a moment Johnny stood his hand on Lord Angus's head, curious and free with me." I can work selling and I'm sure I can work for you if you want. Say, Lord Angus, will you do that?" Lord Angus, will you do that? Lord Angus rubbed his head and licked away the tears that were in his eyes, then tugged at his chain.

The footman and Sarah's sweetheart sing softly through the whispering hall toward the sidewalk.

"Well, sir," said a young man, whose voice was the same as that engaged on the Wednesday morning, Lord Angus' collar, entered with another man as you know, to look at the face of Lord Angus's owner as he stood in a small slip of paper. This he gave to the dog. "There, boy, go on now with your bear cause him until to get tired or he displeases you, then turn him over, sell him—anyway, go off now. I'm tired of waiting."

Johnny rattled the piece of paper and would have gone, but the man who had come with the owner stopped him.

"Good heavens, man," he was saying, "you can't mean to give this dog! I was to buy this traveling-man's dog! The fine owner had a tired look on his pale, hopeless face as he replied, "I can't mean to give this dog, however, "I'm sorry, Johnson, but I've got to bring to the boy now. Don't look at me that way, Johnson, I'm sorry I let the boy keep his dog. And I find it hard sometimes to find something interesting. Good-by, Johnny."

"Good-by, sir, I'm very much obliged," cried Johnny, eagerly.

"Good-by, Lord Angus," and I think I will take my name off the dog," he said. "All the better for an honest dog like Lord Angus not to carry Peter's name around, Johnny," he added slightly to the footman, who had been standing with his mouth open and staring and prying it off the collar.

The footman snatched him hold the bright silver strip in his hand.

"That's a good name, Johnson, for a man to be born with, or rather it was." he said in a low, indifferent tone. "Johnson, when I was left, the only son to carry the family name, this is the way it is to be buryed—and the coverings right stone carved the polished metal in his out-stretched hand to glosen and sparkle. Strange thing to his quiet tones made Johnny watch his face curiously. It grew a little pale, and he said, "I'm sorry what I have done with it," he said sadly. "The same plate fell from his fingers to the floor and broke. Take the lot of box lost pressed it down, and nothing and marring the skin much. "Never mind, Johnson," Johnny thought an instant longer, "I'm sure Well soon forget size and about the Lord Angus's owner." and he ran off to the dog arming. Let's not waste time."

When the were gone Johnny knelt down a minute and put his arm over the dirty floor. He did not notice the silver dollar that Johnny had dropped toward him. He wipe and rubbed the tarnished metal on his sleeve and then put it carefully in his breast pocket.

"Lord Angus," he said, "be and stand up. Close to home. — Robert T. Pierce, in the Harvard Advocate.

Famous Hunters.

In Signor Gesali's "Seven Years in Sunbeam, the author describes "the northern part of Kamaas to the Victoria Nyanza." They were in the habit of killing the buffalo, the rhinoceros, and the leopard, the three most dangerous of the country—with an emotion than a European would experience in shooting rabbits. They were often sent for from different parts of the country to kill some lion which was doing great injury of their elephant hunting the animal

In all the villages the brothers found an enthusiastic welcome from people knowing that wherever they were great was sure to follow. The men were strong-limbed and of unusual stature.

When an elephant rushed upon them they calmly awaited him, and at the last moment, leaped to one side. The elephant, not being able to stop himself, would turn round, and the brothers, and the other plunged a lance into his side. The animal would circled the first man and fell upon the man who had wounded him, and at that instant the other cut the tendons of the hind legs, stopping the elephant at once to the ground.

One day, however, one of the brothers was near falling a victim to his boldness. He attacked an elephant alone in the usual way, but stumbled and fell. He rose directly, but the elephant had already seized him in his trunk, and hurled him to a distance of fifteen feet. Fortunately he fell in the middle of a thick bush, and escaped with some scratches and bruises.

His friends laughed at the accident, and the next day he said:

"I would rather eat my wife several times than undergo that fall."

He set out again, refusing the company of his brother. Late in the evening he returned and called the whole family together.

"Come," he said, "bring me bring me a hook, and take as much meat for yourselves as you like."

All the population followed him. He had killed nine huge elephants.

Telegraphic Code.

The Little sometimes makes a good telegraph code. Thus, recently, the editor of the Christian Register, failing to send his proof to his son in a letter of congratulation to the Lowell Institute in regard to the lecture, sent a telegram for caution as follows: "Thirty—comma—dash (John, 1-2-4," which, being interpreted, read as follows: "I had many things to write, but I will not with ink and pen write unto thee; but I trust I shall shortly see thee, and we shall speak face to face. Peace be to thee. Our friends salute thee. Greet the friends by name."

He Changed His Views.

Are you "for the Union, but to that big Chicago Convention?"

"Not exactly, sir, I suppose you know I'm a Democrat."

Yes, I know that. I heard that you were a Democrat, and I thought you might be a Republican."

"Well, I'm a Democrat, and I'm for the Union, but I don't know that I'm for the Chicago Convention."

"Why, what's the matter? Don't you like the platform? Don't you like the nominations?"

"Well, I don't know about the platform. I don't know about the nominations. I don't know about the Chicago Convention. I don't know about anything."

"Why, what's the matter? Don't you like the Union?"

"Yes, I like the Union well enough, but I don't know about the Chicago Convention."

ZINC IN ARCHITECTURE.

A Successful Method for Copper-Plating Zinc.

Copper-plating zinc for building purposes has recently been tried abroad with considerable success. The process being especially recommended where mechanical wear takes place. Zinc also weathers very well with the copper. The galvanic method of copper-plating is advantageously used, but this may also be coated with copper by ordinary means.

In the first place, the sheet zinc is cleaned with soda from any adhering dirt or grease, and is also purified by a weak acid bath from the covering of zinc oxide. There are then dissolved in twenty-four parts of water one part of refined verdigris and twelve parts of tartar, the mixture being heated to boiling point after which three to four parts of Spanish white are added. The Spanish white, when decomposed, and is precipitated as lime tartrate. The dark blue liquid is poured off and filtered, and can be used either as a bath for the sheet zinc, or for the production of a copper-plating paste.

The first mode of action is the more recommendatory as the fluid forces its way into the corners and angles of the zinc articles and is uniformly distributed all over.

If it be desired to cut an ismoverable zinc object with copper, the article, after being cleaned, is painted with the copper solution and chalk compound, and after drying, brunished. This very simple operation would likewise prove of value for architectural purposes where it is desired to remedy the generally unpleasant effect of zinc adornments.

BEAUTIFUL EYES.

Obtained at the Expense of Health and Eyesight.

Methods for beautifying the eyes have long been in vogue among women of fashion, and not a few resort to those which ultimately injure the organs and the general health. Atropine is a most common drug for making the eyes look large and lustrous, but the continued use of it so weakens and paralyzes the muscles that weak eyes come on early in life.

An eminent oculist claims that the wide-spread disease of weak eyes among women is largely due to the tampering with these organs for making them more beautiful than nature intended. The extremes to which some will go in the matter is illustrated by an English woman who was arrested in the streets of London for drunkenness. It was found later on that she was simply suffering from the toxic effects of atropine, which she rubbed into the eyes to dilate the pupils for a more brilliant appearance.

She was determined to be beautiful, and to accomplish the purpose she ran the risk of injuring her eyes for a lifetime. A late fad among women of our cities is to darken the under eyelids with paint to give a more attractive appearance to the eye. This paint is often made up of injurious principles, which in time make the flesh around the eyes old and wrinkled. It becomes puffed, and the paint becomes partial all of the time. The simplest thing, if one will darken the eyes, is to use ordinary lead pencil.

The Honors of Houston.

There are so many Honsers in Houston county, Georgia, that it a candidate can get the family to vote for him he is generally sure of election. Use of the old residents was asked about recently.

"Well," said he, "there are so many Honsers in Houston that I can't keep track of them. When one of the family runs for an office, if he can get his relatives to vote for him, he's all right. There are just 742 in the county."

"All of one family?"

"All of one family, and the old grandfather of them all is alive yet."

In meeting new acquaintances in Houston is a good policy to say your nice words about the family, for you may be addressing a nephew, a cousin, a brother-law, or some kind of relative of the family. The fact of it is that the, are all well-to-do, industrious, law-abiding citizens, always ready to hold up their end of the rope in any enterprise. But candidates are particular to addressing them.

Gallant Hungarian Soldiers.

Three died recently in Hungary two ladies served in the 1848 in the revolutionary army, and fought in several of the fiercest battles dressed in military uniform. One of them was several times promoted, and under the name of Karl attained the rank of first lieutenant of hussars. At this point, however, an artillery major stopped her military career by marrying her. The other fought under the name of Josef, and was decorated for valor in the field. She married long after the campaign. A Hungarian paper referring to the two cases, says that about a dozen women fought in 1848 in the insurrectionary ranks.

Hey Last Thought.

A Springfield gentleman tells of a terrible railroad accident he was in some time ago, on his way home from the West. He escaped with only a few bruises and immediately joined the force of men who were doing their utmost to rescue the victims. The sleeper was on fire, and the scenes there were terrible. After a hard struggle they managed to drag one old lady through a window. She was terribly hurt, but she had just breath enough in writhings to her deliverers that her daughter Hivley lived in a little Vermont town, and she wanted them to be sure that Hivley had the new switch sent her, which she hadn't seen but a couple of weeks. Being Hivley's own lady, twas a perfect match, and she'd probably want to wear it. And even in a few minutes the careful old soul passed away.

Time Enough.

In the old days of dangerous warfare caution was not regarded as so much a virtue on the part of a military commander as it is at present. In a battle between the French and Austrians, in which Marshal Bugeaud commanded the French forces, an officer of the staff said to the marshal: "The enemy are advancing. Shall I send a party to reconnoitre and see how numerous they are?" "No," said Bugeaud, "we'll count 'em after we've beaten 'em."

PREMONITION FULFILLED.

Engineer McKenney Recalls That 19-World Hit.

Martin McKenney, engineer in charge of the locomotive used in the transportation of supplies and material and men from Brooklyn, the first of the Brooklyn Bridge, Philadelphia, met with a fatal accident lately while in the performance of his duty. The locomotive machinery was not working satisfactorily and he stepped down his cab to the footplate on the tender to make an examination. The locomotive was going at a fearful rate, and in rounding a curve McKenney lost his balance and was thrown on the track between the cab and the tender. Four trucks attached to the locomotive passed over his body, and when picked up he was a bruised and bruised mass.

His face was cut in several places, his arm was broken, one of his legs was cut off and his right hip was fractured. He was taken to St. Timothy's Hospital, where he died.

Early in the morning McKenney informed one of his fellow workmen that he did not expect to be another day on earth. When asked for an explanation of his strange expression he answered that he had a premonition that before the sun should set for the day his life would have ended. It came to him he said, in a dream the character of which he did not state, and after he had told the story to his companion a melancholy look spread over his own manner. During the period which followed after he made this statement until he met the accident he exerted the greatest care in attending to his duties and so remarked to his mates.

TWO STORIES

Are Told of the Exploits of Health and Strength.

In a Brooklyn club room uptown in New York on a stormy afternoon sat two members of the club playing cards. The table they were playing on was beside a window looking into the yard. Overhead at the window where the men were playing was a favorite parrot. One of the club members was very unfortunate at his game, and his partner called him a "jinx." "Don't jinx against you to day," which he aggravated the Loser that the glass of water which was in front of him (it put in his whisky) he took up and flirted through the cage, wetting the parrot all over (which squirted him) saying, at the same time, "There, d—n you, take that. You are talking too much."

The parrot, then kept looking out of the window at the heavy rain-storm and copied a chicken coming across the yard, and when under the shelter of the window shook her wings. The parrot, looking down, said to the chicken: "Hai, hai d—n you, you have been talking too much."

A dealer in pet birds was visited by a customer who stuttered and wanted to buy a parrot which could talk his fancy. The salesman was on Irishman who had just been employed by the dealer. The customer said: "Da—da—does that—that parrot ta—ta—talk good?"

"Well," replied the Irish salesman, "If he did not talk better than you I would wring his neck off."

THE TABLE FORK.

General Disposed to Be a Comparative Modern Invention.

It is difficult for us to realize what a comparatively modern invention the table fork is, or how one ancestors managed to get along without it. Queen Elizabeth never heard of such an implement, and it was many years after her death that the first table or "dinner" fork was brought to England. From a passage in that curious work, Coryate's "Crudities," it has been inferred that the author was the first to bring the table fork to the British Isles. He says: "I note also in my travels that I observed that the Italian always used little forks made of iron, steel or silver. * * * I thought it good to imitate this forkal cutting of meat, and have since my return been called 'forcifer' only for using my fork at my feeling." Some believe that the fork was in use all over European as early as the year 500 A. D., but if they were their use and the fork itself were lost sight of so to about the beginning of the Seventeenth Century, when it was either discovered or rediscovered and popularized. Walton, Weenes and other antiquarians hold to the earlier date given above because a stone vessel containing coins of the Middle Ages and some iron forks was found at Sevington, Bay and, in the year 1840.

LITTLE SHORT OF MURDER.

The Sad Fate of a Family's Invalid and Friend.

The neighbors around a certain corner of a street in Lewiston, Maine, were alarmed one night by low moans issuing from a closely curtained carriage that stood on the corner. A driver sat upon the seat. One of the neighbors came out and approached the team to ask what was the matter. Before he reached the corner the driver caught sight of him, and, whipping up the horses, rapidly drove off. The folks were doubly alarmed, and after a good deal of exciting talk asked a policeman to call at the house on the corner and ascertain who was hurt or if any mystery was in the moans.

He talked with an excited woman who came to the door and also with a man who wiped his eyes with a handkerchief, while the neighbors stood across the street in suspicious silence. The officer came over the street and told them that the old family dog, the pet of the house and friend of fights and of 18 years, had been carried off to die by a bullet. The dog evidently understood his fate, for he began to moan and moan as soon as they took him from the house.

Not Very Encouraging.

Algy had spent a long evening with Miss Edith. At last he arose to go. Her handshake was not cordial enough to suit him; in fact, it was very limp and exhausted. He was dim, however, for he had expected a very different parting, but in a vein of gallantry he said:

"Oh, shake hands with a man, Miss Edith!"

"I should be pleased to, Mr. Brown," was her quiet rejoinder.

Algy has not called since.

PROVOKED MOUCH LAUGHTER.

A Vengeful Judge Matches an Audience on Demonstrating His Change.

Judge Austin Yates, of Schenectady, N. Y., is one of the most amusing men of men. He went down to New York not a great while ago and visited a theater where a most sentimental, sensational and affecting melodramas was in progress. He had a friend with him and he laid down a twenty-dollar bill at the box office to purchase two tickets. The man behind the little hole tossed the pasteboards out and $17 in change.

Intent upon what he was going to see, the judge very naturally seized the tickets and went on his way regarding leaving the balance of the twenty-dollar bill. He and his friend had seats in the midst of a remarkably select company, the play was enjoyable, and the judge, who is nothing if not earnest, sat there spellbound.

At last the villain in the play said to one of his partners in crime, and with a hard look—applicable to the stage—"How much money does the wretch want?"

The word "money" brought the judge's thoughts back to the box office and to the change he had left lying there. Forgetting where he was, and thinking for the instant that the question had been applied to him, he slapped his knees and fairly shouted: "Seventeen dollars, by the Lord Harry!"

The effect on the audience can be imagined, but never described, and nothing can induce that villain to recite the lines wherein money appears, for, with all an actor's superstition, he imagines that the judge's impertinent though pat remark has given him bad luck forever.

HOUSE PLANTS.

Practical Suggestions to Growers of Plants and Vines.

It is the fashion nowadays to decorate one's house with plants of the palm and fern variety. These plants often wither and die, or parts of the leaves become spotted, or perhaps all become brown, even with every apparent care. If those who have had this trouble will observe the following directions I am sure their plants will thrive.

As a general thing it is well to keep water in the saucer of the plant, for then it is soaked up as it is needed. The surfaces of the leaves have hundreds of little pores in them, and if these are clogged up with dust they will cause the plant to die, by preventing the escape of the gaseous exhalations.

Once, therefore, in every two months, give the palm a warm, sooty bath; that is, with a soft sponge, well soaped, wash off the dust with warm water, thinning off the dead parts, if there are any. Then with a dry piece of muslin polish the leaves, they will shine as if they were waxed, and will then pay you for your trouble, besides giving your plant fresh vigor.

Palms and screw pines do not need much sun; one day in the sun, once a month, is quite sufficient.

POWER OF SELECTION.

General Belief in Such a Theory Exploded by Recent Research.

It is very generally believed that plants have the power to select from the soil in which they grow such substances as will be of advantage to them in the building up of their stature, or in the healthy continuance of their life. This selection theory, however, has been exploded by recent research, and it is now definitely known that the selective power of roots is practically nil. Whatever goes into a state of solution in the soil enters the plant, whether it be of a beneficial or useless or even highly injurious nature. Certainly some plants take in, for instance, much less of that injurious substance, silica, than others; but this difference is due to some accident of structure, or to differences in the natural function of respiration, and not at all to any selective or rejective power possessed by the protoplasm of the root hairs.

Eclipses of the Sun.

Every year there must be two eclipses of the sun, and there may be five. These are partial eclipses, however, except in the comparatively rare cases in which the moon passes exactly centrally over the sun's disk and produces a total obscuration of his light. Since the invention of the spectroscope in 1860 there have been barely a score of total eclipses, and a number of these could not be observed because the belt of totality fell at the earth's polar regions or upon the oceans. The belt of totality is a narrow strip—never more than 170 miles wide—where the point of the moon's shadow falls upon the earth. Total eclipses rarely occur, therefore, at the same point of the earth. At London, for example, there has been no total eclipse since the year 1140, except that of 1715, and there will be none during the next century.

He Knew a Thing or Two.

Anaxagoras, the Athenian philosopher, who flourished in the fifth century before Christ, taught his scholars that wind was air set in motion by rarefaction; that the moon owed her light-giving properties to the sun; that the rainbow was the resulting phenomena of reflection; that angels were wandering stars, and that the fixed stars were at an immeasurable distance beyond the sun, besides giving them many other ideas thought to belong to more modern times.

A Napoleonic Relic.

A lock on the door of a house in Plymouth, England, on being taken to pieces for repairs, was found to contain an inscription stating that it was formerly on the door of the chamber at St. Helena in which Napoleon breathed his last.

A Giant Piano.

One of the magnificent instruments of Sonth is Neckland-Malinet, the lord chamberlain of the emperor. He has just ordered a new pianoforte from a Paris manufacturer, which will be three times as large as a common piano, will stand on six legs instead of four, will have a sound three times as powerful as the strongest that is now made, and will thus be able to fill the whole of the immense dancing hall in the chamberlain's mansion at St. Petersburg. The piano stipulated for the ordered Sharp.

A THRILLING ADVENTURE.

A Trespasser's Interview With a Moose.

Too Much Alive.

The story comes of a thrilling adventure recently occurring to William Johnson, a prospector, on a trip from Alamo to the broken country north of Trinidad Cove, California. his horse was picking its trail through a dark canyon when he was startled and almost thrown from his horse by a mountain lion that dropped upon him from an over hanging tree. The frightened horse plunged down the canyon, and Johnson, twisting in his saddle, managed to wrench the murderous claws of the lion from his shoulder.

At this moment the horse saw a Sierra lynx in his pathway, and, seeing his opportunity, sadly buried the lion from his back directly upon the lynx. The two beasts locked throats, and as the horse emerged from the ravine Johnson became fairly frozen less of blood had become light headed, and did not recover his senses until found by his partner two days later on his desert. After he had partially recovered the two men visited the spot, but only a few blood-bespattered bushes marked the scene of the fray. The wounded man has a nobody shoulder to prove his participation in the event.

THE VICTORIOUS JS ANTS.

How the Sagacious Little Creatures Finally Beat Out Their Foes.

One morning a gathering of many scientific attainments sat quietly and gazed at his breakfast. Presently he noticed that some large black ants were making their way in the remains of the sugar bowl. He drove them away, but they were persistent, seeming as willing to leave their sweetened feast. Again they were dispersed, only to return in increased numbers. There was a lamp hook directly above the center of the tablecloth to try their dexterity, the gentleman suspended the sugar-bowl to the hook, and by a cool head, log it to swing clear of the table about an inch. First the sugar-bowl, the ingenious tried to reach it by standing on each other's backs. After repeated efforts, all of which were failures, they went away and it was supposed that they had given up in despair. Within a surprisingly short time, however, they were seen descending the cord by dozens and dropping themselves into the sugar-bowl. They had sealed the wall, traversed the ceiling and discovered another road to the treasure.

LONDON CROOKS.

Their Ingenuity in Finding Ways to Win the Wherewith to Live.

At a London park a crowd had collected around a girl sobbing bitterly and arousing a woman of a long visage a shilling from her. The accused loudly asserted her innocence and disappeared. The crowd in bluntness, accusations and curses against the thief and crying and looking for a policeman being indulged in by all of them. At length a policeman pushes her out of the crowd, and having been told what has happened, she gives the girl a shilling, receives thanks and the crowd disperses. The matron waits a minute when a policeman passes by. She tells him the occurrence and asks him to have his eye on such women as will rob children. "Oh, unclean," he says. "I know the game, I only wish I could meet her in doing the thing. Those girls are in partnership together. They make a living this way for our engineer." And the matron protested she would if she could be more careful about her shillings.

The Squeeze Did It.

A relative of mine proposed under very peculiar circumstances. He had known the young lady some months, when one evening he suggested going to the theater. The being agreeable, away they went. Now, the entertainment was to commence with the laughable farce entitled, "Will You Be My Wife." The young man was reading this to the young lady as they were crushing to get in, but she only heard him say, "Will you be my wife?" as she was squeezed closely to him by the crowd. "Yes, Harry, dear, but had we better not go and get married?" And we had got. He did not fairly comprehend what she had said. Whether she made you propose to me when we were so squeezed to death?" He, in reply to the occasion and said: "It was the squeeze that did it, my dear."

Dressing With Fire.

A new lamp-clearing machine has been invented, the principle being to root up all weeds and grass, then at once through a double blast fire by means of a traveling engine. The frame is mounted on four traveling wheels, upon which a steam engine is fixed. On the right side of the engine is a burner and on the left is a hopper with fitted to an iron frame, which forms a fire retainer.

By a gradual incline the weeds are elevated to the fire retainer, which is kept up to a great heat by a blast from the blower, and after passing the fire the ashes are deposited on the soil. The engine is said to be capable of clearing four to eight acres per day in a thorough manner, at a cost no less than is possible with hand labor.

Our "Crowd Flower of India."

The Erythrina indica, a beautiful flower of the pea family, which grows wild in India, is supposed to be under a curse, for, although the blossom is perfection itself, both in color and color, no true blooms would count it for the world. They tell you it original, big grow in the "Garden of Indian," in the center of heaven, where it was hourly worshipped by all the denizens of that blessed abode. Krishna stole it and brought it to earth, but all who worshipped at its shrine after that event died before they could have its spoil. On this account the flower is shunned as if it were a poisonous serpent.

To Marriage a Fortune.

A careful woman jewels in Canterbury, N. H. She has had a large fortune in constant use for seventeen years, and it is still without a flaw. Another careful woman has her house in Port Richmond, Staten Island. She was married sixteen years ago, and began her married life with a new gown of plum. She has thirty-seven of them yet, and would be happy if she could find the three missing pins.

HE MEANT NO INSULT.

He Was Only Afflicted as Were the Other Two.

A young man who suffers from the embarrassing affliction of stammering entered one of the medical lecturers in Park Row, in New York, the other evening to get a lunch. He chose the place, unless much because of its attractions, not because it was lonely, but rather because he thought it to go into a more public place with his faulty form of speech. At lunch counter there, however, there were no vacant tables, and he was obliged to sit down to one already occupied by another young man.

"Pah-pah-pah-pah-pah-ah-ah-beans," he murmured to the waiter who came up.

That functionary looked a little surprised.

"Pah-pah-pah-pah-ah-ah-ah-beans. All re-re-right, sir," he said, and hurried back with the order.

The young man was very indignant at being mocked. He reddened, and when the waiter came back he got up with the intention of taking the fellow's ears.

But someone was he on his feet than the young man who sat opposite also gave a stammering cry:

"D-d-don't hit him!" cried the new young man. "He-e-e-e wasn't mocking you. He st-st-st-stutters l-l-l-like m-m-m-e d-d-d-do."

HOW DID THEY MAKE LOVE?

Kissing Used to Be Unknown in the Minor Poets' Time.

We believe that kissing is an Hugo institution. We read in ancient history of a knight who visited the Field of the Cloth of Gold, and who, on being invited to a local castle, was so dressed by the female ladies of the establishment, who remarked:

"Forsooth, as in England ye have such a custom as that, I wish may ye have a woman, therefore I will that ye shall have one, and I shall also kysse these my maidens."

"Which thing," adds the old historian, "ye knyghte straight way did, and ye jolyed ye thereat."

What people did before kissing was discovered we really cannot tell you, nor know exactly notice of how the engaged couples of the middle ages amused themselves when "kissing" was hardly known.

We have no doubt, however, that Jack and Jill of the thirteenth century spent much of their leisure hours in time days, and that the solitary walk, the squeezing of the hand, the tickling of the little foot under the table, the prolonged and cold-inducing good nights, etc., were general then as now.

A NEW VERSION.

But the Lively Insect Got There Just the Same.

The Vanderbilts is the leading hotel of Syracuse, into a healthy obstinated lodgement there and sought refuge in the virtuous couch of E. D. Price, manager of the Miss Helyett company. When Mr. Price became aware of the fact he smote the insect fatally, lay paled the remains up, a pin, and, flinging up will drop, sent it to the office with the following original version of a familiar "Mother Goose" melody.

"This is the house that Vanderbilt.

Teaching Patriotism.

Educating patriotism in children from cradle up is one of the most necessary occurrences. At Belgrade, in Servia, the authorities compel parents not to play at soldiers. They began throwing stones at each other, slowly increasing the missiles in size, and when victory hesitated in declaring itself either party they took to sticks and pocket-knives and assaulted each other with fury. Whether and were trying to make peace were driven a way with stones. A few officers of police looked on and enjoyed the lively and practical way of inculcating patriotic sentiments. In the end the warriors were finally separated nine boys were seriously hurt, a few of them dying of their wounds and a large number were for weeks unable to do combat.

Grand Small Dolphins.

Prof. T. O'Connor Sloan, in the course of a scientific lecture the other day, told his young students how to blow soap bubbles. In substance his directions were: Take a long chimney—one which is straight up and downdip one end in a solution of soap and water until a flat disk of film covers the end. Blow gently till the bubble is started. Then remove the chimney about two inches from the lips and continue blowing gently. In this way giant bubbles can be blown without exhausting the breath. The addition of a little glycerine to the soap and water is very advantageous.

How to See Under Water.

A lens for seeing under water is described as producing an effect which is both astonishing and delightful. It gives distinct vision to objects from twenty to thirty feet below the surface, and with perfectness equal to that of ordinary eye-sings. The eye's loss of accommodation when under water is owing to the fact that an entirely different focus is required. The spectacles which can adjust this focus are made by putting two watch crystals back to back or with the concavities outward. Tre it and be surprised.

—Thirteen lives were lost and a large number of persons injured in an express railway accident which occurred near Hilton, in Yorkshire, Eng., at an early hour Wednesday morning. The wreck was caused by a passenger train coming into a heavily laden freight train, which had backed on the main track while waiting for a dense fog. The engineer of the express did not see the freight train in time to prevent the collision. It was said that the train was due to stop at Hilton station. The engine was thrown from the track, and the train was filled with passengers from the Hull fairs, which were being held in the vicinity of the place, and almost all the passengers were killed. The train was crowded with passengers returning from the Hull fairs, which were being held in the vicinity of the place

MAN'S FINAL COLLAPSE.

Different Ways as to How the End May Come.

The probable fate of the last man is a subject that has often been discussed. Given a dozen solutions of the question, some of the best are summarized thus:

The surface of the earth is steadily lessening; all the landed portion at last be submerged and the last man will be drowned.

The ice is gradually accumulating in North pole and slowly creeping the South; eventually the earth's center of gravity will change, and the last man will be killed by the rush of swallies when the catastrophe finally comes.

2. There is a retarding medium in space, causing a gradual loss of velocity in all the planets. The earth, obeying this law of gravitation, will be drawn nearer and nearer the sun, until at last humanity will be roasted on the face of the globe.

3. The amount of water on the earth's surface is slowly drying up. Finally the earth will be an arid waste like the moon, and the last man will die, pleading for a drop of moisture with which to wet his tongue.

4. A gigantic planet is likely to tumble into the sun at any time. In that event our great luminary would flame up and burn the earth and other planets in its train to cinders.

5. With the beginning of the year 3000 A. D. the human family will begin to retrograde, and within 1,000,000 years from that date man will not be higher in the scale of nature than the plant loose of to-day. In this case there will be no "last man."

7. The sun's fires will gradually burn out and the temperature will cool in consequence. The earth's glacial zones will enlarge, driving shivering humanity toward the equator. At last the habitable space will insure to nothing and overcrowded humanity will be seen in a heap.

PHOTOGRAPHY IN WAR.

Advantages of Employing Pigeons for Carrying Messages.

Considerable attention has been given for several years to the methods of carrying on communication between points in time of siege. In a recent issue of Nature a French investigator strongly recommends the use of carrier pigeons for transmitting messages, and a map of Europe with the proper stations for pigeon service is given. During the siege of Paris the mode of communication was carried out, a distinct pigeon post was organized, the letters, at a cost of 10 cents a word, being sent into the city with a great degree of rapidity. The letters, which were limited to twenty words, were set in type, and, or a reduced photograph was made. A film was removed from the glass and inclosed in small quills, which were then attached to one of the tail feathers of the bird. So complete was the organization that many thousands were sent in this way. There was no special skill required for this work, and any amateur photographer accustomed with the wet collodion process could, with an ordinary camera and lens, reduce a whole page of a newspaper to such dimensions as could be easily to be dispatched in the manner described.

... Crowds of Mary Stuart.

When Mary Queen of Scots, on Feb. 8, 1587, was led to the scaffold she had in her hands a precious crucifix which has changed hands many a time since that date. The last owner of the beautiful enamelled relic was the German princess, Countess Hahn-Hahn, who left it at her death to the cathedral in the city of Mayence, where it has lately been deposited. It is no longer perfect, a number of small pieces having been taken off and lost, but the genuine relics of the relic has been proven beyond the possibility of doubt.

"Travels of a Spider."

The "life curse," the "blue grotesque" and other natural freaks of that life are completely laid in the shade by the Colorado "cave of spiders." It is situated near Buena Vista, and is said to literally swarm with spiders of a curious species and of immense size. The "cave of spiders" was discovered in 1879. The webs woven by this old subterranean species of arianea are said to be as strong as ordinary "bobbin hole twine" and of a bright, shining yellow color.

Red Sunsets and Fine Weather.

The reason for the red sunset indicating a fine day to come is because a amount of vapor floating in the air reacts the beams of the sun and perfectly transmits the red rays of light than the colored rays. It is the presence of moisture in the atmosphere often affects the refraction of the light, and where the red rays of sunset are freely transmitted the amount moisture does not approach the rain point, and therefore promises the following day to be fine.

A Lesson to Painters.

Yarmouth captain who had a small trading schooner lying in port, decided to give a lesson to painters in general by himself painting the vessel's name on her bows. He could not reach high enough from the float, and did not care to put out a swinging stage, so he reached down over the side to do the lettering. After finishing the job on one bow, he went over to work his handiwork, and this was what met his gaze—"HOOVIM."

A Sensitive Thing to Do.

"I say one is ill or annoyed in any way in Tibet the well spirits are responsible, and the only sensible thing to do and bribe priests to frighten them off. For this purpose the lama is hired from his sacred writings, or a horn made from a human thighbone, beats a drum manufactured out of two human skulls, rings a bell of bells over a rosary of God-knows-what, and out of human shells.

Unique and Interesting Watches in Private Collections.

William W. Kenyon of Brooklyn, owns a number of timepieces. He is a connoisseur and authority on ancient and modern watches of the most complicated and excellent construction. One in his possession is a musical watch which tells the time of day, day of the week, days of the month, and is a calculator of the moon's phases, and also repeats the hours, quarter, half and three-quarter minutes, besides playing a number of airs. He purchased it in Europe. He is also a great adept in the clockmaker's art, which is proved by the great and diversified variety of clocks in his house. Colonel Burleigh, another distinguished Brooklynite, is the owner of several watches, one of which is very historic. It once belonged to Marquis de Lafayette and bears his coat of arms. It was presented by Lafayette to Edward Ruffin of Virginia, the father of General Ruffin, who fired the first shot from Fort Moultrie on Fort Sumter during the late civil war. When the soldiers entered the old Ruffin homestead in Virginia the watch was found by a member of the Seventeenth New York volunteers, who sold it to Colonel Burleigh for $16, when it was sent to Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, who returned it to its present owner.

First Piano Made by Chickering.

The original first piano made by the late Jonas Chickering, of Boston, founder of the piano industry in the United States, has just been recovered by his son, George H. Chickering, and to be kept by the latter gentleman as a historic memento. The original bill of sale was made out to James H. Bingham, and the date, June 23, 1823, marks the time of the first sale made of a new piano at the factory, then consisting of two rooms in Tremont street, near to King's chapel graveyard. In a small building located where the private court building now is Mr. Bingham was a friend of Jonas Chickering, and he bought the piano for a Miss Thankful C. Hutchinson at Alstead, N. H., whence it was shipped. Mr. Bingham was engaged to be married to Miss Hutchinson, and subsequently did marry her. The piano sold for $275. Twice afterward the piano was sold, always remaining, however at Alstead.

Spotted the Sentiment.

Daniel Potter, an old resident of Gloucester, Mass., once called the attention of his guests to an old clock, a great favorite of his. He told his friends of his great attachment to this ancient timepiece, and said, in a voice full of emotion: "Gentlemen, I have wound up that clock every night for more than forty years." He had evidently made an impression on his visitors, when one guest, who had been carefully examining the clock, turned the title of feeling evoked by the story by saying drily: "Well, I always did think you were something of an idiot! That's an eight-day clock!"

The Light of the North Star.

A ray of light moves with such amazing velocity that it might wrap itself eight times round the earth between five ticks of the clock, and yet it would take that ray of light fifty years to come from the North star to this earth. When we look at that steadfast, unchanging star at night we see it in the light that left it half a century ago; and if the omnipotent hand that formed it, set it in place and called it by name should suddenly destroy it, we would continue to see it in its own light fifty years after it ceased to exist.

Their Father's Business.

Why do not girls who spend their time spying for a career mind their father's business? A man died in Norwalk a few years ago, leaving a manufacturing business that paid $6,000 a year but not one of his family of daughters was able to conduct it, and, therefore, it passed to strangers, while the family went into comparative poverty. When a real estate man died in Jersey City not long ago his daughter announced her intention to carry on the business; she had assisted her invalid father in his office and had become so familiar with the business that she is now conducting it successfully.

—Want a jury. It is three in not much an office as U. S. Game Warden.

The agricultural business and loan paper left the business in Michigan.

—E. W. Bennett left yesterday with Morris Stackman for Florida for the winter.

—The Populist vote in Charlevoix county was an again fulcrum to the Democrats.

Freddie Bensinger will undoubtedly go to Sandusky with the East Jordan pottery.

—W. H. Vaughan began work on Monday as Secretary of the Northern Michigan Seed Co.

—It is distinctly a Hamptonian action that "as he well stuck in, is as good as the truth."

Hick's plurality in Charlevoix county was 221, and yet the Democrat speaks of it as "reduced."

—Miss Ella Stewart, of Prince Edward's Island, is here to spend the winter with her cousin, Mrs. John Baker.

—The President designates Thursday, Nov. 24, as a day of Thanksgiving. There is plenty to be thankful for besides the type-writer.

—About next June you will find U. S. Deputy Marshal H. C. Chapel's only business office in one of the new books in McLeod's meat market.

—The lumber and parquetine have been loaded up and stowed away for the winter, and work on the water works will be begun this week.

—And now they say Ash Barrett will be indorsed by the Democrats for postmaster at Boyne City. What is it we read about the blood of the martyrs?

—At Sault Ste. Marie, last Wednesday, Sheriff Ingersoll, of that place, the American side, with a band and called the Democrats ratify Cleveland's election.

—In conclusion, we congratulate you upon the grand work that has already been done in this County. The Cleveland Leader. It was grand work for the Republicans.

—Hard for us instincts, preacher Dejon, who made a speech here for Cleveland and reform, and solicited replicate at the proper points, is already on the wan path for office.

—The manager of the Northern Michigan Line will make one more trip after the premium. The Lake Shore will leave Chicago about the 15th or 20th, and the Charlevoix the 21st or 22d.

—The tug that brought the white oaks here returned to Port Huron last week. The tug Marflit has been engaged to tow his wheelship to Muskegon via Traverse City. Remember and wear shoe polish, and left yesterday.

—It is understood that the railroad folks will put on two more trains between Petoskey and Traverse City next week. They will be mixed trains, affording increased freight facilities. The Petoskey Charlevoix local will be taken off.

—The shanties are out, Burt Mason and a party left last week, and on Friday Geo. Barnes, Capt. Port Partridge were joined by Samuel H. Chase, lately elected Recorder of Cook county, Illinois, and a Chicago friend, for a two weeks trip north.

—Mr. J. W. Harris, the resident engineer of the C. & W. M. R. R. has entered into a co-partnership with Jos. A. Beauvais, in the manufacture of boats, canoes, paddles, oars, etc, and the summer boat livery business. They have begun the erection of a factory building, 45x70, three stories high, and the business will be correspondingly enlarged. This makes Mr. Harris a resident of Charlevoix.

—The Democrat in its election returns has work, as usual, into only half the truth in some towns once. It states that Norwood Township dropped from 51 majority in 1888 to 20 this year. The total vote of Norwood in 1888 was 157; this year it was 93. The majority this year was the largest ever given according to the vote cast. The estimate of "southern's majority" was the cause of the reduced vote.

CHARLEVOIX WATER WORKS.

The Mains Full and Hydrants Ready for Use.

Last Saturday the pumps of the Charlevoix water-works were baptized with Round Lake water, and the water mains filled. With a pressure of 45 pounds to the square inch every hydrant was opened, and a partial test made, which was entirely satisfactory.

The final test, with full pressure, will be made to day or to-morrow, but it is not premature to say that our plant comes fully up to the requirements of the contract. For the present, water is taken from Round Lake, but the well contract on all hands work this week, and if no serious difficulties are encountered, water for domestic use will be available during the month of December, although it is doubtful if the mains will be tapped to any great extent this winter.

The pumping works occupy a new twenty-solid brick structure at the south-west angle of Round Lake. The steam for the plant is supplied from a battery of two steel boilers, each twenty feet six inches in diameter, operated together or singly. One boiler alone will more than supply steam to run both sets of pumps, but the large boiler capacity is intended for future use in an electric light plant.

The machines which do the work are two double-acting plunger pumps of the Worthington make, Pegnino. They will pump 750,000 gallons of water in twenty-four hours. The steam cylinders are 16x24 inches. Each set of pumps is supplied with a fisher governor, by which the pressure is automatically regulated.

For ordinary domestic supply one set of pumps, run at slow speed, will be amply sufficient; but when the tremendous energy of the combined pumps is called into action, from a fire in the village, water may be thrown to a height of 100 feet.

Every convenience for a successful pumping outfit is supplied, and every feature of the establishment is of the most approved style and high quality. Mr. D. B. Hudson, who acted for the Lansing Iron and Engine Works, contractors, is a constructing engineer of large experience, and under his eye everything has been perfected to the letter of the contract.

The system of water mains embraces about 12 miles of iron piping of the best quality, and a hydrant of the most approved pattern.

Jim Ed M. Girard is the engineer in charge of the works, and who will also have charge of the water bowls.

Masonic.

Members of Charlevoix Lodge No. 282, F. & A. M. and all other Masons in good standing in the jurisdiction, are requested to assemble at the lodge room at sevelock sharp, standard time, Thursday, Nov. 17th, to attend the funeral of our late Brother Amos Fox.

AMOS FOX DEAD

THE OLD PIONEER PASSES AWAY YESTERDAY NOON.

Just at noon-time yesterday, the old pioneer, Amos Fox, passed away at his residence in this village, after a brief illness. At this writing we cannot state definitely the funeral arrangements, but the services will probably occur tomorrow, (Thursday) afternoon, and will be under Masonic auspices.

Amos Fox was born in western New York 69 years ago. At the age of ten years he removed with his parents to Branch county, near Coldwater, this State. There he resided until the year 1854, when, in company with H. Rose, now of Petoskey, he went to California where Amos and H. "for among three years were mining partners. This partnership continued unbroken and unmarred by word of reproach or shadow of suspicion for thirty years.

In 1856 he joined Mr. Rose at Northport, where for 18 years they did a prosperous mercantile and propeller wood business. In 1867 Mr. Fox removed to Charlevoix, to which point the business was extended. In that year he was married to Miss Ella Whitcomb, by whom he has had two children. In Charlevoix for many years he was the center around which moved the business activities of the Pine Lake region. His career here is too well known to require further details here. In a reminiscent way we shall, some time in the near in time, write more at length of his life.

It is indeed a cold nature and a flinty heart that would not be touched with pity for the almost disconsolate old man in the later years of his life. We who knew him best had but to get beneath the practicable crust of his nature to find that redeeming quality in man, a benevolent and kindly soul. The good things he did, in his way, are, or should be, graven upon many a Northern Michigan heart-stone.

Amos Fox had traits of character which did him credit and made him respected in spite of the idiosyncrasies of his nature. He was of the blue type of the Californian of old—quick to resent and as quick to forget. He was as honest as gold and as true as steel. Cant and hypocrisy were his abhorrence. Under a rough exterior he had a heart sensitive and tender. His generous nature has cheered and encouraged many a struggling pioneer in the days when it meant much. He would not witness an injustice if his hand or his purse could relieve it. The editor of this paper has, away back in the pioneer days, more than once been lifted from the slough of despond by the kind impulses of the big heart which now lies pulseless.

Old friend, hail and farewell!

—Joe Beauvais Jr. is back from college for the winter.

—The Chicago Club House is already connected with the city water works. Warden Dougherty is an old plumber, and did the work himself.

—Mrs. Fox, who was in Chicago at the time of Mr. Fox's death, returned to day. She was accompanied by her son Bert and Mr. and Mrs. Faulkner.

—Joe Beauvais returned from Grand Rapids on Monday, where he took a winter's contract from the C. & W. M. R. R. Co. The work embraces a grill at the end of the dock, and the cribbing of that portion of the dock occupied by the track, for two hundred feet out.

—Now that the cold winter weather is upon, Charlevoix people can congratulate themselves on the possession of enlarged and improved fire protection. With a hydrant on every corner, high pressure and plenty of water, it should be difficult for fire to spread to any extent. Let the boys get out and see what they can do the first pleasant day.

—True to its instincts the Democrat again lies about the Sentinel, when it says, "which don't like Democrats. For the whole precious gang it has nothing but contempt." The Sentinel has said nothing of the kind, and the Democrat knows it. We changed the quality of Democrat that we desired to express our contempt for. If the editor of the Democrat considers himself under any of those heads, all right.

From Far and Near.

A vessel representing a fleet of Sagtiv Bay, Mich., was run down in midwater off Manitowoc, this was brought in by a sail barbor in An Trim Bay. The Manoulina and barge Glenora were in tow of the tug Walker, and were bound for Port William with Wood, Cleveland, stone of Sandard Rock Monday night they were struck by the hurricane mentioned, and which has prevailed ever since. The capsize of the Manoulina from that the Glenora has had a hard time of it and long not have lived through the storm. Nothing has been heard of her since the tow broke up. This is the third time this season that the Glenora has been cast adrift in Lake Superior and narrow escapes from wrecking. The standard barge Toledo and her two consorts are safe in port, after a long and rough flight in Grand Island Harbor. They are protected from the gales here of the storm. The rudder of one of the Toledo's consorts is broken, but never particular damage can be learned.

This season is shown in the chief states of the Mexican republic in the City of Hopedale, and large displays will be made featuring Mexico agricultural and mineral resources. It is absolutely safe in small demand. Merchants are buying little from the exchange, hoping for a rise in silver.

Shipments from Ironwood in the Hiawatha-Gaston New York, were found in Duluth Tuesday night. The building, a foundatory brick structure, was gutted. The top upper floors of the structure were filled with furniture, the plastering known as the Hiawatha Exchange Hotel and all the furniture was burned. The Buoys communicated to the alarm, although been was also slightly damaged. The total loss is placed at $50,000.

Jonas Bay, passenger agent and general manager of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway Company, of which James J. Hill is president, was found on the gate on New York early in the morning. The very unexpected news of the Pioneer President reached his son Thaw now Wisconsin, and he left for Chicago. He figured that if he joined Stiven Owen in a general call on Hill, he would be in the twelve pockets first reported, he would get the inside of the sad mystery for the comparison was made with two years ago, when the President was in the State, by a large majority, the gin so sorely tried Tariff reason not was quite prepared for the announcement that Thaw had gone for Wagner. He gotten news from Wisconsin exactly a few bulletins intending on the occasion change. The President looked the bulletins over and throw of the company, the statistics in a somnolent way and left word of the talking to the authorities for personal and official families. Up to the time he received the bulletins the pool-room he had learned nothing that he dreamed desirable. Representatives Illinois as dodging and when the returns from Chicago and other important points in the State came in he gave up the election, remarking old Illinois was a Democratic state, and he had expected to be so, and expected that go further return to the Democratic fold. The Democratic Mississippi was in the morning still figuring upon some possible combination which could give Democrats a majority, but with very indifferent success.

Ira Jones, who had a cabinet and usual home, planted over some of the best known specimens, has been prepared for him, and then calmly moved him out of a position to cause no trouble. Vilas, Vilas, Vilas, and Secretary J. W. Foster, of the Spanish treaty, are the only top members of the cabinet in the city. Secretary Blaine is the man who what prepared for defeat by the forecast of Hight which he sought back with a free hand. Secretary Blaine is not in the active politics. He was paired with Mr. Hill, of Indiana. Ex-Secretary Blaine declines to be interviewed on the result, and has had the telephone removed from his residence in Lafayette Square so as to avoid the annoyance of personal calls.

At Montgomery, Ala., Judge F. C. Bowman, Prohibitionist, was elected, and severally wounded Williams Metcalfe. The difficulty is said to have arisen in politics of freemen. Judge Randolph is one of the most prominent men in the State.

Dr. Talmage demonstrates the report that he will be leader in the "Sunday Sabbath." The recent mysterious movements of the gentleman were caused by the necessity of a telegram. He was to have met Mr. Tanner at Boston, Ohio, Friday, to get his answer, and they passed each other on the road.

Assistant Secretary of the Treasury A. B. Nettleton announces that he will resign soon.

At Uniondale, Ohio, the large building of Watkins, Hubbard & Co., dealers in dry goods, carpets, and boots and shoes, was entirely destroyed by fire. Loss, $40,000.

CRIME AND CASUALTY.

A north-bound train on the Missouri, Kansas and Texas Road was wrecked near Nacio, I. y. sixty miles south of Denison, Texas, killing the engineer, fireman and overturning the engine. Thomas Stanton, a passenger, under the engine and was slightly killed. Fireman Fred Hy, trainmen Jordan Ayers, and an unknown man were badly hurt. The work was caused by running over a log.

In a sudden burst of passion Edward Lincoln, a porter at the firm of Carlton Dentist, Mich., pulled a revolver on Charles A. Sacks, the engineer at the house, and fired a bullet into the latter's brain. Sacks fell dead in his tracks while Lincoln was captured only after a desperate struggle. The engineer, arrived from England only a few months ago. He and Sacks have while the latter for days had very heated quarrels over the respective merits of the American and British Sections and the contest at Sacks securing the backer of the engineer. A verdict against the prisoner was rendered the fatal shooting.

At Middle Point, Ohio, Christopher Bradenson, aroused the night watch, who then shot by Bradenson, Bradenson said he was attempting to escape.

At Buffalo, N. Y., John and Fred Miller, aged 11 and 13 years, were struck by a shock in the Gustavus ards. They were nearly starved, nearly chilled, and other sufferings. Twin children was their mother died at St. Charles, Mo. They heard that their grandfather lived at Susquehanna, Pa., and started for the long journey by rail. They had lost their money in Buffalo and being had their money stolen in reach Chicago. Then they boarded the stock car in which they were found.

Information comes from California that Harvey Brandt, an lawyer of this city, Four Years at Pittsburg for forgery. Two years he fallen heir to a estate in Ireland at Dunoon. The fortune was bequeathed to Brandt by his brother William, who went to California in 1849, accumulated large wealth and recently died, leaving the estate to his brother Harvey.

In the Circuit Court at Franklin, Ky., on Saturday, Judge Moulton decided that the State Auditor had no right to pass upon the constitutionality of the Winter's Fair appropriation of $50,000, and that the Auditor was exceed power in the Auditor in pay the State Board a Fair Commission a warrant of $20,000. The Auditor took an appeal.

THE KING WAS WORRIED.

He Predicted That His Island Would Soon Be Taken From Him.

It is learned from persons who cultivated the acquaintance of King Mahonk of the Samoan Islands, when he was in San Francisco that the king was more worried than he would admit about the fear of his islands being grabbed by Germany or England. He thought Germany would be the first in the field after it learned of his fruitless appeal to the United States, but recent events have shown that he underrated British enterprise.

The king related several instances of German tyranny. At Bonitari there was a German store keeper who lived with a native woman as his wife. One day she took from the store some articles which she gave to her friends. The German thereupon presented a bill of $1,000 to the king. As the amount was in excess of the value of the goods that had been taken, payment was refused, although a sum equal in value to the stolen goods was offered.

The German refused to accept the money and sent word to the consular agent at the Marshall group. As a result a war vessel was sent to Bonitari, and the chief made that unless the bill was paid forthwith, the king would be taken prisoner and transferred to some other island. He paid the money. Another source of annoyance was the custom the German storekeepers had of going over to the natives and then presenting bills bill very much augmented, to the king for payment.

The king when in San Francisco wanted to go to Washington, but the merchant who brought him over refused to put up the money. Now the islands are lost to us.

BOSTON BOILED EGG.

But the Boiler Was Thinking of a Different Kind of a Lay.

Everybody who has ever been in any way an invalid appreciates what no unpromising thing a convalescent's appetite is. Probably pretty nearly everybody with therefore sympathizes with this dreary case of a certain young man who was just getting in his attack of malaria and craved a soft-boiled egg. Now as it happened the cook of the house was absent and the young man's exceedingly pretty and asthetic sister proffered her services. The young man huddled himself into a chair in the disappointed. He had an wrath about him, but he felt quite sure that quite half an hour must have passed before his impatience moved itself to the point of investigating the kitchen. When he entered the pretty sister was bending over the stove with flushed cheeks and eyeglasses much awry. "Why, what a misery you're in," she remonstrated. "It has only boiled about a second."

"A second!" Then, as she afterward told of it, over he marched to the clock and said something under his breath that looked very savage indeed, and when he informed her that it had stopped. But that wasn't the worst of it by any means. When she had fruitlessly begun skimming around and finally brought the solitary egg to the surface he gave it one glare and his face felt as only a malarial young man's face can feel, but all he said was "It's a china nest egg!"

A TINY VIOLIN.

It is Only Ten Inches Long, but Is Perfect in Every Way.

Bernard J. Reiley, who lives in New York is the possessor of the smallest perfect violin in existence. One with a hand of any size can span it from end to end. It is about ten inches long and the diameter of its bow is nine. The instrument is fully forty years old. Yet it is in all respects a perfect violin, even as to tone. It was made in Milan and is a facsimile of the instrument of one of the great Italian masters, who had left his violin with an expert violinmaker to be repaired.

The instrument maker made the facsimile for a show window advertisement, but, awakened by ill luck, he had to sell it. It finally came into the possession of Professor Malcom Hoffman, the composer, who has written a great deal of band and ballroom music. He purchased it for $25 and on his return to America from Italy presented it to his little granddaughter, Mr. Reiley's son. The instrument is quite a curiosity but the strings are so near together that it requires a delicate touch to play it.

A Feathered Ally.

During the war between Great Britain and the United States in 1812 a gunboat, one, now a naval victory for the States and Stripes. It happened thus: A British 3-ounce open boat changalah was attacked by the American fleet under Commodore Melton rough, and the day was going against the assailants, when a cannon-shot struck a bonnoon on board the combatants ship, killing all its fractured limates except an old cock. The indomitable bird flew into the rigging, and with clarion note, rang each his defiant "Cock-a-doodle-doo!" The American sailors, refreshed, took heart, and after a sharp struggle were victorious.

Nothing Came of It.

Nicholas of Russia was much attached to the painter Vernet, and in one of his familiar conversations proposed that he should paint a picture on the partition of Poland. "I am afraid I cannot do it, sire," replied Vernet: "I have never painted a Christ on the cross. The moment I had said it," continued Vernet, "I thought my last hour had struck. I am positively certain that a Russian would have paid for those words with his life, or at least with life-long exile to Siberia. I shall never forget the look he gave me; there was a murderous gleam in the eyes; but it was over in an instant."

Some Geographical Sketches.

Halifax, Nova Scotia; Bangor, Me.; Ogdensburg, N. Y.; Oshkosh, Wis.; Macon, Ga.; Savastopol, Russia; Sudbury, Ontario; Belgrade, Servia; Bologna and Genoa, Italy, and Bordeaux, France, occupy about the same relative geographical position. Who would ever think of classifying a city in Nova Scotia and another in Russia along with Genoa, Italy? All of the above mentioned cities lie between the forty-fourth and forty-fifth degrees of north latitude.

A DISH

That Is Fit For the Gods—Fricked Alligator Egg.

"Never ate an alligator eggs, I guess?" was the non-sequitur, curious question asked by Lucien Verniere of San Augustine, the man who has gained his teeth in the Florida swamps. "Well you needn't smile and look dubious, he astonished the incredulous listener. "I have and I can assure you that when properly prepared there is no dish known to the culinary art more palatable. The natives of the Florida swamps and lagoons fairly feast upon them in season, and if Lucullus were with us in the field and could get a spoil of the aroma as it comes from the steaming spattering gravy in which they are served, he would turn green with envy. There is no hardness shell on the egg to speak of, you know, and after it is washed it is scored into a pot of boiling water.

"Only two minutes are required to harden it sufficiently to insure its safe carriage. Then it is put into a peculiar brown gravy, whose chief continent is heaps of red pepper, onions, garlic, and spices. The gravy is heavy. It bakes until its thin outer coating wrinkles and splits open, revealing the luscious meat in a solid, filigreed lump. The gravy percolates the meat through the openings in the shell, and then you have a sensibility fit for the gods. The sensing is complete when and no other flavoring is necessary. I have eaten a dozen of these eggs at a single meal and then hungered for more. It is a fact that the natives relish them so that, lastly as they need the eggs of the tortoise, money can not buy their alligator eggs. For his reason and for other their delights are unknown to the epicurean world. I'd fare mainly from the hen's egg in its modesty saline taste."

CURIOUS FACTS.

Origin of Some of Our Most Common Mathematical Signs.

The sign of addition is derived from the initial letter of the word "plus." In making the capital letter it was made more and more carelessly until the top part of the p was finally placed near the upper, hence the plus sign as we know it was gradually reached.

The sign of subtraction was derived from the word "minus." The word was first contracted into m-i-, with a horizontal line above to indicate that some of the letters had been left out. At last the letters were omitted and the sign left by itself the short line.

The multiplication sign was obtained by changing the plus sign into the letter X. This was done because multiplication is but a shorter form of addition.

Division was formerly indicated by placing the dividend above a horizontal line and the divisor below. In order to save space in printing the dividend was placed to the left and the divisor to the right. After years of wrinkling the d's were omitted altogether and simple dots set in the place of each. As with the others the radical sign was derived from the initial letter of the word "radix."

The sign of equality was first used in the year 1557 by a sharp mathematician, who substituted it to avoid frequently repeating the words "equal to."

Taught the Boy a Lesson.

A York Pa., father wrote thus in answer to a graduating letter which he by his son from college. "Dear son, I have spent the best portion of my life in acquiring superficial sentiment, and philosophical or psychological observations, beware of platitudinous positivity. Let your conversations possess a simplified consciousness, compactness, comprehensiveness, coalescent constancy and a concentrated cogency. Eschew all conglomerations of flatulent garrulity, jejune ladies meant and sonine affectations. Let your extemporaneous declamings and impromptitated capitulations have intelligibility, without rhodomontade or thrasonical bombast. Sedulously avoid all polysyllabical profundity, pompous proficity and ventriloquial verbosity. Shun double entender and prurient jocosity, whether obscure or apparent. In other words, speak truthfully, naturally, clearly, briefly, but do not use large words."

His Dog Retrieved His Hash.

A retiree recluse, Richford man, with no respect for law or gospel, is said to have devised a scheme for catching trout by the wholesale, which did not work as well as he thought.

He thought that a bomb explosion in the brook would bring all the fish to the surface, so that he would only have to pick them up. He provided himself with a bomb powerful enough to blast a schooner out of water and went to a local brook in which there were said to be large trout. He fired the fuse, ignited it, and threw the bomb into the brook. As he did so his dog jumped in after it, seized it in his mouth, got back to shore, and started after his master, who was legging it across the field as fast as he could in the realization of his danger. The man had the good luck to get over a fence, which bothered the dog, and a moment later, hearing no explosion, he looked around to see his dog going skyward.

Christmas Gifts.

In Norway no running practice is observed at Christmas. It consists in a secret conveyance of the presents wrapped up in innumerable covers, on each of which a different name is written, so that they pass through many hands before reaching their destination. The curiosity may be imagined with which the process of uncovering is watched by those interested, for no one is sure who at the last will be lucky enough to receive the coveted prize.

A Modern Danaus.

A modern case of Danaus and Dyphlus has come to light in Cincinnati through the application of Thomas Conlon to be released from the work house, where he has been confined for the past fifteen months. Patrick, his brother, struck a man with a shovel, and by mistake Thomas was arrested. He pleaded guilty in order to save his brother and was sentenced. It is a delicate legal question whether he can be freed, as he deliberately confessed the crime he never committed.

I HIDE MY TIME.

I hide my time. Whatever chalices darkness
Along my path I drink, I hide my time.
Whatever lightning shall strike behind the abyss
And the world's harsh, thunderous scorn
And time divinest crush from shar
Amid scoffs from those who know not my
So, come what may, I'll bide my time and
I hide—I hide my time.

I hide my time. Whatever wave assail me,
I know my destiny, I wait my time.
Whatever I do, whatever I dare or endure,
Is but the shadow of a purpose I do not
Who will tell all life's jarring tumult
And lead me to fashion of perfect peace.
I hide—I hide my time.

I hide my time. This conflict of restlessness,
This ever-recurring struggle of a life
Thus war is not in vain, I know, I trust,
But this my solace for the long schooling
Which only can in the longer to aid by
So, come what may, I'll bide my time and wait
I hide—I hide my time.

UNDER SUSPICION.

Something very unusual to quite remarkable had happened, and Tillinghast was decidedly uncomfortable about it.

Of course everybody knew, as everybody knew everything in that delightful place, where each neighbor was a friend, each friend a brother, and what the village folk knew was this—the miller, old Harvey Jameson, had been robbed.

"A mere business," said the miller, shaking his dusty head solemnly, and telling the circumstances for the fifteenth time to his near neighbor, Farmer Greene, who had dropped in to sympathize with his old friend. "Nobody knew I had the money but my daughter Jessie and young Lovee, and I don't suspect a single soul. I put the money in a tin box, and put that among a lot of other boxes in the cupboard, waitin' until I could go to the bank with it, as I do regular when I want to get it out yesterday, there wasn't a single sign of loss or money. I can't understand it."

"Neither can I, neighbor," said Greene, rousing a brawny hand over his shaggy head in his perplexity. "I tell ye, I don't think you've set too much store by that young man yer talk into your house, and yer daughter you took from the gutter. Mebbe you've mistook him. He's a deal too fine about his clothes and his hands, an' his hair, to be say too honest, but," continued, as he saw the flush that stole over Jameson's face, "that mebbe I'm talkin' too fast. Just it's mighty curious, and one don't know what to think."

"One might try to think nothin' that weren't charitable," said the miller, gently, "and I don't suspect the lad. It is more'n I'd like to lose, for it takes a time to earn it, but young Lovee didn't have nothin' to do with the affair, no more'n you or me—an' I'd rather people wouldn't kinder hint he had."

"Taint in nature not to think it second 'em's a stranger, an' nobody knows what or who he is, an' he has the ways with him an' talks like a schoolmaster," said Greene, seriously. "I don't like to see you took in, neighbor, and I'm mighty much afraid you are by that millionaire of yours."

Then Greene held out his hand to him, saying, "Well, was deep in thought, and looks his grandest, and betook himself to his duties on the farm hard by the mill.

But the farmer had left a seed of doubt behind him; and when Jameson's seed took root and grew it was not until its fruit, hung heavy on the giant tree which shadowed a friendship, so darkened over one a sent immortal!

It was not without many a struggle against the suspicion that at last Harv Jameson admitted it with a sigh.

Who had robbed him of his hard earnings, save some stranger for his neighbors were his friends, and knew, as he knew, he?

In Talmley there was but one who had been here three years, and that one was Dick Levoe, the stranger who had crossed his threshold six months before to ask for employment.

Jameson wanted this lad, and had hired Dick, taking him as a teacher. The young man had come "afoot," as Greene said.

He was not especially handsome, but he was cheerful, courteous, and willing to work, and yet, for all that, showed unmistakable signs of having had no occasion to perform any labor at some time not far past. He was educated—even Jessie, who had "kept school" at boarding school, could be instructed by him.

"I just keep my eyes open, and not let on for awhile," thought the miller; "but as Greene said, who else knew where the money?"

He perceived no change in Dick, no outward, no sign of guilt; but greatly to the good man's consternation, he discovered something else. The young man was in love with pretty Jessie, and she was fully conscious of the fact.

There was a new difficulty, and one which the miller did not care to meet.

He was pondering on it one day, three weeks after the robbery, when Glavin of the Hollow called and put him ten pounds which had been due some time.

"I hear your house isn't a very secure place for money," said Glavin, with a smile; "but I hope nobody will walk off with this while you're asleep."

"I'll take care of that," answered the miller, conscious that Dick could hear. "I don't calc'late on bein' robbed twice by the same person; an I've got over thinkin' everybody I meet is honest. Good-day, sir. Much obliged."

Glavin departed, and the miller went into the house.

Jessie was singing softly as she sewed at a window. Her father was not in, having zone to visit a sick neighbor.

Without a word the old man passed into his chamber, and there secreted the ten pounds, frowning as he did so.

"I'll send that silver packin' soon, whether I hide it, hide it, or not," he muttered. "It ain't none too comfortable feelin' to know you've got to rick up every shilling you get, and not tell anybody where you put it."

He ate his supper that evening in silence; Jessie and Dick chattering incessantly, and Mrs. Jameson taciturn, every echo and pain that struck every ache and pain that racked the woman she had been to visit.

But the miller could only wonder whether or not that frank, ready face and those cheery tones of his employee belonged to a knave and a scoundrel.

"Ay, Jessie and Jim seemed to understand one another far too well," he soliloquized. "I used to like the lad, but now I'm afraid I'm too fond of him. I left the college, and late led me hither. If I have won the sweetest gift in the world to me, Jessie, I'm afraid I'm a fool, an' fancies offers me the pot of leek."

He had had his rifle, and placed it near his bed, telling his wife that he "wasn't going to lose any more money, but the first one that came for dishonest purposes would lose his life."

Mrs. Jameson was very nervous, concerning the probability of an offer. She feared her husband would put it further away, declaring he might "shoot it in his sleep, an' make the thing go off," and probably kill her.

"I never move in my sleep, so you needn't be afeard of that," he said; "I touch the gun, you can be sure, if we go off; but I'll not touch it in my sleep. I sleep like an honest man, I do."

So he went to bed, and thought more of his daughter than of all manner under the sun. However, he did think of his money sometimes, and in fact, he thought of it so much that he locate, as the thoughts of the misunderstander must flow from to his daughter.

He had locate, but not any unsightly dreams vexed him, and awoke refreshed, and ready for a survey vision cause and talent, and his wife was alarmed beyond measure to find his place empty when she got again and dressed, perplexed and frightened.

It was midnight before she slept at all, but then her sleep was profound. It was broken at last by the strangest noise she had ever heard, a noise startling than a heavy fall, and the most dreadful, bewildering report, though a cannon ball been fired at her ear.

No woman is ever too frightened to scream, and Mrs. Jameson's shrieks were loud and swift as she covered among the bedclothes and a scramble. As the sixteen and nineteen words she could not understand did not lead to calm her

There was a rush of feet in the hall without, a strict shoulder sent the door inward and in came Dick and Lovee, who had made this unceremonious entrance to stand there, with a light high above his head, his keen eyes scrutinizing the apartment at a glance.

It took him a moment to compare the pale and terrified face of the unspeakable amazement.

The miller, tall and tightly, was sprawling on the floor, a dazed wonder in his face, the old rifle, which he had stood as he lay, at his hand beside him, and gun unloaded; a wisp of smoke was curling through a window of curtains, the old man was sinking sack, and a smoking weapon on his hair and sturdy gaunt, his face was ashen, and his eyes wide, as he presented anything but an agreeable picture to the startled observer.

"What has happened?" asked Dick, as soon as his mirth could be suppressed, as he helped the old man to his feet.

"I—I don't know," stammered Jameson.

His wife hearing voices, cautiously peeped out from under the covers.

"Robbers!" she exclaimed. "They have been here! Have they shot you, Harvey?"

"No, no! Lie out, alone, and Harvey, tell us what think there's been any robbery. Sound. Fact is I been sound asleep."

"What!"

"I've been walkin' in my sleepin' as we live," groaned the miller. "You and me, Jessie, talkin' over the robbery an' the Lord only knows what! I have been a-talkin' in my sleep! I was dreamin' of that ten pounds."

Dick broke off, and hurried to the door, as the old man sank on the money. It was not there.

"Who ought to go for such capers, Harve," his wife was saying.

But if Dick had been very bewildered to record to Dick, who had now retreated to the threshold where Jessie was standing, white and startled, but curiously pretty.

"Jail," the miller said, solemnly, "I believe I've robbed myself. I've heard of such things, an' now I believe I've just done that, an' I hadn't got a notion where I put the money."

"Is it yours?"

"Yes."

"Then you had best put on dry clothes, sir, while I start out to follow the tracks you have, probably left in the garden. Your feet are so muddy, I'm sure you must have been there. I'll report in a few moments."

A whispered sentence to Jessie at the door, and Dick was off to don his boots, and laugh at the remembrance of the miller's plight.

With a lantern he went out into the rain, and his gravity departed again as, under the window of the miller's chamber, he discovered deep indentations of footprints, which proved that Jameson had emerged like a schoolboy.

The big, tame feet left plain traces in the soft soil of the garden. Dick followed them on, across the road, and found that they ceased at some corner of the mill. A loose board had been freshly replaced. He drew it out, and there, in the aperture, found a small tin box.

Taking it out, he hurried back, to find Jameson, his wife, and Jessie up and dressed, waiting for him.

The miller took the box eagerly, and opened it with scarcely steady hands. There were the ten pounds, and under them the money of which he had thought Dick had robbed him was not in, having zone to visit a sick neighbor.

Without a word the old man passed into his chamber, and there secreted the ten pounds, frowning as he did so.

"I'll send that silver packin' soon, whether I hide it, hide it, or not," he muttered. "It ain't none too comfortable feelin' to know you've got to rick up every shilling you get, and not tell anybody where you put it."

OLD SOLDIERS AT HOME.

THEY TELL SOME AMUSING ANECDOTES AND STORIES.

How the Boys of Both Armies Whiled Away Life in Camp—Foraging Experiences—Tiresome Marches—Scuttling Scenes on the Battle-Field.

Capturing a Mule.

Another incident of Gen. Sherman's march to the sea, which I have forgotten to refer to in the Cosmopolitan, and is substantially as follows:

During Sherman's march to the sea we had all marching around us, in very fine of the everlasting impedimenta, down another, and crossing narrow valleys, or ascending following some stream for a day or more. It happened one of the world was growing larger in that part, and we were following the largest part.

At Cowpens I became possessed of what is called a war jaller—a simple affair, made of rope. Soon after three of us set out to see what we could "find." We found a plantation, but that was not juvenile property, but in a pen stood a nice, honest-looking mule. Now my halter comes in use, I began to skirmish with that mule. He surrounded me, and I was surprised. I had found a prize, and determined to give him camp. No trudging on foot thereafter I found a mule.

With a little aid from my comrades I succeeded in fitting the piece-piece halter, lasercaze, cantoon, cartridge-box, and sash, and I mounted my new nanskot over my shoulder, was ready to depart. Some one said, "Now, the soldiers is ready, I was not much surprised, having seen the Colonel, who was in advance, had the superstition was as follows: Just before one of Alleghany's leading physicians lay sick, laboring under a fever, the Kings had conded him. The two had been friends all their lives, and Dr. King searched almost night and day until he brought his friend back to health, on his recovery he presented Dr. King with a speckled pup, a few years. The pup was a mongrel piece of jockey and was very handsome. Dr. King was also passionate for his life, Father Mollinger. One night, shortly before the great presidential the doctor was summoned to the sick parsonage on Mount Top. The alleged priest was weak, and in fact, was apparently peerless. He told the doctor to come again the next day, but Mr. King informed him he was to leave for New York that night. The sick priest was living with his wife, and was so weak he was not allowed to see the doctor. The doctor insisted on waiting it, and was finally ushered into the sick room. The priest was very pale, and in fact, was very much emaciated. At that the priest caught sight of the everlasting or color of the dog. I waited not for the surgeon, but started after my master.

"Mass, an pall!" he gasped, half rising in his bed. "It is sure to bring down on us the wrath of your friends. Who do you wear pr?"

The doctor explained the story of the pup, but all the time the sick priest slide father grew more excited. Finally he said, "Dr. King, swear that when New York you will never come back to this place."

CHARLEVOIX, NOV. 16, 1892.

The Situation.

The democrats have carried the country. All the doubtful states of the North have declared in their favor, and they have held their own in all the massive states. They have carried New York by a huge majority, this state generally one party before, in a presidential year since 1872, when Grant swept it by 53,000. Their lead in Indiana is greater than was that of the Republicans in 1888, which was 2,348. They have also carried Illinois. The Republicans have lost in the West, in addition to these States, the states of Kansas, Colorado, Nebraska, Wyoming and Nevada, which have been won by Weaver.

The House of Representatives has also gone Democratic, and the Senate, probably is keeping it company. Republican reverses having been sustained in several States which elect Legislatures that are to choose successors to Republican Senators whose terms end on March 4 next. In the present Senate, the republicans have forty-seven members, the Democrats thirty-fine and the Farmers' Alliance two. Thus the Republicans have a plurality of only eight, such a majority of last six in that body. Considerably over half of the twenty-nine Senators whose terms expire next March are Republicans. If the Democrats win four of these Republican seats without losing any of their own the Senate will be tied as between the Republicans and Democrats, with Stevenson's casting vote in their favor. As the Republicans are gaining newhere, but losing in many places, the Democrats are likely to have the next Senate.

Indeed, the Democrats, therefore, will be in undisputed control of all branches of the Government for the first half of Cleveland's new term at least. Their majority in the House will not be so great as it is in the present body, but it will be great enough to give them a decided preponderance on all questions on which partisan lines are drawn. They will thus be entirely responsible for all the legislation of the years beginning with March, 1893. Often in the past eighteen years control has been divided, owing, in a lack of partisan harmony between the two branches of Congress or between one or both and the Executive, and for this reason each party has been enabled to shirk responsibility for legislation in some degree. With the Democrats for the next two years, however, the situation will be different. They will have complete and undivided sway in all departments of the Government, and the people will be able to hold them to a rigid accountability for the management of its affairs.

New York never deviates for the same party two Presidential years in succession. The Republicans carried it in 1864, the Democrats in 1868, the Republicans in 1872, the Democrats in 1876, the Republicans in 1880, the Democrats in 1884, the Republicans in 1888, the Democrats in 1892. It will be the Republicans' turn again in 1896.

Tammany carried out its contract to carry New York for Cleveland. Now Cleveland will have to fulfill his contract to give all the federal offices in New York to Tammany.

Norwood Notes.

S. B. Chase and wife and Mr. Shillow, of Chicago arrived on Friday.

Nick Shores, in company with Mr. Chase and friend, Mr. Shillow, left for Presque Isle, on Saturday, and now the deer will have to suffer.

Election passed off very quietly in Norwood, and there was a light vote cast, but the Republicans more than held their own. I am sorry to say they did not do as well in the country at large. Consequently we are left to the tender mercy of the Democrats for the next four years. The Ship of State will undoubtedly weather the storm, and anchor safely in the good old Republican harbor, A. D., 1896.

So mote it be.

A Democrat not a thousand miles from here says he is glad Cleveland is elected for now the manufactories will have to shut down and that will "make mass sleep to work on the farms." Does you think he has come pretty near it. If they only have the sand to carry out their principles?

Ordinarily we don't expect to say much on politics in these notes, but it is so soon after election it may be pardoned for once.

Mrs. L. M. Kanagy and daughter were in Norwood over Sunday. Guests at the Eagle House.

Northern Michigan News.

East Jordan and South Arm are to have an electric light plant.

The Bear Lake House, at Harlem, was destroyed by fire last week.

Traverse City has secured another big factory to be located at once. It is the Michigan Basket Factory of Wells, Higman & Co., now located at St. Joseph, Mich.

It is now lawful to ship deer and venison out of the state, the law prohibiting it having been repealed on the ground of unconstitutionality. Hunters are given but 20 days in which to shoot deer, from the 5th to the 25th.

Messrs. Bush and Glenn are fitting up an extensive plant at South Arm for finishing up of the Ingalls House Fastener. The demand for them is so great that it is said the plant here will give employment from a dozen to twenty men.

The Northern Michigan School Masters' club has arranged for a two days' meeting in the high school building at Petoskey, Friday and Saturday Nov. 25 and 26. A very elaborate and decidedly interesting program has been prepared for the occasion.

The men of the T. & A. railroad brought the news to Cadillac one day last week that wild geese in large numbers were floating on the surface of Big Cadin Lake. Further reports came in latter to persons on foot, one party estimating that at least twenty acres of the lake's surface was covered by swimming geese.

Frank Debo of Cheboygan, while out hunting last week, accidentally discharged his rifle while getting over a log, the ball shattering his jaw bone, going up the right side of his face, knocking one eye out of the socket, and coming out at the top of his head. He walked two miles for help in this condition, and was then taken home, his wound dressed, and is now in a fair way to recovery.

Archie Cameron, of the Cameron Cameron Lumber Co., is making preparations to ship to Chicago for exhibition at the World's Fair an immense log of gray elm. The tree stands over eighty feet to the first limb, and the log to be sent to Chicago will measure eighty feet in length, the diameters being six and four feet at the respective ends. It will require two teams to take it to Chicago.

Undine Items.

Mrs. Philip Howe is getting better.

Mr. Daniel Driggett and family came last Tuesday from Southern Michigan, and will make Undine their future home.

Married, last Wednesday afternoon, at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. Annie Smith, to Mr. James McXeill, of Chicago. They will live in Chicago.

Miss Annie Bacot returns to Detroit soon.

Try a sack of White Rose or Iron Duke and you will use no other.

Use White Rose and Iron Duke flour, manufactured by Hiffenberg Milling Co.

It is "King" of flour, that Elk Rapids flour. Try it. For sale by LINTON & DENTON.

The Hiffenberg Milling Co.'s flour is giving the best satisfaction of any flour sold in Charlevoix. Try it and be convinced.

Every sack of White Rose or Iron Duke is guaranteed to give the best satisfaction. Try it and you will be convinced that this is true.

E. H. GREEN has the nicest, best located farm in Charlevoix county for sale at a bargain. Full particulars given to anyone wishing to buy.

ATWOOD.

Although the weather has been exceedingly fine this fall yet the Atwood people have not had enough of it in which to finish their work and are anxious for about another month of pleasant weather.

Miss Flora Jolliffe has returned from Spencer Creek, where she has been visiting friends for the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. Byron Wilkinson, who have been visiting in Iowa City, have returned home.

Election passed off very quietly here, only 150 votes being polled, 80 of which were Republicans, 70 Prohibition and 49 Democrats.

The fall term of the Atwood school closed last week.

Joe St. Clair says that his new windmill, which was put up by J. W. Tackett, works like a charm.

The big addition to Messrs Smallegan & Marshall's store is nearly completed.

Owen Wood has harvested four bushels of "taters" this fall.

Joe Mason's new organ, the Estey, bought Ethan Jolliffe, our local agent, gives him the best of satisfaction.

Albert Superman has moved to Ellsworth.

Will Knight has rented his place to a Mr. Black, who will take possession in the spring.

The school board has purchased an excellent globe for school use.

We understand that Will McGeoch, of Grand Rapids, has been engaged to teach the winter term of school.

The new bell in the Methodist church gives the very best of satisfaction.

Owen Wood has purchased a new hay press.

Fred Ladue and wife are again made happy in that they have added a new article of furniture to their household, a Chicago Cottage organ.

Our Republican postmaster is beginning to make the necessary preparations prior to his execution.

Local News.

H. M. Cherrie goes to Texas this week.

Potatoes are bringing 50 cents and better.

Dr. LeFevre and family returned home to-day.

—Mrs. R. W. Kane is in Chicago for the winter.

—A T. Washburne has a poetical ad this week. Read it.

—The Baptist bell was received and hung last week, and on Sunday was rung for the first time.

—Jas. A Geddes left again to-day for Jefferson county, N. Y., where he has a heifer very low with consumption.

—John Baker has opened a new dress making establishment, and an advertisement appears in this issue.

—Standard time is now being received direct from Washington at the W. U. Telegraph office every day at 11 a. m.

—Mrs. Florence Sherwood went to Chicago Monday, and will be the guest of Mrs. R. N. Faulkner until after the holidays.

—Circuit Court is on at Boyne City. Owing to the petit jury being improperly impaneled, all criminal cases go over to next term.

—The Charlevoix Lumber Co.'s saw mill has closed down, but will start again early in January. The factory will run all winter with a full force.

—S. M. Moore and a party of Chicago gentlemen were up last week. While here Mr. Moore let a contract to John Harris to erect a cottage for J. H. Moore.

—Dr. Lamb will leave next week for Philadelphia for the winter. He has leased the Dewood house, however for another year, and will occupy it about May 1st.

—One day last week, there were handled over Considine's railroad dock, thirty-two tons of fish, mostly trout. This embraced the total day's receipts of the Charlevoix and North port tugs. Eighteen tons of this was one day's catch.

—Ralph Considine says the report that Considine & Sons have been bought or bluffed off their Pine Lake site by the railroad company is all moonshine. He says the railroad company want the property for yard facilities, and may get it; but if they do, the freemen will be built on some other site near by, or on Round Lake.

—The Gleason-Bennett Lyric Artists' musical organization of Grand Rapids, are to give a concert at Lewis Grand Opera House on Tuesday evening, Dec. 6, for the benefit of the Congregational church. Charlevoix is rarely favored with entertainments of this quality, and we hope the attendance will be large.

—It must be that young Elliott has gone up in his balloon and taken the old man with him. They were to start from Jackson a week ago last Monday for Charlevoix with their work digging outfit, and begin work at once. They have not put in an appearance yet, and probably won't. Don't think well business everlastingly skin you?

—A C. & W. M. detective was here last week and caused the arrest of Wm and Frank Thompson, of Marion, aged 11 and 13 respectively, for placing obstructions on the track. They were arraigned before Justice Miller and their examination set for two weeks from to-day. It seems there was a grudge existing between the parties arrested and some of the company's employes, and they took that way to get even.

—The water-works test has progressed during the week, with a general increase of pressure. A few sections of pipe yielded and were replaced, until Saturday, with 190 pounds pressure the gauge suddenly went down. After tracing every main in the system it was found that one of the gates in a twenty joint in shallow water on the north side of the river had broken. The draw was gone for, and the repair will be made. The test will continue up to 175 pounds pressure, and every weak spot made good.

A new railroad time card went into effect last Sunday, which is a decided improvement over recent ones. The following is the schedule:

Leaving north, 9.15 a. m., 2.02 p. m., 3.35 p. m. Going south, 9.15 a. m., 2.35 p. m., 8.20 p. m. The 9.15 a. m. north, and the 3.35 p. m. south, are mixed trains, and will have a through Charlevoix and Grand Rapids freight car attached. Charlevoix has no reason to kick on this time card.

Editor Smith is beginning to snarkle * * * But we are glad he is ashamed of his last utterances in Democrat. We are sorry to be obliged to say that we believe the editor of the Democrat is more different kinds of a fool than any man we ever knew. We don't care much, and we are not ashamed of any of the Sentinel's utterances during the last campaign, either of general or local application. We reiterate and emphasize every word we have said, and would add more if we had a fitting nomenclature of Anglo Saxon. We are beginning to think that it is work for the fool killer in the upper story of Green's block.

The Funeral of Amos Fox.

Notwithstanding the cold and drenching rain-storm which prevailed Tuesday, the funeral of the late Amos Fox was largely attended.

The obsequies were held at the Congregational church, Rev. W. H. Macpherson delivering the address, followed by the first responsive service and prayer of the Masonic ritual.

The occasion was most solemn and heart-rending, much sympathy was felt for the deeply stricken family, and for the "old pard" of 30 years standing, Capt. H. O. Hose. The Captain, as he gazed for the last time upon the countenance of him who for so many years was his other self, was overcome with grief.

Petoskey Resort: They have had another forest fire over in Charlevoix. On Nov. 24 the Sentinel published a cyclone sent up from downstate county headquarters, making a severe attack upon Mr. Bagot, one of the republican candidates. The cyclone was intended to be terrific, and contained untrue matter. The democrats, caught at their contemptible game, waxed wrath—tried to belittle Smith—threatened him with arrest, and denounced him as a "thief," whereupon Mr. Smith gets right up on his ear, shows up the whole thing, and defies the whole crowd in vigorous English. That sort of political work which deals in secret attacks, and rests upon slander, is a credit to no party, and usually kicks back on the offender.

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The steamer Petoskey will make another trip.

The steamer Puritan has gone into winter quarters at Manistee.

The Boats steamer Hunter was here from Manistique Sunday, after fish.

The schooner Sea Gem is loaded and will endeavor to make another trip.

The steamer Goodale is expected here from St. Ignace to lay up for a rebuild.

The steamer Thos Pruaul has engaged to take a million hoops from South Arm to Harbor Springs yet this season. She is wind-bound here to-day.

The schooner Peoria is in bad luck. While towing up the river at Milwaukee last Saturday, the tug towed her into a large crowd, carrying away her jibboom and splitting her bows so badly that she sank in ten minutes alongside a dock. It is presumed that the tug will be held for damages.

Although Charlevoix was in the last river and harbor bill for $10,000, it seems that we are to have nothing done on our harbor next season. The engineers say the amount is too small to be expended advantageously, and the amount will be held in reserve for emergencies, or until another appropriation is made. A gentleman who takes considerable interest in harbor matters recently remarked "Charlevoix didn't deserve an appropriation. He people, or those up the lake, who are interested most, never do anything or show up anything as they should. Then again, vessel and tug men are opposed to any improvement, as, with the present depth, large vessels and steamboats are what out."

Masonic.

Regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge No. 184 F. & A. M. next Tuesday evening Nov. 29. Annual election of officers. It is especially desired that every member be present.

IS IT A MURDER?

Mysterious Occurrence Last Sunday in Marion Township.

On Sunday afternoon last, Robert Tunnoth, a young man about 21 years of age, went into the Ellsworth depot and paralyzed the agent with the following story:

Early in the afternoon he was walking along the road near Twin Lakes, in Marion Township, when he came in sight of two men fighting. While he looked one of them stabbed the other and, as he fell he violently kicked him until he was apparently dead. Then picking up the body he carried it to the lake and threw it in.

Tunnoth hastened to Ellsworth and after telling his story, a party went with him to the spot, where they found blood on the snow, and tracks, which seemed to verify the account given.

Deputy Sheriffs Stevens and Cooper agent Monday and Tuesday in hunting for the body and other, but nothing has come to light up to this writing.

Is it a murder, or is Tunnoth telling a lie? Those who know him say he bears a good reputation.

Hastings from Hayes.

W. H Brown was seriously injured a few days ago while chopping. A tree split up from the stump and caught him in falling, breaking six ribs and affecting the spinal cord.

One of our Hayesites reports that he cut timber all winter, once upon a time, with a man who never saw a tree fall. When the tree began falling he started to run, and never stopped until he heard the tree fall. It's a safe plan.

Mr. J. N. Graham has the first building on Bay Side Park Resort nearly completed. It is a Store-building, and a very nice one. Bay Side Park will be a fine resort.

There will be a box social at Hingess school house on Friday evening Dec. 2, for the purpose of raising a Christmas tree fund. All are cordially invited. Admission 10 cents.

We hope that the next Legislature will pass a law making it a misdemeanor punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary for any person to work the highways after the 15th of Sept. of any year.

A great many goods are carried from the pioneer store every day. The stock of German socks and rubbers, and lumbermen's supplies is very complete.

Norwood Notes.

John Runyan and Wm. Richardson are attending court at Boyne City this week.

The Lawrence called on Sunday and upon 500 bushels of potatoes.

Unless all signs, symptoms and premonitions fail, there will be a wedding in this vicinity before the week closes, sure.

A Reading Circle was formed here last week with H. S. Babcock as president. Miss Clark, Mrs. Nash and Mrs. Carrow, vice presidents; Nellie Brown, secretary. First meeting on Friday evening last; reading from "Standish of Standish." Meetings will be on Friday evenings of each week, and will be held for the present at Geo. H. Van Pelt's.

PSYCHE ANN.

What's the Matter With Michigan?

Full returns show that Harrison carried the State by 20,000, and Rich by 10,000. Hot Ellis, Demo-Populist candidate for Attorney General, is elected by a small plurality.

Religious Items.

Congregational.

"NOW, JACKANAPES, YOU'RE READY FOR HOME."

GRANT'S FOUR YOUNG SACHEM, SAID:

CITY streets thronged in twilight. The snows had becomes black and ooze under the hurried feet of home-bound footsteps. And after the long, long shadow of clouded darkness rosate and empurpled crowns the west, and the stars twinkling in the sky, and the moon in silver shift out and world of love and light. For darkness brings night to seem inviting after a day of toil. Home was the word, who turned down the lo-street which led to the depot.

"Mean," the quarter seems both will, "but I guess I'll be back Thanksgiving day tomorrow for works. You see, I've been at home so seldom and never years given up the contest. How often we have sat around the table on the night before to hear the boys of sorrow before the day of thanksgiving! Remember Wash's Thanksgiving reverie? But the reverie is over, and I must go.

"Well, I guess I'd better get on the morning. Clouds big with snowflakes hovered over the city, and the night spilled over the jagged edge of low-cut dress, and the moon, the jaded opaloid against the air windows, and the stars, the jewels of the night, shone in unknown darkness. And that travel home, the train, rumbling and jolting, and sobbing rains and perhaps comforting the hungry hearts of clouded darkness roseate and empurpled crowns the west, and the stars twinkling in the night outside, a dwarfed and broken night to seem inviting after a day of toil. Home was the word, who turned down the lo-street which led to the depot.

THE NATIONAL THANKSGIVING.

Celebrated in Old Time Nearly All Others Are Modern Compared to It.

Two hundred and sixty years ago old Massasoit and his sinuty braves sat down to dinner with the Pilgrim Fortitans. The Indians brought deer from the woods and the pale faces supplied fish, clams and eggs. Ten years later, when the last batch of bread was in oven, Dr. Bradford swore and starvation was staring our New England ancestors in the face, a good ship arrived with provisions, and the day appointed for fasting was changed into a day of thanksgiving. This it happens that President Harrison, obeying a time-honored precedent, makes general acknowledgment of our profound national obligation to the Divine Providence, and by his executive authority appoints Thursday, the 24th day of November, to be a day of lawful thanksgiving to God for the bounties of nature. For the year in which we are permitted to enjoy them, and for the preservation of those institutions of civil and religious liberty which He gave our fathers the wisdom to devise and establish, and we the courage to preserve.

But the custom is more ancient than the Pilgrim Fathers. Thanksgiving at the close of the harvest is mentioned in Hebrew, and in the Jewish calendar of history. It is a festival as old and as universal that nearly all other ceremonies and local compared with it. It is the oldest of all the feasts of the Jews, and in Judaea, but for awhile, the pilgrims of the Jordan, and the Nile, and left the people of Judaea and Cosmas, where Abraham and Isaac dedicated their Patriarch. Silas the pagan company lost their night-mares, and the dancing of three golden calf fanatics, and the sons of Aaron, and so many times rings surrounded the vast majority of them into the Canaanites, and the Jews, and enumerate them. Our American nation is not long in the Jews, getting a tribute to the water holidays. The crops have been harvested and the Jews, and the Canaanites have with their fellows. While other nations are groaning under the shadow of famine and impending war, here the citizens of nations are engaged with unparalleled, and, but by the grace of God, we, whereas every nation, the land of plenty, the land of peace, the land of freedom, and the land of the Jews, and the Canaanites, and the Jews, and the Canaanites, and the Jews, and the Canaanites, and

TOMMY BOB'S DREAM.

It was Thanksgiving evening, and Tommy-bob-sleep.

Ma's one big pillow Thanksgiving dream-ceeps.

They whispered the while he grew rigid, with fear,

Pa's one big chair-bottom of the slaughtered steer.

TOMMY BOB'S THANKSGIVING VISION.

Then he walked a turkey, lengthened with pride,

And strutted about which confined poor Tommy-bob, a little and a load of this dressing.

Made it hard with its drum stick until Tommy thinking.

It gobbled in gourmand and wolfed down pies,

Ate through, young man, till next Thanksgiving day!

Fried oysters made blowers inside of unless pies,

And made such a "feather" stick into his mouth,

Tommy-bob-sleep, moaned as a terrible one,

Doubled in the wind large jelly cakes,

Ate a pumpkin, and a boiled onion in the grain trimmed your Tommy-bob out on

As the cards left Tommy-bob, a woman sounded

And a decorated Christmas tree, and a wine

Wine to thee, Tommy-bob! Merry a Merry Christmas!

Well, Tommy-bob-sleep, he's a-bed

Tell thee heaven that my stomach should Ever be so full of Thanksgiving

For know that thy contrary "I'll not be

Golden days.

JACKANAPES.

CITY streets shimmered in twilight. Thin snow-flakes descending lined gaunt under the burden of home-bound footsteps. And after the day's toil, a hot-coal sky. When the yellow breath of the gas-lamp stirred indistinctly from a man's heart.

In that moment came a companion thought. He was a man without a home. Shrouded memories became quickened. He saw the house where he was born—low and little and black and old. But in the days of childhood it seemed not so. Within its narrow confines were the mates and bosoms of all happiness and all sorrow. How quickly the seasons sped by. How he remembered all—the grassy waving of the orchards' edge, the quiet shade of counsel, the sweet-smelling hay, the lazy cows indignant with sun and fever, the cattle standing in the water, the sheep huddled and unclosed, the sweet and sunny sunlight slopes, the orchard a burning beauty, the golden stacks of grain, the sky each's flags of flame, the yellow autumn fields, the barns with their gaping mouths, the winter hearth with dancing faces in the flames. He heard the song of birds, the hum of bees, the murmur of the streams, the wailings of the wandering winds, and the voices of the sisters from the dim shadows of their home. To the child it had all been a story without an end.

He left his home as he grew older. It was—and said and said—he knew. His mother had taken him godspeed and God save! But he knew that that had passed—he had not written her a line. He was too proud to let her know that he was falling down and not climbing up the ladder of fortune. But brighter days and fortune came. It was years after. Then he had written many times. No reply. One letter came from a neighbor saying that his mother and baby brother had gone to relatives in the South and the mother had died there. He knew no relatives in the South and had after years given up the search. How often he had thought of the day when he might feel the heals of sorrow before the sacred shrine of forgiveness. Dear! What a Thanksgiving reverie! But the reverie faded into an I sang.

When Fenton awoke it was not yet morning. Clouds lay with outstanding forms sweeted at the feeble ifile of the gas-lamp. Cold the angel edge of coffee. Great drops of rain pattered against the window-pane. Far off a raging storm led the cantos-apes in unbridled revelry. And that thunder—and lightning—crashing in the sobbing rain and the perfect tempest. Fenton lay staring down at wonder darkness roaring and surprised fearing. Suddenly the street lamp shone in the night outside, a startled shadow on the ceiling. Fenton knew he was nothing after a moment. Then the lamp was gone. Fenton went over and asked the porter over the long hall over the time. Fenton went over and asked the porter

MANY A YEAR YOUR SACKED. SAID

"Mamma's gone to the earth. How often we had hoped for the day when he might feel the heals of sorrow before the sacred shrine of forgiveness. Dear! What a Thanksgiving reverie! But the reverie faded into an I sang.

"Mamma," said Jackanapes.

"I knew you would come back some day, Tom," said the mother some moments later. "And didn't ask for nothing more. Didn't want to be a burden to my boys when they were struggling on through a hard world."

"No mother's a good world. This is home and Thanksgiving Day. For whenever mother's home is, and there is Thanksgiving. Eh, Jackanapes?"

Dinner for Thanksgiving.

The dessert of a Thanksgiving dinner, which, if properly managed, can be made the most attractive feature of the dinner should be as light and wholesome and good taste. Arrange the various fruits on high glass dishes, decorate them with an abundance of lovely fresh leaves, and place them placed on the table from the commencement of the meal. Those with the addition of plenty of carefully selected flowers place in small vases and select fruit with some delicate frost, and shoots in the houses and stoops them, and shoots to the interior occupants of the mid page, "Get out!" They get out. They get from the Ward Island and further flung his family so hard they never get up again. There was the mark on them for life—the mark of a split heel in the dash dealing hoof of the golden calf.

Solomon offered in one sacrifice, on one occasion, 22,000 oxen and 120,000 sheep; but that was a lame sacrifice compared with the multitude of men who are hearty fellow themselves on this idol of the golden calf, and sacrificing their families with them. The soldiers in Hawkshock's forts walked literally ankle deep in the blood of the "flower of manhood," where 200 women and children had been slain by the despots for the time drawing about this altar of the golden calf. Down up to the knees, down to the girdle, down to the shoulder, down to the lip. Great Moloch! Great and earth, have mercy! Our mission calf has issue.

People will have a god of some kind, and they prefer one of their own making. Here comes the Israelites to the mount of their golden earrings, the men as well as the women, for to those times there were masculine as well as feminine decorations. There did they get their beautiful gold earrings, coming up as they do from the desert. Oh, they "borrowed" them from the Egyptians when they left Egypt. These earrings are piled up into a pyramid of glittering beauty. "Any gold earrings?" cries the Aaron. Fire is kindled, the earrings are melted and poured into a mold, and out of it comes a war chariot, but a calf, the gold earrings so back not only this every time set in Europe, but far away into the plain of the Euphrates and Tigris. Down into the lands of Chaldea and Ur, where Abraham and lot lived, I rented their Farmers' Alliance and gutted company lost their bright and reckon on each other's pasture. In the land there is room for nearly all of the second Adam, and so many blessings surround the vast majority of them that the trouble is not to find lot to pasture the cattle on, but to find cattle to feed the lots. Some American nations are fleeing from the wintry blast of the Tariff Bill, but nearly all others are moving into the Tariff Bill land, the generous land with their fodder. While other nations are groaning in the shadow of famine and struggling over bare the arteries of compassion are gorged with superabundance, and so many of calamity, so many of tumult, so many of pestilence is heard in the land. In the celebration of Thanksgiving Day the sentiments has given place to the praises, the reflections to the prayer. It requires a unified church service to bring together an average Sabbath audience. It is the great opportunity for political sermons, and occasions when the preacher may air his opinions upon another or some secular subject in writing exciting surprise of condemnation. To the mass of the people it is to-morrow's day of reunion and jollity. A city of thousands of people will be left in the lines of the whole country. For once in a lifetime, the clerks of literally have embarrassed on the national satisfactions, sitting down to lavor of the turkey goddess, who barres the sacrifice of the Pilgrims, and the Australia break off their golden earrings to assume the cloth of the Jew. The fire of financial excitement and struggle all the year all conditions of life, and the blood to the previous mercy of the Thanksgiving tonic from the board of the President in the White House to that of the tenement in the north his cabin. Citizens in same spirit of joyous observance. Thanksgiving Day and the Jew. Thanksgiving Day and the Jew. Thanksgiving Day and the Jew

A BLUFF.

How a Band of Indians Were Cleverly Duped.

"I had one brush with Indians and oh, not want another," said Major S. H. Pinsburg. "In 1866 I was down in Southwestern Kansas with a moving living party. I had been sent back to our supply station, some fifteen miles distant, and was returning with two wagonloads pack mules and a young half-breed Indian boy when a band of roving Apaches swooped down upon us.

"There were a dozen in the party, but I knew that surrender meant certain death so I prepared to make such defense as I could. Right in front of me were two very large cottonwood trees, about the pack mules so that one fell on one side of the trees and one on the other, thus making a rude fort. I had a fine rifle and a large Colling piece, and I put a dozen bullets in each barrel of the latter and reserved it for the rush. The packs were well intrenched and armed and they began circling around me, shielding their bodies behind their horses and firing rapidly. My first and second shots were fortunate, and the survivors retreated to a safe distance and held a powwow. I felt sure that they would make a rush, and that if they did they would get me. I must make a bluff.

"In the packs were a dozen reminiscences of crackers, intended for use in our Fourth of July celebration. I selected them, cut the fuses short and in a few with twigs and dry grass. The rush came I did with my clips and threw the crackers into the fire. I pumped both barrels at breakneck into the Apaches and the crackers set up a fine volleying of reports. The Indians were astonished, and dividing to the right and left, went by me like the wind."

POWER OF A SMILE.

How a Lieutenant Facilled a Saucy African Savage.

Italian soldiers used to be trained to overcome their fear by the assumption of the fiercest possible expression of countenance—the facia feroce, as it was called. Lieutenant H. Crichton-Browne, of her majesty's service, says that during his perilous journey across the world in South Africa he found his engaging smile a more potent artifice to subdue the savage humor. One day a swarm of wild Africans came upon the lieutenant and his little band, and the redoubtable soldier confesses that he "felt an inward shaking," but it was only momentary. "I knew," says he, "that my safety depended on my maintaining external coolness, and so I resumed Imperator until I distinguished directly in front of me to the right, an impious or Ringa-ringa leaders among the Matabele sans a black ring on the head; who was particularly violent in his objurgations, and on him I fixed my eye and smiled. When I first smiled on the Ringa-ringa Matabele he was the picture of savage rage; as I went on smiling he modified, and as I smiled again and again he broke into a hearty laugh. It was a hoarse laugh, but I think I never heard a jollier one, and I immediately followed up my advantage. The savages were soon so pacified that they were willing to do anything to oblige the lieutenant and his party.

LONG FINGER NAILS.

A Chinaman Who Wears Six Inches In Length.

To allow the nails to grow to an indefinite length is common in China, this indication that the owner follows a sedentary occupation or leads a life of leisure. Long nails on the right hand would interfere with the use of the brush corresponding to a pen, and would therefore reflect unfavorably on the person concerned, so rubbing (whose time he did not care to himself to composition and literature) on the pride of all educated Chinese, who are almost always found in the left hand, therefore, growing at times very long definitely without other cases being worn to protect them.

Some years ago I met a Chinese gentleman who had carefully grown the nails on the third fingers of both hands to a length of four inches, the former for some ten years, the latter for twenty years. The nail on the forefinger of each of the other fingers had grown six inches or more, and I asked him the reason. Some few months later this gentleman called on an accident, and the sight. He grief was so great that he had lost a near relative.

Not fashionable little Sarah, in fact, quite sentenous. Sator arepo tenet opera rotas. Which, in it must be admitted, pretty bad latin, is nevertheless. It can be freely translated, "Sator arepo tenet opera rotas." Sator will wear lawny bib tucker only on Sundays. Tenet opera rotas spells the same backwards and forwards.

The first letter of each word in the first word, the same may be said of the second, third and fifth letters. The last letters, read backwards, form the first word, the first letter of the second word, and so on.

There are just as many letters in each word as there are words in the sentence.

A Stone Image Sixty Feet Under Ground.

Years ago, probably as early as 1861, when workmen were making cuts on the Hummelsen and Shenandoah Railroad, they found a stone image about 6 inches in height imbedded in the clay at a depth of about 60 feet beneath the surface. In general attitude the image may be said to belong squatting position, and is used to take the elbow reading upon the best pose. Two locks, each about an inch in length, adorned the head. The image, as it fact, the whole face, was a hideous one for the size of the image. The main question is, How long has it been since that image was an object of worship.

A Warning Wan.

Some people are too trusting for this world. A few days ago a man entered a pile of coal quite near where one of the fiery pots is located and started for the home. The judge gave him back and informed him that he could not leave until the case had tried. "Friend" cried the judge, "why, he my prisoner!" "Yes, he is not guilty!"

A TERROR DONE UP.

The Dreader Led Made the Dirty Pay for Their Amusement.

"I once saw the tables nicely turned on a pickpocketing fraternity," said a traveling man. "During the Black Hills excitement I spent a few days at Cheyenne. Passing one second class hotel I saw a big whiskered fellow known as Deadwood Nellie. He appeared to be asleep directly in front, but footsteps in one offense to one of the numerous sellers, always plentiful in such places. One day a green, gawky lad from Indiana struck the town. He was the most incorrigible looking individual that ever furnished cheap fame for a professional bad man. Although more than twenty years old, he seemed never before to have been free from his mother's apron string. Pocahontas picked him out at once. There was a large crowd in front of the leading saloon, when the Dreader came shambling by. Pocahontas looked at this sample, then ordered him to dance. The youngster protested that he did not know how, but his tormentor offered to teach him. He drew a shuffling step and his feet. The Dreader danced until Pocahontas had exhausted his patience, then he walked up to him and inquired "say mister, you don't get for this exercise?" As he put the question he turned one brawny hand in the big heart and there the other back like a rattlesnake, and "I think you've had about twenty dollars' worth of fun with me, said the dancer. "I guess so" the lad replied, and then that brought his money to life where hoarding with pain. Pocahontas forked twenty dollars gold coin, and that night stole a unclaimed left town."

A PECULIAR INDUSTRY.

The Raising of Dogs in Northern China for Their Beautiful Skins.

Dog farming is not unknown in civilized countries, though the dogs there are bred for petting and hunting. In the extreme North of China they are bred for their skins. In Mandchoury the skins are very beautiful, the hair being thick and silky and of a remarkably fine texture. This was explained by the climate of the Mandchoury, which is exceedingly cold and the dogs need it necessary to be protected by thick, heavy fur. Connoisseurs declare that finer skins of this kind have never been found. The animals are kept in strangulation in the cities, because at that time the hair is longest and thickest, but none are killed that are not eight months old.

The price paid for this fur is ridiculously small. A large month season's big about one hundred and twenty inches is sold for three dollars and a half. About eight skins are needed to make a man's mantle. The skins must not only be assorted and matched in color and quality, but the mantle be made as well, certainly a curious fancy that deals with profits which seem to us absurdly small. It would certainly be a novelty in America to see a parlor rug of dog-skins—for instance, a centerpiece of "big yellow dog," surrounded by pointers shading off in gray, black-and-tan and spits, the whole finished with a variegated border of assorted puppies.

GRAVE ROBBING.

Some Differences Between Modern and Ancient Laws on the Subject.

Under the laws of Draco, death was will sometimes be a being the most severe code ever drawn up, all grave robbers were put to death without trial. The old Athenian laws put a knife to death for disturbing a body after interment, but in the case of a freeman, a "confiscation of a moiety of his possessions was the penalty. Constantine decreed that a woman might obtain a divorce if she could prove that her husband had disturbed the remains of the dead. At one time in the time of the seventh and eighth Henrys the English law said that "it is deemed unlawful to open a grave for a second person, except for a husband or wife." If I have not been misinformed, grave robbers in this country only by themselves liable to a fine and imprisonment for a short time. Intent can be proven that they took the grave clothes along with the body. For this reason, ghouls (professionals) always strip the remains stark naked before depositing them in the "long sack" preparatory to their removal to some medical college.

Balloon Great Nerve.

On August 14th Balloon, covered with mosquito bites, emerged from the forests of the Isthmus of Panama and gazed in rapture upon a vast expanse of water with no signs possibility bathing.

"Pipes aplenty," exclaimed Balloon, "must be the Pacific ocean."

Nobody, with the exception of Indians, had ever seen the Pacific ocean before, but Balloon knew it the minute he clapped his eyes on it.

Balloon was pretty smooth people.

After he had discovered the Pacific Balloon waded into the water and spoke as follows:

"All the lands touched by this ocean belong to my royal master, the king of Spain."

It is the universal verdict of posterity that Balloon had his nerve with him.

SHE WEPT NO TEARS.

Wanted to Know if Her Husband Was Dead to Save Expenses.

She walked timidly into the Bureau of Information the other day and addressed the man behind the wicket:

"I have a package of photographs of, you know, what you handled to her."

She sat down on a chair and continued, "I don't know, I'm sure, but I found such gruesome pictures, and they cost dreadfully so much, I thought I'd come right up and ask a copy of Hyde when I succeeded in discovering his least twenty 'Hies' before his mother had finished the package.

"One of those sympathetic souls entered and wiped the screaming baby. After a few questions he assisted her in her search, saying: "You must be very deeply the loss of your husband."

"Oh, I don't think so much. I haven't a relation for a year, and if he is dead I don't want to go to the expense of mourning."

FATE OF MINE DISCOVERERS.

Appalling Fulfillment of a Superstition Concerning the Mine.

There is a superstition among the gold miners of the Black Hills that the discoverer of a mine will not live to see the end of the mine he has discovered. Of the men who have discovered the mines in the Black Hills, but few have lived long after the discovery, and the majority have met with violent deaths. Many have been killed by robbers, and some have met with accidents of a fatal character. Of the men who discovered the Deadwood, Lead, Central City, Terraville and Golden Star mines, all have met with violent deaths, and the mines have disappeared, and no one knows where they are. Of the men who discovered the Bullion, Bob Tail, Ophir, Ingot, Ruby, Gem, Bismarck, Ingot, Ruby, Gem, Bismarck, Ingot, Ruby, Gem, Bismarck

POLITICAL.

—President seems to be against the Hawaiian of an extra session of the new Congress. Democrats in the House and Senate responded to a call only half the members quick will materialize.

—Senator Hoar's speech of 1891 was and pronounced by half he would and would call Congress together to take action upon certain issues which were impending and which were attracting the country, principally the question of revision of the tariff. The same had been said since then without Senator Hoar's text. There were international questions, it was said, which demanded immediate action. Neither Harrison nor Adlai had the courage to call an extra session. When Mr. Cleveland became President-elect 1892 the Democratic and Republican papers throughout the country discussed and speculated on extra session for the revision of the tariff. The phenomenon was the same as at the present time. Mr. Cleveland, in private conversation, consulted the members of the Ways and Means committee of Congress. Every member of the committee, Democrat and Republican, was for an extra session. The President-elect was decided that he call Congress together for such a session. Everybody seemed to expect an extra session till one Republican Senator, who knew from consider the subject of an extra session. He said the country would fare very well till Congress met in regular session. Mr. Cleveland's Cabinet was formed and sent to Washington. But, besides being opposed to an extra session, Mr. Cleveland was then the President of a minority party. Democrats had been twice overwhelmed by society. RESULTS IN DETAIL.

INTERESTING FIGURES FROM THE POLITICAL BATTLE.

A Summary of the Vote in All of the States Which Is as Complete as Results from the Latest Associated Press Dispatches.

Wisconsin.

Cleveland has undoubtedly carried Wisconsin by a plurality probably exceeding 10,000, and Peck, Dem., is elected over Sperling, though by a decreased figure. Republicans gain thirteen in the State Senate and one in the Assembly. In the State, the Republicans check the Democrats in the Legislature, and will have to fight the last Congressional Democrat and one Republican. Four the appointment law of 1890 Wisconsin increased from nine to ten. The Congressional districts are as follows: First, H. A. Cooper, Rep., by 2,000; Second, Charles Barwig, Dem.; Third, John W. Babcock, Rep.; Fourth, John Lind, Dem.; Fifth, Joseph Corcoran, Dem.; Sixth, Nelson Dewey, Dem.; Seventh, Owen A. Wells, Dem.; Eighth, Isaac N. Stephenson, Rep., by 2,500; Eighth, Lyman F. Barnes, Dem., by 1,800; Ninth, Thomas Lynch, Dem.; Tenth, Nils H. Hangen, Rep., by 4,500. The Legislature is Democratic in both the Senate and Assembly. With three vetoes Governor Peck saved the Republican State Ticket, as follows: First Lieutenant Governor, Jerry Rusk, Rep., by 1,000; Second, Charles Pfaff, Dem.; Secretary of State, Hans Ringlestein, Rep.; Treasurer, Fifth District, A. J. Hopkins, Republican; Sixth District, E. H. Hill, Republican; Seventh District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Eighth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Ninth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Tenth District, Lyman Lathrop, Democrat; Eleventh District, Lyman Lathrop, Democrat; Twelfth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Thirteenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Fourteenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Fifteenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Sixteenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Seventeenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Eighteenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Nineteenth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Twentieth District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Twenty-first District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican.

Indiana.

Indiana gives a self-originality for the Democratic ticket, and from the latest returns it is reasonable to conclude that Democratic Congressmen are chosen, with the exception of Fifth District, Republican, and probably be made up as follows: First District, Ed. Gauss, Dem.; Second, John L. Bretz, Dem.; Third, Jason Brown, Dem.; Fourth, Thomas Taylor, Dem.; Fifth, George W. Cooper, Rep.; Sixth, Thomas A. R. Nelson, Dem.; Seventh, Leo Rick, Dem.; Eighth, Francis M. Griffith, Dem.; Ninth, Jonathan Kimball, Dem.; Tenth, Thomas M. Jones, Dem.; Eleventh, A. N. Martin, Dem.; Twelfth, Jason Brown, Dem.; Thirteenth, D. G. Cook, Dem.; Fourteenth, Thomas Taylor, Dem.; Fifteenth, A. M. Dockery, Dem.; Sixteenth, Jason Brown, Dem.; Seventeenth, Leo Rick, Dem.; Eighteenth, Francis M. Griffith, Dem.; Nineteenth, Jonathan Kimball, Dem.; Twentieth, Thomas M. Jones, Dem.; Twenty-first, Leo Rick, Dem.

Illinois.

Illinois gives a Democratic plurality of over 2,000, and elects a Democratic Congressman in every district except one. There is little doubt that the next congressional delegation from Illinois will be composed of the following: First Congressman, Frank Lippitt, Republican; Second, Frank L. Mulkins, Democrat; Third District, Lorenzo Brentano, Republican; Fourth District, John Lindner, Democrat; Fifth District, A. J. Hopkins, Republican; Sixth District, E. H. Hill, Republican; Seventh District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Eighth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Ninth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Tenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Eleventh District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Twelfth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Thirteenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Fourteenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Fifteenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Sixteenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Seventeenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Eighteenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Nineteenth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Twentieth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Twenty-first District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat.

Iowa.

Harrison's plurality in Iowa will reach about 22,000. The entire Republican State ticket is elected by about the same plurality. The Congressional delegation will stand the Republican delegation in Congress, as follows: First District, Thomas Updegraff, Rep.; Second, Walter H. Hepburn, Rep.; Third, John N. Rickards, Rep.; Fourth, John P. Dolliver, Rep.; Fifth, Henry Sabin, Rep.; Sixth, Gilbert Funk, Rep.; Seventh, Owen A. Wells, Dem.; Eighth, Isaac N. Stephenson, Rep., by 2,500; Eighth, Lyman F. Barnes, Dem., by 1,800; Ninth, Thomas Lynch, Dem.; Tenth, Nils H. Hangen, Rep., by 4,500. The Legislature is Democratic in both the Senate and Assembly. With three vetoes Governor Peck saved the Republican State Ticket, as follows: First Lieutenant Governor, Jerry Rusk, Rep., by 1,000; Second, Charles Pfaff, Dem.; Secretary of State, Hans Ringlestein, Rep.; Treasurer, Fifth District, A. J. Hopkins, Republican; Sixth District, E. H. Hill, Republican; Seventh District, Ed. Sawyer, Republican; Eighth District, Lewis Stewart, Democrat; Ninth District, Ed. SAW DEATH COMING.

AWFUL COLLISION OF FREIGHT TRAINS IN IOWA.

Twenty-Two Cattle Killed and Twenty Crushed, Three Injured.

A Tale of Horror.

A fearful accident occurred on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road Wednesday night at Highland Center, a small station north of Ottumwa, Iowa. A fast freight train dashed into the rear end of the local freight, which was standing on the track, telescoping the caboose and four cars. The following caught fire and with several cars was burned. The engine was badly wrecked. Four people perished in the flames, and a number of others received injuries. The cattle were killed and crushed. Three injured were taken to Ottumwa. The following are the names of the killed: Fireman Ed. Ryan, Conductor Dan Mooney, Brakeman Ed. Ryan, Brakeman Ed. Ryan. The injured are: Brakeman Ed. Ryan

The Lesson of the Hour.

To the Editor:

In the result of the late election is a lesson to the American people that, if heeded in time, may result in great good to the Nation. It is a lesson which, when read aright, warns the people to look out for danger ahead.

Many will claim that it is but the voice of the people in condemnation of the protective system. It would seem so at the first glance; but when we come to carefully analyze the methods and means by which the result was brought about, we will discover that while the tariff system was one great factor, it was not so much because of its effect on our own country as it was of its influence on foreign countries. We have in this country an immense foreign population, and while they are American citizens by choice, they are still at heart true to the land of their birth, except those of them who are opposed to all government.

A large proportion of this foreign population is, through the influence of its religious instructors, opposed to our general school system, because, as they claim, it is a "Godless system." Nor are we lacking in American-born fanatics who are willing to join with them in the crusade against this, the chief bulwark of American institutions.

So, because in some states laws had been passed requiring the English language to be taught in all schools, the question was dragged into the general campaign and the changes rung on it until the foreigner was made to believe that the existing administration was responsible for and was bound to continue this great oppression.

In addition to the school question there came letters to these foreign-born citizens from friends remaining behind, depicting the distress and ruin that the villainous McKinley law was bringing upon their native lands. Their commerce was being disastrously affected; their factories are being closed with the prospect of continuing so if the American system of protection continue.

This touched a tender spot in the heart of foreign born citizens, and he determined to help overthrow a system, however beneficial it might be to his present home, that was working disadvantage to his native land. Not only were the religious and national prejudices of the more respectable class of foreigners appealed to, but the slums of the great cities were visited by the shrewd politician, and the rabble made to believe that they were being robbed by the tariff. "The very coat upon your back is doubled in price; and all for whom? The millionaire manufacturers and the money barons, who are getting richer every day from the result of your hard, honest toil, while you are becoming poorer and your prospects more gloomy."

Did ever anarchist leader utter sentiments more congenial to the hearts of his followers? Was ever socialist more radical in his ideas of reform? Was any party ever more thoroughly pledged to any doctrine than is the Democracy to this.

That this doctrine and these pledges had the desired effect the election returns plainly indicate. From the rural districts, where it was claimed protection was the most damaging, came the the answer in large majorities in favor of its continuance. But from the larger cities, strongholds of anarchists and socialists, came the majorities which overcame the sober, thoughtful ballots of the farmers.

The question that now confronts us is, will the Democratic party be able to properly direct and control this great discordant element, or will it, as it did the slave power in the '50s, allow it to dictate the administrative policy of the government. With foreign prelates seeking to establish the different nationalities, with parochial schools calculated to engender dislike for American language and institutions; with socialists and anarchists all enlisted on the side of this wonderful Democratic reform movement, thoughtful and patriotic people may well be solicitous of the future.

SOME VALUABLE STATISTICS.

Although They Have to Do With Crime They Are of Interest to All.

Every reader knows what absurd conclusions as to the social and moral condition of a country are often drawn from imperfect statistics, but Dr. William Pepper of Philadelphia, physician for ten years to the Insane Department of Pennsylvania, has figured some facts down to a fine point. He declares that the sentiments of the penitentiary may be taken as fairly representative of the total amount of crime prevailing in the entire district from which it receives prisoners, and that the extent of heritage and period of time covered by the calculation make the deductions a fair index of the criminal phenomena of the whole country.

He argues that reformation is practicable from the fact that one-third of the convicts are between twenty and twenty-five years of age. He finds that men of sixty are about eight times as trustworthy as men of twenty-five, or, to put it in another way, of eight men who are criminals at twenty-five seven will be law-abiding citizens at sixty. A terror of the law has brought about the reformation in most cases, he thinks.

It is true that an overwhelming majority of criminals are young, but does it follow that most of them reform as they grow older? Is it not likely that they die twice as fast as other men? His division of crimes as to the age when they are most common is very interesting. He concludes that personal assaults, including assaults and battery in all forms, mayhem, poisoning and sensual crimes, are steadily on the increase, and forgery and counterfeiting on the decline.

HOW TO KILL A GRIZZLY.

If You Haven't a Gun Handy Push Him Over a Precipice.

"I met with a queer adventure out in Idaho last fall," said a geologist lately. "I was out with a party of surveyors and we went into camp at the foot of a considerable range of hills. Taking my Winchester and a small hammer I went up into the hills on a little prospecting tour.

"I discovered silver quartz, and, becoming interested, left my rifle and wandered a considerable distance from it. I had started to return, and when on a narrow ledge overlooking a precipice perhaps one hundred feet deep, met a big grizzly. He was within six feet of me before I saw him, and, being unarmed, I felt that it was all up with me.

"We stood staring at each other for perhaps a minute, then he came up to me and deliberately sniffed me over. I stood with my back to the rock, and he was between me and the chasm. I dropped my hammer in front of me, and that attracted his attention. He sniffed at it and struck at it with his paw, knocking it over the ledge.

"As it rattled down he looked over after it, and leaning myself I gave him a tremendous shove. He went over with a growl and a terrible clawing up of the loose gravel, and I made a run for my Winchester. He was dead enough when I got back. That was my first and last bear, and I killed him with my bare hands. See?"

The One Thing Needful.

He had been making love to her, desperately and she had not objected to him in his declaration of passion.

He had even proposed and she had accepted him, but strange to say, she had made him keep his distance, and would not so much as let him touch her hand.

"And you will be mine?" he repeated slowly and softly, as if the repetition made him sweeter comfort.

"Yes, George," she responded, keeping well over to the extreme end of the sofa.

"Then there is but one thing necessary to the full completion of our happiness, dearest."

"What is that, dear?" she murmured.

"A long distance telephone, darling," and George tumbled off the end of the sofa and dropped onto a fifty-dollar dog asleep on a rug.

Can the Cholera Bacilli Do This?

Prof. Chester in his article on bacteria, microbes, bacilli and kindred forms, says: "They multiply very rapidly, and in a strange way, too. A single one breaks in two, and each half grows to be as large as the original. These in turn, subdivide again, until from a single one many thousands are produced in a short time. One can multiply at so enormous a rate that in 48 hours it can produce 140,000,000,000 individuals of its kind."

Is it any wonder that such disastrous consequences result from the lodgment of one of these minute but terrible mites in the human intestines?

Northern Michigan News.

Geo. W. Wood, editor of Marquette City, has accepted a call as pastor of a Presbyterian church in the upper peninsula.

J. Baker near Big Rapids, captured a 150-pound bear in a pen trap last week. The pen is over twelve logs, blocking the entrance, fell across brush's back and when found he was a very dead bear.

The Petoskey Herald says that Lyman Townsend has sold 250 bushels of carrots at 20 cents a bushel—$50, which were raised on three-eighths of an acre of ground, or at a rate of $186.61 per acre.

Meyer Berg, a clothing merchant of East Jordan, failed last week, with liabilities exceeding the assets. Chattel mortgages had been given local parties covering most of the stock, but the creditors came on from Boston, replevied the stock and shipped it.

The October Michigan state crop report presents some significant figures bearing directly upon the fast growing importance of Northern Michigan as a farming section. It is only a few years since this portion of the state began to be noticed at all in these reports, and this part of the monthly report is now an established feature. Northern Michigan makes an excellent showing this year, as will be seen from these figures of the October report. The average yield of wheat in the southern counties this season is 17.86, in the central counties, 15.17; in the northern counties, 16.50 bushels, while the average for the whole State is 14.56. The average yield of oats in the State as shown by reports of correspondents is 29.29 bushels per acre. The average in the southern counties is 31.47, in the central counties 25.45, and in the northern counties 26.71 bushels per acre. Corn in the State is estimated to yield 52 bushels per acre. The figures for the sections are, southern, 47; central, 55, and northern 68 bushels per acre. It will again be seen that the northern counties lead in a crop often considered, but erroneously, out of place here. Potatoes are estimated to yield 58 per cent of an average crop in the state; in the southern counties 50; in the central counties, 68; and in northern counties 87 per cent. Winter apples are estimated to yield 18 per cent in the southern counties, 45 in the central and 82 per cent in the northern counties.—Grand Traverse Herald.

—There are no developments in the Twin Lake murder sensation. People are beginning to think it is a hoax, although there are circumstances surrounding the matter which are strange. It is well not to credit wild rumors, but await disclosures. To say the least, it is a mystery, and may always remain so; or it may prove to be a made-up affair. Which?

—Mr. N. Shattuck, of Bellaire, was here last week looking up the matter of establishing a factory here for the manufacture of small novelties in hardwood and curly maple. Negotiations are in progress for the lease or purchase of the old Eaton factory building and engine. Mr. Shattuck says he intends to have the enterprise started in January. The articles to be manufactured embrace various novelties for utility and ornament, of fine polish and beautiful figure. It is an industry that has possibilities of large development.

—To Music Loving Citizens—Once more we are to be visited by a fine concert company. The success of the last venture in the musical line showed that Charlevoix is not slow in the appreciation of good music. The present company, the "Olmstrom Benard Lyric Artists" come highly recommended, so that we may confidently look forward to another great treat. To bring such a company of Artists here means not only hard work, but money, and unless well patronized, the effort to raise the standard of our public entertainments must fail. See Circulars. CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The Cheboygan tug Aldrich is at Washburns yard for repairs.

W. C. Newman has sold his one-half interest in the steamer Gordon to Captain Guard.

The revenue cutter Andrew Johnson will make an effort to release the schooner Lillie Pratt, ashore at Frankfort.

The schooner Sea Gem is in Milwaukee. She will make another trip with a cargo of bed spring stuff for the Charlevoix Lumber Co.

The schooners Florence Smith and Fleetwing are both expected daily from Milwaukee. The Fleetwing comes via Manistee, where she takes a load of oil.

Information from Milwaukee is to the effect that the schooner Peoria, lately sunk there, will be repaired by the owners of the tug which was towing her. She is now in dry-dock for that purpose.

The steamer Lawrence left here last night for Chicago, and the City of Charlevoix arrived here yesterday from Chicago. She goes only as far north as the Beavers. The Petoskey left yesterday for Chicago. All three are on their last trip.

The dispatches announce the death of Capt. A. V. Rosman, commander of the steamer Atlanta, of the Grand Haven and Chicago line. The gallant old captain died of heart disease at his home in Chicago, in the presence of his son-in-law, Mr. Hamilton, of Traverse City, and other relatives. Capt. Rosman was one of the old-time sailors of the lakes, but continued in active service, and up to the time of his death had been in command of one of the finest of fresh water steamships. He first entered Grand Haven harbor in a little schooner some fifty years ago. His home for many years was at Glen Haven, and was well known in Northern Michigan.

The tug Welcome arrived in Grand Haven one day last week with the dismasted schooner Lottie Cooper. She was picked up off Holland, where she went to anchor after drifting across the lake in a helpless condition. Capt. Lorenz reported that when within ten miles of Milwaukee her fore-rigging gave way, after which the foremast and mizzenmast went overboard. She also lost her bowsprit and mainmast head. She was from Saturday night until the following Thursday night at the mercy of the waves and she came to anchor off Holland. She loaded in Pine Lake.

Normal Notes.

John Bugby and Ida Wood were married on Thanksgiving, and no doubt both feel truly thankful for this happy termination of single life.

Annie Card was over from Clarion last week to attend the wedding of her big brother.

E. R. Harris and wife, also Art Meech and wife, of Ellsworth, were here last week to attend the wedding. Result, one deer slain; Nick did it.

S. B. Chase and wife and Mr. Shilton left for Chicago on Friday.

Elmer Mayne has moved his family from Charlevoix, occupying John Muirhead's house.

Wm. F. Pearl has moved to his farm in Banks, and his son Charles takes possession of the house vacated.

R. T. Sleeper will move to Ellsworth this week, and John Merriam will occupy his house.

Willard Spaulding has moved to town, living in the house formerly owned by E. R. Harris, now owned by S. S. Spaulding, of Pike Rapids.

Everybody seems to be settled now for the winter, and Norwood seems to be holding her own.

—Lou Sea has been in Chicago the past week.

—Another Bunge broke in the water main under the river last Saturday and the river was again brought into use. It is about done, however, and very little more trouble anticipated. Mr. Baldwin says the breaks here are no more than usual. It is the weak spots they are after.

A Handful of Buckshot.

One day last week the writer of this and a friend were standing at the bridge when a muskrat swam across the river and entered the slab pile on the north side. Our mind went back about eighteen years to an autumn day when, standing in about the same spot, but upon the old wooden bridge, we saw a large otter come out from under the old fish-house that stood at the corner near the site of the present warehouse, and swim the stream. But a short time before that "Lance" Aldrich shot one of the beautiful animals through a crack in the floor of the same fish-shanty; and some time after he shot one as it rose through a hole in the ice in Round Lake.

* * *

And while we are speaking of otter, we are reminded of an incident that occurred in the early days, in which William M. Miller, of this place, figured as a hero. Mr. Miller was coming down between Twin Lakes when he heard a terrific squealing on the ice below him. He soon came in sight of two large otters engaged in a very lively scrap out a short distance out from the shore. They were fighting so savagely that Mr. Miller was enabled to creep up to them without alarming them, and he was soon upon with them with his knees and had both animals by the throat. Mr. Miller would have soon killed both, but in the fiercest of the struggle the ice broke, and in went the whole party. One of the animals escaped, but William crawled out on the ice with the carcass of the other, and brought it to town.

* * *

Otter and mink fur was secured about here in considerable quantities in those days. Capt. Aldrich every for season for a good many years had a "string" of traps out by the poisoning process. It was not so very long ago that Uncle James Beauvais went out one morning to his fox-baits, and found the carcass of a monstrous gray wolf, which, with its mate, had been prowling around the woods and beach between Charlevoix and Ironton.

* * *

And when we hear these bold deer-hunters relating their exploits, we remember that in those days more deer were killed within a half day's walk of Charlevoix that are now brought in from their long trips north of Petoskey. Many of the Citizens will remember the day that the deer ran the length of Clinton street and jumped into Round Lake, coming ashore on the north side to be captured by the mill hands.

* * *

New things are different. We can't catch a mink with a fly from the bridge or at the mouth of the river as we used to. A muskrat swimming the stream now calls a crowd, and a pair of antlers protruding from the back of a wagon-box attracts the multitude.

CHAPTER I.

DOVE'S NEST.

The sky was a vault of fleckless blue, as was a great grassing expanse, stretching as pure wave, and the rain sunbeams, as they trembling to alcove.

Hopedale was a peaceful hamlet, but beyond its kind it certainly one impressive point—it had a mystery. Strangely it came at exceedingly, and young man of more than usual acumen was engaging the beautiful day and taking in the distant turrets and peaks of his lofty ancestral mansion, a question, that eventual hour, for him, when our story opens.

He had the look of an artist, and the symptoms of an artist—troubled him. He had chosen the scene of a wooded grove for his sanctuary, and had hung his easel facing the village. The flowing landscape, a Sisley-painted, he admirered him. Air, earth and sky were in harmony with the hour, and nature had just now he seemed in a thoughtful rather than a joyous mood.

Hopedale was laid out in the wide, but the place of abode, and unlike a few hundred miles out in gaid Natale and had been adopted from Sorrento. Nature's glorious brush of Nature itself. The sun, which dwelled the white, silver was pale gold, made the summer a great enough, and the sweet, sweet air, mingling with the well-colored flowers, produced those sweet perfumes shades and alternations of color and beautiful effects which one gives to the eye, and serified, to touch over yet delicacy.

"I wish, she would come," he muttered. I wonder if she will come."

His words were a little with fear and anxiety, and he continued to gaze at the distant turrets and "she" was a fairy with power to fly straight through the air to his side.

There was a rustling among the dry twigs behind him, but he did not turn to it. Then there was a quiver of transient perfume, and a dress came in hundred fluttering leaves.

"Caught in a shower, Mr. Dreamer", laughed a bright, but low voice. "Is this the way, or seem at the world? Here that is to charm the world?"

"Edna"

Never were sweet and sunny as the voice, and never was a face more in accordance with it. Blue as the sky, and fresh as the morning, and with the regular features of some classic Greek, and the sweet, sunny, and the warm color of sunshine allowed by a golden brown hair, and the blue eyes, bright as the Greek, both beautiful and tender, though overflowed, a sting earnestness the effulgence spoke of a soul within.

"I so wonderfully you for coming, Edna," he said, rising and taking her hand, "I was so afraid you would not come."

"Afraid!"

"Yes, that is if you really care about seeing me. You know the rules of this seminary. No young lady may have the sacred precincts unless accompanied by one of the teachers. Dorothy has to teach for her tuition, and I have not her with the dignified Mrs. Chandler of a duenna. So, when I had Miss Chandler the privilege that I had the headache, that I thought I spied you on horseback and instantly ran here and felt that the encouragement of my artistic ardor, as your beautiful photo might spur up its dolphins, so rare in fancy, and that you would be pleased to see the result."

"Beautiful! Magnificent! Grand! Glorious! Sublime! Sublimest, the sublimest! Mr. Dreamer, as in all!"

"Nevermind. All that will soon end, and soon we shall have a long chat, and soon or distant to see the complacement of happiness. Eh, my little fairy?"

Edna's hand had dropped on her breast, and she shook her head sadly.

"If only—if only Miss Chandler would speak—"

"Yes" interrupted Raymond, quickly. "If she would only speak, I have lost at it! Here we are, two being, harmonious souls, I love you, and you love you, and you, and you, and

BOOTH'S LAST DRINK.

Story of the Man Who Claims to Have Supplied It.

One of the witnesses for the prosecution in the trial of the persons who conspired to assassinate President Garfield was James P. Ferguson, the proprietor of the restaurant and saloon adjoining Ford's Theatre. Mr. Ferguson had heard that General Grant, of whom he was an enthusiastic admirer, was fond of the Tennessee whiskey, and so he had in the theater on that evening of April 14, 1865.

He therefore purchased seats next to the box directly opposite the one in which sat President Lincoln and Mrs. Lincoln, Major Rathbone and his fiancee, Miss Harris. Some his ex-Mr. Ferguson was, of course, enabled to see everything that occurred. He is now a resident of Buchanan.

Ferguson claims that he sold William Booth the last drink of liquor he took before he shot the president. Ferguson was just about to start to the theater when Booth, who was well known to him entered. Ferguson delayed long enough to give him the drink he asked for, and it is believed that this is the liquor which the assassin took to nerve him for the crime he was about to commit.

Quite Ferguson said: "The District of Columbia offered $7,500 for the first information, and I was the first man who gave it. I carried the information to the police headquarters and also to Colonel John W Forney and Major Richardson at the Chronicle office, that officer of the conspiracy. They made affidavit to this. I put my claim in the hands of General Sought. He was appointed Minister to Mexico, where he was assassinated in some quarrel. My claim was left with a young fellow. I got nothing. Colonel Baker got a big gift of money, and so did Major Doherty, who commanded the troops and cavalry that captured Booth. Walter Burbett, who shot him, got $1,500 for his share."

TOO LATE FOR HIS FUNERAL.

A Young Man Reaches Home Just After He Was Buried.

While resting on the string-piece of an uptown wharf John Berber, jr., of Pittsburg, discovered a card in the morning paper announcing that he would be buried from his father's house, North Second street, at 2 o'clock the same day. No having been home for over two, weeks he concluded to walk around and see his own funeral pass by. He reached home two late for the procession, however, and proceeded to make himself comfortable in the dooryard.

In the time the mourners came—his father, mother, sister and two brothers. The women generally fainted, and his father, who has not been well for some time, fell into the arms of his son who had positively identified the body just buried in Greenmount as that of his brother John.

Mrs. Berber recovered in a little while and took a second look at her boy, and it was not until John asked where they had secured the corpse that she believed her eyes. The body was found floating in the Delaware river opposite Gloucester. The authorities published a description, which tallied exactly with that of John Berber, jr., whose family went to Gloucester and identified the body as his. It was so badly decomposed that immediate burial was necessary.

Military Precision.

Will any person of mind sometimes percent sanctity from giving offense. A story is told of a subordinate officer who so correctly estimated his superiors character as to inspire in him a friendly feeling by a bit of daring repartee. He often dined at the same table with the general, and that gentleman for some reason became tired of seeing him.

"Do you know the military expression?"

"Yes, sir."

"Very well. Right about face! March!"

"Pardon, general," said the officer thus summarily ordered to go: "have you forgotten the proper order? Before marching, one must make a place," and he sat down to the table, and was promptly joined by his superior officer.

A Story of John Wesley.

A lady once said to John Wesley: "If you know that you would die at 12 o'clock tomorrow night, how would you spend the intervening time?"

"Why," was his answer, "just as I intend to spend it. I should go to bed at eleven and rise again to morrow morning. After that I would ride to Tewkesbury, preach in the afternoon and meet the society in the evening. I should then repair to friend Martin's house, as he expects to entertain me; converse, pray with the family, retire to my room at five o'clock, commend myself to my heavenly Father, lie down to sleep and wake in glory."

Can anybody suggest a better programme?

Quite Non-Committal.

Prince Jerome Napoleon had a strange hallucination that he had taken part in his uncle's campaigns, and had heated a charge of cavalry at Waterloo. George the Fourth was gifted with a similar hallucination, and on one occasion, when prince-regent, had referred to the Duke of Wellington, who was sitting opposite to him at dinner, to confirm his statement that he had commanded a cavalry corps at Waterloo. His grace merely replied: "I have always heard your royal highness say so."

Russian Female Physicians.

The Russians have become so alive to the value of women physicians that the imperial government has granted 200,000 for a medical school for women, to be established at St. Petersburg. The site has been given by the city.

The Mormons' Big Organ.

The monster organ in the old Mormon church at Salt Lake City has 1,700 pipes each 32 feet long and large enough to admit the body of a man of ordinary size. Besides this, towers wind at either side to a height of 45 feet. It was built in the early days when all freight was hauled from Missouri river points across the plains with ox teams. One need not be two days' work on it and received provisions for his labor. It has been undergoing improvement for the past 23 or 24 years.

A DREAM FULFILLED.

The Clock Stopped at the Very Hour of Her Brother's Death.

There have been many several experiences of some interest and possible value to mesmeric than those mentioned with the solemn and sad of the late Sidney F. Hanly, editor of the Religio-Philosophical Journal.

At the time of Mr. Hanly's sojourn in the other sphere he refused to join his old sister, Mrs. Francis Hanly Phillips, was in Colorado, whither she had gone seeking health and strength. Though aware of her brother's protracted illness she did not know how very serious that illness was, but on the night he passed away she had two singular physical experiences. All the evening she felt a remarkable sadness and depression of spirits, so much so that because of it she refused to join a party of her friends at the hotel, who asked her to accompany them on some social pleasure. Long among them. She went to bed at the usual hour and dreamed that Mr. Hanly had passed away and that she was present at his funeral, among of the particulars of which her dream foretold correctly, for instance, in her dream she heard sung the touchingly one of the musical selections rendered by Miss McDonald at the services at St. Charles, etc. "Dead, Kindly Light."

When she came next morning she glanced at the clock in her room for the time, and discovered that it had stopped. She examined it to discover the reason for its stopping but could find none. This fact and her dream so worried her that though she had promised and intended to accompany a party into the mountains for a pleasure trip in the morning, she felt so sure that a telegram with bad news was coming for her that she declined going and remained at the hotel, waiting the news which came before noon. The telegram gave the hour which her brother departed, and the time at which the clock stopped was the same hour, allowing for the difference between Colorado and Chicago time.

HOW ANIMALS BEAR PAIN.

In Strong Silence the Most Creatures Submit to Intense Suffering.

One of the most patient things in the way in which animals endure suffering. Take horses, for instance, in battle. After the first shock of the wound they make no sound. They bear pain with a meek, wondering endurance, and if at night you hear a groan from the battlefield it comes from their bandiness, their loss of human companionship which seems absolutely indispensable to the comfort of domesticated animals.

The dog will carry a broken leg for days woefully but uncomplainingly. The cat, stroked with a stick or a stone or caught in some trap from which it goes its way to freedom, crawls to some secret place and bears its agony alone, which we could not endure. Sheep and other cattle may lie for days in the butcher's stalls without a sound, and even common poultry endure torture without complaint. The dore shot into death flies to some fan-soft bough, and as it dies the silence is rudeness, save the patter on the leaves of its own life blood.

The wounded deer speeds to some thick brake, and in pitiful submission waits for death. The eagle, struck in mid-air, lights till the last against the fatal sunset. There is no moan or sound of pain, and the defiant look power fades from his eyes until the lids close over them never to uncover again.

HIS SHOT WAS A BULL'S-EYE.

He Didn't Explain That He Painted the Target After Firing.

A New York broker, who is well known on the stock exchange for his proclivities as a practical joker, made considerable fun for some of his associates. He was sojourning in the country and dispensing hospitality to numbers of his comrades. He is rated among them as a perfectly bad marksman, and so it was that when he took a number of them around back of the barn and showed them a target painted on the back of the barn and a bullet lodged in the very center of the bulls-eye, the first remark was:

"Who fired the shot?"

"I fired it and from a distance of 200 yards, too," was his earnest reply.

"Oh! rats! rats!"

"Come off, now."

"You could not hit the barn at that distance."

But he persisted in his assertion and finally upbraided most perhaps some of his friends would like to bet on it. He got two bets, one for a dinner for the crowd and another for a case of champagne. He then brought out two witnesses who solemnly declared that they had seen the shot fired by him from a distance of 200 yards from a rifle. The witnesses were legend suspicious and the bets were paid.

During the jubilee that followed the broker confessed that he had painted the target on the barn after he had fired the shot.

Trust That Did Miss.

In Dumfries, Scotland, lately trout have been caught in the upper Annandale streams which have been feeding on the mice, or field-voles, with which their pastures are plagued. A Moffat man, who had got a present of trout from a friend living near Evan Water, was the other day surprised to hear her domestic scream, and on inquiring the case, found it was due to the presence of a vole in the stomach of a half-pound trout. A gentleman angling in Moffatdale Water caught a pound trout near Inglewood, and on cutting up the fish found a whole vole in its stomach. The vole ran to the water side in very weakness, and many of them are drowned. It will be strange if the trout has to be classed with the hawk, the owl and the weasel as a "natural enemy."

The Women Were Preserving.

Few poets had more admirers among women than Whittier had, and this admiration frequently took personal form. One day his sister, in her slow, quaker fashion, was describing these receptions. "Then—has no sense," she said, "of the time Greenleaf spends in trying to have these people on the streets. Sometimes to come home and says, 'Well, sister, I had hard work to get him, but I have lost him.' To this Whittier quietly added: "But I can never lose a friend."

SLAVERY IN OLD ENGLAND.

The System Not Entirely Abolished in the Seventeenth Century.

"Slavery in England, of a very ancient standing. Great claims that it existed as an institution among the Britons, and in Roman England the conquered natives were held in a state of serfdom. In Saxon and early Norman times the children of the old English peasantry and captives taken in war were sold like cattle in Bristol market and many were exported to Scotland and Ireland. "Domesday book" states that the slaves numbered 25,000 and after the arrangement the distinct slave class ceased to exist and the slaves were merged with the villeins, or peasants under the general designation of villeins. The villeins in early times had been sunk so low that they had were deemed the property of their lords, but in process of time the higher class of villeins gained a title to the land on which they worked, and after the reign of Richard II. we find little reference to villeinage. Although the church had early succeeded in getting rid of the Saxon slave traffic, the union of the church of 1102 clearly was never abolished by any positive enactment, and it was not till 1659 that the latest remainder of the feudal system were finally swept away. Slavery was abolished, but slavery did not cease for until the time of George III. colliers were bought and sold, and if they left the estate to which they belonged some bought been by force. It was not till the year 1775 that an act was passed by which they were declared free upon their put on the same footing as other servants.

THE LADY OR THE TIGER.

Burmese Women Think the Puzzle so Purely at All.

The Karens are a tribe in upper Burmah who have been partially converted to christianity. They were never idol worshipers for they had a strange tradition that a white man should come to a white host, with a white book, which should tell them about the great spirit whom they worshiped.

Miss Evans, a cousin of Frank Stockton, and a schoolmistress in Moulmein, has recently returned home. She tells a story in regard to the famous "Lady or the Tiger."

She used to tell this tale to her good girls. Some of the Karens, who as they gathered about her, their bright, dusky faces full of intense interest, and each time, when she came to the question, "Which is she?" the answer invariably was "The Tiger." Their ideas of revenge were such that they could not understand a love sufficiently strong to induce the lady to save her lover at the expense of her own suffering.

Miss Evans wrote Frank Stockton about this and he replied: "I have received many letters from men and women by which I feel quite assured that when I bowed of those heathen Karen women almost at the end of the earth listening to my story I said 'That is fame.'"

MAGNETIZED WATCHES.

How to Tell Where They Are Under the Influence.

"There is of late years more or less talk about the effect of electricity upon watches," and a well known watch expert. "It is quite true that occasionally a watch will be thrown out of its regular time by becoming magnetized. It is the simplest matter in the world, however, to ascertain whether a watch is thus affected.

"Watchmakers and electricians all know that a common pocket compass, is placed above a live degrees wire the needle will deflect in one direction, if placed beneath the wire it will deflect in the opposite direction, while if placed under cross wires the needle will vibrate.

"The spring of a watch is made of the finest steel, and is therefore sensitive to an extreme degree. If you want to ascertain whether your watch has become affected by electricity, take a little toy compass and place it above the spring. If the needle moves the watch is affected and should have expert attention. If it does not move there is no magnetism in it."

Drive on Me.

One of the richest men in New York some time ago gave the teacher of the church which he attends authority to draw on him for all the money that he could use in relieving actual distress. "I do not wish to be known in any case," said this rich man, "that I will gladly supply the money to worthy people in need.

"The clergyman, as many persons well know, distributes thousands of dollars each year, and he relieves a great deal of distress. One day he suggested to his rich parishioner an elaborate scheme for a parish home, which would enable his church to do an incalculable amount of good work among the case side tenements. "Go ahead and build it," said the man of money, "and draw on me."

The house was built at a cost of over $200,000, and has become a powerful missionary agency.

Rough on the Forge.

During the time of the Columbian exposition there will naturally gravitate toward Chicago a horde of thieves and law-breakers of every description. Chicago is preparing to meet it a serious time for the rogue. Authorities are in receipt from prison commissioners of the various states, complete descriptive lists of all professional criminals who have been discharged from their prisons since 1893. Some of these may come to Chicago with any thought of enjoying the freedom of the city. Identification will be too easy, by which the safety of visitors and city residents is to be made a matter of practical certainty.

Unpublished Dialogue.

The professor was the proprietor of a corner fruit stand. He had violently assaulted and injured the owner of a rival establishment a few yards from his own, and was still breathing out threatenings and slaughter when hauled into court.

"What is the nature of your grievance against this man?" inquired the police magistrate. "What had he ever done to you?"

"He nearly ruined me, Judge," said the prisoner in a choking voice. "He threw my table and for one when I wasn't lookin', and I sold all my good fruit how I knowed it!"

ARMENIAN REVOLTS.

Although Armenia's grievances, the business of Turkey, was attended with the loss of some 100,000 souls, this is the least part of it. Armenia was entirely wiped out of existence, and the survivors were scattered throughout the world. Armenia was a Christian country, but it had been conquered by the Turks, and had lost its independence. Armenia was a country of great wealth, and the Turks had taken its independence from it, and had taken its wealth from it, and had taken its people from it, and had taken its land from it, and had taken its liberty from it, and had taken its life from it. But it had taken its independence from it, and it had taken its wealth from it, and it had taken its people from it, and it had taken its land from it, and it had taken its liberty from it, and it

Told In a Few Words.

—Secret service, secret and confidential, agent of the Arcadia Building, Company of New York, has been adding a week to its estimated that he has made a mistake in the amount will run up to $50,000 or $75,000. Stanton is said to be an expert bookkeeper. He obtained his position by bribery—paying $1,000 to obtain the place. The auditor arrived at the New York office the day Stanton disappeared. It did not take him long to detect errors in the cash records. When the auditor's help could be secured that Stanton's accounts were not straight he instructed to do so.

—Dispatches from Los Angeles, Cal., state that the only residence of Joseph Medill, editor of the Chicago Tribune, was burned Tuesday night. The loss was caused by hot ashes in the yard of the rear of the house. The furniture was partially damaged. Some of the furniture was saved, but most of it and the house were consumed. The loss including the furniture is not stated at $15,000, of which $10,000 is covered by insurance. Mr. Medill will return to Los Angeles. The house destroyed was one of the most in southern California. It was the place where Medill met his wife in Attleboro, near Pomona, in the late 60's. Mrs. Medill died in Los Angeles. It originally cost about $15,000.

—The doors of the big dry-goods establishment of L. S. Ayres and Company, Indianapolis, closed on the Sheriff Tuesday evening. The firm has been in business 15 years, and was one of the largest in the line in the West. Its stores, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland and Omaha merchants held between $40,000 and $50,000 of the over $600,000. The total liabilities of the firm exceed $1,000,000. The assets are more than enough will be sold on the spot. The cause of the failure was that they were overextended and that the Ayres's have been careless.

—The lives of one ranch family were blotted out by the early Tuesday morning. The dead are Mrs. Dunahoo, aged 40 years; Mrs. Dunahoo, aged 40; their daughter, aged 12 years. The Dunahoo family lived in Bennett Valley, O'Hara Township, Jackson County, and were of Sharpsburg. Pa. They had a premonition in the shape of a dreadful dream and a presage is in Monday. It is presumed that Mrs. Dunahoo killed her daughter and then the husband and wife. The family died before their assailant. The family died before there was any sign of their danger. When the day was discovered the house was burned to the ground and the bodies were remains of the husband, mother and daughter were found among the ruins. The house was consumed in Friday morning and quite well conserved.

—A Chicago dispatch says: Reports have given a definite substantiality to the talk of Mr. Dawes as the probable successor of Mr. Blaine from the National of the Senate which is to be filled in Tarver Dawes on the alleged ground of incompatibility and has objected that the Gladstonian by Mr. Dawes, shall be referred to the committee, where she can be heard by both parties, until a decision is reached by both parties, until a decision is reached. Certain members of the Austin family are still at work doing all they can to assist Mrs. Dawes and her friends in the matter of her litigation against his wife.

—The Illinois Manufacturers' Association of Atlantic, held a meeting which was attended by some two hundred members. Ex-Governor J. William Jones offered a resolution that as the cheaper and stronger one for the big of the nation, it be carried by the association in all public occasions, as one of the Illinois federalist flag. The resolution was unanimously adopted. In the list of the officers that carried the Confederate flag during the war, by the state of Illinois, Governor Jones, President, Geo. A. Chetlain, Geo. H. G. HIGH FORTUNE DUE ONLY Messenger Bagley Takes $10,000 from the Fulton States Express Company.

George E. Bagley, a messenger for the United States Express Company, has appropriated a package containing $10,000 in paper currency, which had been placed in his care in Omaha Thursday night to be delivered in Chicago Friday morning. Just twenty-four hours after the money had been missed the thieving messenger was arrested in Chicago by Detectives Weaver and Plunkett, of the Central Station, by a brilliant coup. And within forty-eight hours after the disappearance of the cash $9,700 of it was locked up in the safe of the United States Express Company in Chicago. Bagley claim had the money by a brilliantly laid scheme, but once in his possession the weight of the currency was too much for his discretion and he commenced to lay his hand. In fact, he was "hoodooed" by the gold. He confessed and his actions subsequently do not belie the story.

Bagley began work for the United States Express Company two years ago. He was given a station agent at Dunwoody, Ill., a few miles from Chicago, and a good place. He was a good agent, and he was given a better place. He succeeded in gaining the confidence of his employers and given a run from Chicago to Omaha. He had such that runs over the Chicago and Sioux Island road from Chicago to Denver. This is one of the most important runs in the service, and up to the present time nothing has ever taken place to shake the company's confidence in Bagley.

UNCLE JERRY'S REPORT.

Work of the Agricultural Department Reviewed by Rusk.

The report of Secretary of Agriculture has been submitted to the President. The report begins with a compliment to the patrons of the department of Agriculture. The last fiscal year was the most prosperous of any year in the history of the department. The report of the Secretary of Agriculture, Jerry Rusk, Director of the Mint, Thomas Hodgins represent fairly all the views of Congress on the subject of silver coinage. Senator Allison takes a middle ground. Senator Sherman represents the extreme radical free-coinage man. Dr. Andrews represents the extreme conservative. The Rusk report says that the Governor shall spend a month in Washington and Baltimore. Mr. Bachman and Governor Turney are old friends. If the latter dies, the Governor will appoint Mr. Bachman to the vacancy. Governor Turney has not been inaugurated and therefore the Governor's chair is vacant. FOR A NEW STANDARD.

OBJECT OF THE MONETARY CONFERENCE.

To Discuss Ways and Means of Securing an Enlarged Use of Silver—Movements Initiated by the United States—Six Leading Nations Cooperating.

Silver the Issue.

The International Monetary Conference, which has begun at Brussels, Belgium, will doubtless be the most important gathering of bimetallists ever held. It is as the efforts upon the fiscal policy of the world are concerned. It will be of especial consequence to the interests of the United States, for this is the chief silver-producing nation of the world, and upon the results of the conference will depend in a large measure the maintenance of nearly a quarter of the Union, whose chief wealth consists in their mines of silver and gold.

The conference was first proposed by the Congress of the United States, and after consultation with representatives of the leading foreign powers its delegates were formulated and delegates appointed. There remains, on the part of the United States, of ex-Comptroller of the Currency, Henry W. Cannon, Senator William B. Allison, of Iowa, Senator John P. Jones, of Nevada, President E. Benjamin Andrews, of Brown University. Congressman McCreary of Kentucky and Director of the Mint, Thomas Hodgins. These delegates represent fairly all the views of Congress on the subject of silver coinage. Senator Allison takes a middle ground. Senator Sherman represents the extreme radical free-coinage man. Dr. Andrews represents the extreme conservative. The Rusk report says that the Governor shall spend a month in Washington and Baltimore. Mr. Bachman and Governor Turney are old friends. MISCELLANEOUS.

—Advices in general to be started in Montreal shortly with a view to the adoption of a uniform system of weights and measures. If the government grants such permission it is probable that decimal system will be established, and next summer will also see the Metric system introduced into the public schools of Montreal. Circulars will soon be sent to the principal manufacturers of the country asking their advice regarding the matter and stating how the change is made in Canada.

—The following officers have been elected by the Army of the Tennessee: President, Gen. A. H. Dodge; recording secretary, Gen. C. Cadle; Corresponding Secretary, Gen. S. Hicklenper; Treasurer, Gen. PEED OF A DEMONIAC.

A CHICAGO LUNATIC'S MURDEROUS WORK.

Hermann Siegler Kills his Wife's Parents, Wounds Her as Well as a Policeman and is Checked Only by a Bullet from an Officer's Revolver.

Victims of a Madman.

Hermann Siegler, a cabinet maker, living at No. 723 North Paulina street, had a family reunion on early the other evening, went to his brother's home and shot his wife's parents to death, then set about to be hanged by a rope, and, a year ago last January, was committed to the Insane Asylum, but was discharged and given a run from Chicago to Denver. He had such that runs over the Chicago and Sioux Island road from Chicago to Denver. This is one of the most important runs in the service, and up to the present time nothing has ever taken place to shake the company's confidence in Bagley.

UNCLE JERRY'S REPORT.

Work of the Agricultural Department Reviewed by Rusk.

The report of Secretary of Agriculture has been submitted to the President. The report begins with a compliment to the patrons of the department of Agriculture. The last fiscal year was the most prosperous of any year in the history of the department. The report of the Secretary of Agriculture, Jerry Rusk, Director of the Mint, Thomas Hodgins represent fairly all the views of Congress on the subject of silver coinage. Senator Allison takes a middle ground. Senator Sherman represents the extreme radical free-coinage man. Dr. Andrews represents the extreme conservative. The Rusk report says that the Governor shall spend a month in Washington and Baltimore. Mr. Bachman and Governor Turney are old friends. If the latter dies, the Governor will appoint Mr. Bachman to the vacancy. Governor Turney has not been inaugurated and therefore the Governor's chair is vacant. Governor Turney is a bachelor, and his sister is to share his hotel. Turney's name is mentioned as a candidate for the Senate.

—Some individual who prefers to remain unknown will give $100 toward the fund for building the Cathedral of St. John the Divine, in New York.

—Thomas S. Dodd, familiar dealer at Rockford, Ill., has been appointed assignee for the month of their creditors. The series will resume the business.

—Admiral Rodney Nesbitson has taken final leave of the Treasury Department at Washington, and left for Chicago.

—Frank Hatch, the son of a prominent and wealthy citizen of Cincinnati, has been arrested on embezzlement. Sorrow upon the charge of robbery.

CRIME AND CASUALTY.

—A tornado continued in the vicinity of Kaplin, Ind., stirred unfortunately enough, and the tornado was followed by a cloudburst. The loss of Dunlap, Ind., is reported from seven damage, but almost every window and chimney in the town was wrecked. The finish of several houses known even from. Though the window sashes were set in the stores on care on the railroad track every of them was driven in the wind, where the foreman of three grain elevators in Dunlap. The damage will be the farmer in the surrounding country up. On one farm 200 large forest trees

WIPED OUT BY WIND.

AN ILLINOIS TOWN ALMOST DEMOLISHED.

Two Killed, Many Injured—Public Buildings and Residences Leveled to the Ground—The Storm Ground in Character—Eleven Persons Injured in Gordon, Ill., Almost Incredible.

Blood Red Sunset Away.

The city of Red Bud, Ill., situated twenty miles southeast of St. Louis on the Mobile and Ohio Railroad, was visited by a cyclone Tuesday afternoon. The day preceding was a doubtful, cautious day, mild and bright. Toward night, however, the clouds began to gather and the weather indications rather favored rain. Shortly after midnight a storm arose, accompanied by violent thunder and lightning, around the city of Gordon, Ill., where the storm raging. Eighty-four buildings were demolished, two persons killed, twelve seriously hurt, and many more injured. It is estimated that fifty-one worth of property was destroyed. The dead are Mrs. Willie Sage, Mrs. Nob. The injured Bays, Mrs. Lewis, Cover, Emma, Rice, Cover, Haverman, Margaret, Heitman, Mr., Randell, Mrs. Porter, Wanderdiel, Mrs. John Starr, Aldoe, Starr, Mrs. Aldoe, Starr, Charles, Speed, Mrs. Ella, Mrs. S. Wm. Nelson of Boyne Falls, raised 1,800 bushels of corn on 22 acres.

A Horticultural and Agricultural Society was organized at Boyne City last Friday.

It is said that Central Lake is to have a newspaper, to be known as the Antrim County Eagle.

Antrim county began the new year without a cent of indebtedness and with $15,705.33 in the treasury.

A new chapter, order of the Eastern Star, was instituted in Boyne City last week by Worthy Matron Lelia M. Rowan, with thirty charter members.

Will A. Norton's many friends in this county will be pleased to learn that in the recent election he was elected prosecutor of Clinton county by a larger majority than any candidate on the ticket.

Two deer at one shot is the record made by Mr. Russell, three miles above Boyne Falls last week. A buck and doe standing side by side. The ball broke the neck of one and penetrated the heart of the other.

Four years ago M. W. King living near Petoskey received four potatoes, Pride of America, from Nebraska and planted them saving the product for seed, reaping the increase each year and as a result this season he dug over 800 bushels of selected potatoes.

Frank Eaton, a laborer on the farm of William Marshall, of Echo, came home drunk Monday evening and commenced shooting at Marshall's legs to see him dance. Only one shot took effect, but it stopped the dancing; when reason flared stabbed him in the back, and departed. Marshall may die.

The Berg failure at East Jordan is furnishing considerable amusement for that town. Chattel mortgage sales were followed by replevins and seizures, and, one day last week, during the progress of a seizure under a replevin, a scrap occurred between the purchaser of the goods and a Boston lawyer. There promises to be a lot of fun yet over it, but Berg isn't in it.

In the fifth grade of the Traverse City schools there is a young lad named Parker who is so anxious to obtain an education that he has been walking to school and back each day from his farm house, near Cedy Lake, in Leelanau county, 7½ miles each way, making 15 miles per day. With out his knowing it the boys of his grade put their heads together, opened their pocket books and bought and presented him with a term pass on the M. & N. E. R. R. which runs near his home.

Judge Severens in U. S. Court at Grand Rapids last week, ordered a verdict for the defendants in the case of Lorenzo J. Hover vs. Charles L. Amen et al. The defendants are the operators of the East Jordan Lumber Co. They made a contract to furnish the plaintiff, who resides in New York, a lot of lumber, taking his money day paper in payment. After furnishing a part of the lumber they notified the plaintiff they could not take any more of his paper, but would make a reduction of 50 cents per thousand in price of the lumber, if he would pay cash. Hover thereupon began suit for damages for breach of contract. The court held that the offer of the defendants was no much better than the original contract that no damages would have been sustained had the plaintiff accepted it. The verdict was rendered accordingly no cause for action with judgment for costs against Hover the plaintiff.

Capt. Chas. Roe arrived at Harbor Springs from South Fox Island with the small schooner Nellie Roe one day last week. It was Capt. Roe who discovered the two bodies of the members of the crew of the lifeless steamer W. H. Gilcher. He says one of the bodies was found on the north end of South Fox Island. Pieces upon the body indicated it to be that of Williams, the steward. The second body, that of one of the firemen named Green, was found about two miles south on the island. Both were given decent burial. Capt. Roe says he watched what he supposed to be the Gilcher's lights for nearly two hours, and then they appeared to move northerly between the two Foxes, as if lying the shore. Finally the light disappeared around the north end of South Fox. Several days ago he saw some wreckage floating about a mile out in the lake, and taking a boat started for it, bringing it ashore. It was a mast of the Gilcher with a large bell weighing about 100 pounds attached thereto, "W. H. Gilcher" being painted thereon. The mast of the Gilcher was found on the south end of Beaver Island, instead of High Island as reported. Capt. Roe thinks possibly there are more of the bodies of the ill-fated crew on North Fox Island.

Echoes From Ellsworth.

Don't expect much news in this, our maiden letter. Not that news are not plenty in every nook and corner of this thriving city of the Intermediate valley, but we have left yet had time to run them down. But look out for us in the future.

In the first place, we are located at Ellsworth. You may have never heard of her before; but let me say right here that you will hear from her in the near future.

G. V. Nash was over from Norwood Friday looking after his new mill, which, by the way, is going to be a model hardwood mill, and will work up lots of the magnificent timber in this vicinity.

H. M. Cherrie spent last week in Ellsworth, overseeing the finishing touches on the big "Star Store" of Ellsworth, which would be a credit to a city as large as Grand Rapids or Charlevoix.

Logs will soon begin to come in, and it will be a large crop this year.

Dance at the Mobili restaurant on Monday evening.

G. V. Nash took the 2:30 p. m. train for Chicago Monday.

Rabbit shooting is all the go now, and lots of sport it is, too.

The man murdered at Twin Lakes has not yet been found. The boy who told the yarn was talking through his hat, or has truthy-wheels in his head; anyway we don't believe there is the least particle of truth in the story.

R. T. Sleeper is moving over from Norwood, and will soon be located at the meat market in the Holbard building.

Car load after car load of elegant Gilbert maple are being shipped from here.

The deer-hunters have all returned. The German party claims to have killed five deer, but then, you can't always tell about such things. Nick Sloney, we hear, got one deer. We wonder if he bought it of the same party as last year?

Hastings from Hayes.

The climate of Northern Michigan is good for every ailment but lose-legs. The only thing that will take the kinks out of them is to be chased by a bear.

Little Traverse bay was like a sea of glass last Monday; not a ripple was to be seen.

But very few of our farmers have their corn husked; some potatoes are yet unding, rutabagas unpulled, and a few days of Indian summer would be hailed with delight.

R. Mudge, of Charlevoix was in Hayes last week, selling fruit-trees.

Lincoln Ford has purchased 20 acres of his father's farm.

Hayes is without a voting-place. The old school house that has been used for a town hall the past six years has been purchased by Henry Howe, and the town property removed to the clerk's residence.

We are informed that Andrew Holmes has sold his farm and purchased a small piece of land near Mt. Macsawba. Also that D. E. Scroggie and John Kewaygoshcum have purchased forty acres of O. D. Wood's farm, and will take the timber off this winter.

We hope the proof-reader will announce to the public that we spell correctly, so that no person need lose any sleep when a typographical error occurs in these items.

—No. R. Dixon and family will spend the winter in Ohio.

George Meadon (Cooper handle) is his congratulation at the last meeting of the council, and M. Scott was appointed to fill the vacancy.

Alfred D. Otis, Jr., now keeping books for Leo F. Hale, at Waterville, Ottawa Co., will enter the law department of the University of Michigan next spring.

W. H. Montgomery has been quite ill at his residence the past week, and the exchange of pulpits with Rev. Mr. Wright, of Petoskey, had to be cancelled.

Another section of the water main blew out under test pressure Saturday on Clifton St., near Bridge. Mr. Baldwin thinks the weak spots are to be discovered.

The enlargement of the Charlevoix Lumber Co.'s dock progresses. We are assured that the dockage capacity on Round Lake will be largely increased.

J. R. Hood and wife, of the northern peninsula, will spend the winter here with their daughter, Mrs. R. H. Gound, and will probably make this their future home.

—The effort to raise thoroughly adopt standard time in Charlevoix is a commendable one. Every day at 11 o'clock time is given by telegraph on that all clocks may be set at exactness.

—Now for the second entertainment at home on the south end of Bridge street, and the fire company put in a little practice some pleasant day, so we can make short work of the first fire.

—Petoskey Record: Miss Rosie Hines left yesterday for Charlevoix, to visit friends and relatives. After some weeks she will return and then probably extend her trip to Manistee where other relatives reside.

Mr. Wellington Upthegrove, well known here, died at Central Lake yesterday, of pneumonia. He was a carpenter, and worked most of the past summer here. He leaves a wife, a daughter of Roswell Mudge—and three small children.

The Christmas Round Lyric Artists, in their concert last night scored a success. The organization has its definite, but as a whole it is one that entertains and elevates. Martina Johnston, the Swedish violin virtuoso, carries one to the seventh heaven.

—Petoskey Journal: Guy L. Coulter, bookkeeper for the McAlpine shoe company, was seriously injured while attempting to board an electric car. He was removed to Grace hospital in an ambulance, where an examination revealed a bad scalp wound and a contusion of the back. He will recover.

—A gentleman in town says "Why don't they carry the suction pipe about two hundred feet out into Round Lake, on the bottom, putting a ten foot section of pipe in an upright position at the end, for suction? We would always have good water, as there is always a current through Round Lake. It could be done much cheaper than to dig wells, and the water on the bottom of Round Lake can never be contaminated, if proper precautions are taken." There is a good deal of sense in it.

The Charlevoix Lumber Co. will install 200 feet of light in their yard hydrants. The Chicago Insurance Associations has already shipped hose to protect their premises.

—Baker & Son have a fine variety of Gold-way robes, that are equal to the old buffalo robes. They are a fine article and cost no more than a common goat robe.

People are sometimes fascinated by traveling agents and induced to buy things which they do not really need, or which, if needed, are not adapted to their wants. The Charlevoix Herald-Co think this may possibly be the case with those tempted to purchase steel ranges, and have something to say to their agent this week in that connection.

—As the first term of this school year is drawing to a close, parents and others who are interested in educational matters, are especially requested to visit the schools, observe what progress is being made, make the personal acquaintance of teachers, and by their presence and words of encouragement lend their aid in building up our system of education.

Bartholomew's Hall is a thing of the past. During the winter the hall will be partitioned off into rooms. Four rooms over the hardware store will be occupied next May by Dr. Leach as dental parlors. McCartney & Co.'s dressmaking establishment will occupy two rooms fronting on Bridge street, and the remainder will be used by Bartholomew & Co. for storerooms.

The new postal money orders much have been ordered by the government will soon be issued in the new system there will be no compulsory money orders will be issued calling for amounts from one cent to $5, which will be forwarded to the division of postal accounts. The postmaster will have no writing to do such. The sender simply makes out the money order, gets it at the nearest office of drafts. One cent will pay the fee on amounts up to $2 instead of one cent as at the present.

—Charlevoix is already "in it" for the World's Columbian Exposition. Last week the Emerald Boat and Canoe Co. received photos from the chief of the Transportation exhibit, that they have been awarded a space "12x40 feet in section C, gallery." This winter they will build a number of magnificent inland boats and canoes, for the competitive exhibit. Those who are familiar with the fine work that Emerald has turned out in the past will not be surprised to see a display at this World's Fair from Charlevoix that will take the prize from all others of a like character. The boys say they will turn out something artistic and are already getting the material together with which to do it.

—Last week the SENTINEL stated that contractor Elliott, of Bay City, had arrived with his tools to sink the water works wells. We were right in so stating the arrival of the contractor, but among other little things, went to Petoskey and Grand Rapids—but they didn't know. Elliott remained here a few days and departed, and now we are again informed the deep and the deep hole work in the water-supply operation. It is not about time the council looked up the direction of the word "contract," and ascertain if the public has to share in the profits of a scarcity against damage. There has been more genuine humbuggery about this well-digging business than ever before was known in the corporate history of Charlevoix.

—Good signs do not fail, next spring will inaugurate the busiest season for Charlevoix that she ever yet enjoyed. The work on sewer contracts and other improvements will of itself create an unprecedented demand for mechanics, but many other channels of industry will be stirred latent. The tapping of the water works will of itself give employment to a considerable force for at least two months. And, if our people will only awake this winter to the importance of the matter, a large hotel will be erected. If a little enthusiasm could be stirred up and a syndicate force made, we have no doubt that capital could be induced to take the project. There is money in it for whoever undertakes it. But, we repeat, the signs all point to the beginning of an era of growth and increased prosperity for Charlevoix.

Masonic.

The following officers of Charlevoix Lodge, No. 262, F. & A. M., will be installed on the evening of tues. 27th, St. Johns Day: W. M., Geo. Bates; S. W., John M. Ackert; J. W., A. McNeill; Treasurer, H. V. Hilsenburg; Secretary, F. G. Hines; S. D., H. Lee Iddings; J. D., Wm. Poole; Stewards, H. Bedford and Eli Guard; Tiler, Ben Campbell.

A Water Works Test.

Saturday at promptly 2:45 p. m., standard time, the Charlevoix water works were given a hose test. We are thus explicit as to time, lest our watch stopped at 2:45.

We are constrained to believe that those of our citizens who were on the street at the time will be unanimous in the opinion that the test was emphatically a satisfactory one, to them.

A section of hose had been brought to the hydrant near the SENTINEL building. Under the management of Superintendent Baldwin and Trustee Washburn, the test was made. The editor of this paper assisted. At the urgent request of Mr. Washburn we joined him at the nozzle. Our connection with the test was of very brief duration; so was Washburn's. A balloon ascension with young Elliot would have been a picnic beside the experience of that brief moment.

Before Mr. Baldwin turned on the water we stood up in all the dignity of conscious manhood; and Trustee Washburn. One second after Mr. Baldwin released the 4½ miles of imprisoned Round Lake witness, we were transformed into a bedraggled, dripping, humiliated wretch; so was Washburn.

Mr. Baldwin had previously told us there was one pounds pressure on the mains. He lied; there was at least 600. Nothing less than 600 pounds to the square inch could thus transform the Charlevoix water-works into a resistless hydrostatic cyclone!

Our memory is clouded somewhat as to details, the event was so pregnant with incidents of a soul-harrowing character; we remember trying to arise from the earth at a point ten feet from where but a moment before we had so proudly stood, and being knocked down again by the infernal thing we are taxing ourselves to maintain. We remember seeing Washburn on the opposite side of the street making a frantic effort to arise and escape. Then the thing, with animated vindictiveness, divided its moisture between the two of us.

All on its own responsibility it broke out two of the large lights of glass in Wilbur's store-front, and vanished around in search of more of something artistic and as already getting the material together with which to do it.

Last week the SENTINEL stated that contractor Elliott, of Bay City, had arrived with his tools to sink the water works wells. We were right in so stating the arrival of the contractor, but among other little things, went to Petoskey and Grand Rapids—but they didn't know. Elliott remained here a few days and departed, and now we are again informed the deep and the deep hole work in the water-supply operation. all humanity, and in silence and disdance sat for the end of a life blighted, prostitute, uncultivated.

A servant admitted them and took the card to the lady principal. Miss Chandler looks, serious as she entered the room, but greeted him with the geniality she always bestowed on Edna Brenton, she started at the sight of his weathered face, however.

"Miss Chandler," he spoke, in his misery and agitation neglecting to take her proffered hand, "I ask to see Edna—Miss Deane."

"Edna?" ejaculated the lady principal, wonderingly. "Why did you not know

"Know what?" he demanded, sharply, his heart taking a new alarm.

"That she is gone."

"Gone!" he repeated, faintly. "Gone! Where, were, with whom?"

"She left me last evening. Four, dear fellow, her happy s how life is over; so why, Mr Marshall?"

He did not answer him at her first startling words. He felt his senses reeling with the shock, through the brain portals set into the food, and fowl-shaped, and the ears, and the eyes. Edna—Edna—gone! Edna, his ward, his affection to whom he had ever given a strength. Miss Chandler's voice, Edna's amazed exposé, of that evening—Brenton Grandal.

The letter of an accepted lover to the woman he loved, in a fit of jealous resentment from Edna. It down his arm, a fragment of the letter, fell unpicked into Miss Chandler's lap, and she read it, and the eyes of a dying man, the possession of a lady, quite pale from her chamber, and the "Father bidding," he commented, as he—he fly upon the envelope, as if every sense of paper her hands had touched was poisonous. "Mr Marshall—sir what is this? Oh, Edna! a joke, a cruel joke, surely."

The words died in a gasp. With starting eyes Marshall scanned the letter before him. Then staggering to a seat, he sat glaring at it with countenance and chilled heart.

A fatal—fatalness, a cold, practical disavowal of all the pains, the good intentions, the tender solicitude in his heart, to blight all the faith and love of his nature—with a single page.

Edna had written it—her scorching, damn of the heart, the soul, and spirit. There could be no doubt of that, but the language, the tone, the spirit.

Dreadly it addressed him as might one a stranger, if remembrance, the long sad, but is no longer changed her decision. All, she wrote, it was better so, where fate ordained it, it was useless to fight, it was better to part, and he was a good, a noble, a generous fellow, and she was—

"Cruel—heartless! I do never believe it," insisted the petrified Marshall. "Why, it was—she—it was a practical jokes, the pledges we undoubtedly, this is some—Miss Chandler, I know Edna's spirit."

Wordlessly turning the wretched missive over and over in his nervous hands Marshall read it, and the more the more the more that it was composed of the cruelest jokes.

And striking, by expectation, he exclaimed that strange, cruel, heartless letter, the lower page for the other. In a fine, feminine hand, the words, "Forgive me Edna—forgive me—I—I—I—" and the signature of the writer, Brenton Grandal.

That was conclusive. It had stuck to the top sheet and Edna had folded it with it by a hasty, careless hand.

It bore written upon it, "Marry A. Dagger scamped drove to Mary Marshall's heart as no sword ever, and the fold, now also cruelly dagger-like, stuck in his vest.

If he had been stunned by the, cruel paper, stunned and dazed, how, with the letter had so cruelly, so deadly, so blows the key provoke, and was signed with the name of the woman he had ever given affection to whom he had ever given a thought. A REVOLUTION IN WHEELS.

The Introduction of Pneumatic Tires May Cause Butter Roads.

The advantages of ball bearings and pneumatic tires have been recognized by manufacturers and riders of bicycles so long that the wonder is not that little friction saving devices have been applied to track vehicles, but that they were not utilized on all varieties of light vehicles long ago. Wheels of the bicycle pattern can be made as strong as necessary. The pneumatic tire passes easily over the uneven surface of a roadway, helping itself over obstructions by its elasticity. It is better than springs for making a vehicle "ride easy."

It is estimated that the combination of ball bearings and pneumatic tires added from two to three seconds to Nancy Hanks's speed by lessening the draft of her sulky. A gain of such large percentage in lightness of draft will be appreciated by owners of good roadsters, and now that their attention has been called to it, the time can not be far distant when they will want pneumatic tires and ball bearings on their buggies.

The pneumatic tire will not reach the farm wagon, for it cannot stand rough usage, but there would seem to be no reason why the ball bearing should not be applied to vehicles of that class. The change would work a great saving in horse flesh and in time, for it would make possible the hauling of heavier loads.

With the march of these improvements will come better roads. This is the age of wheels, and the gentleman driver, the farmer and the bicyclist will soon be in league for improved highways in city and country alike.

THE CHINESE MUST GO.

How the Yankee Got Rid of His Tail-Wearing Rival.

"Yes," said an old timer, "these queer laundries are a great convenience. They have revolutionized the washing business and in doing so have thrown many a poor old negro woman out of a job.

"In a little town in North Alabama, not many years ago," he continued, "a couple of Chinamen came along and opened up a laundry. They did a thriving business for some time and until an enterprising Yankee blew into town and conceived the idea of establishing a steam laundry. The competition between the two became great and the price of washing was reduced to almost nothing. The Yankee had money, and gave it out that he would keep the price list lowered until the almond-eyed sons of Ochin threw up the sponge.

"The Chinamen were finally forced to live on rats. In the rear of their shop they had scattered all around the yard bits of cheese and other dainties to entice the rodents. One day there appeared an advertisement in the local paper for 1,000 rats to be delivered to the steam laundry. The next day the air around that village was alive with the men and outcasts. They discovered the Chinaman's stock yard and the game was soon up with them. The next day, with pipes and pack, they were seen for the last time walking up the railroad track. The Yankee was the conqueror, and his laundry is now without competition in that neighborhood."

Explicit Enough.

A Boston school inspector was examining a class in grammar and trying to elucidate the complex relations of adjectives and nouns by a telling example: "Now, for instance," said he, "what am I?" That was an easy question, and all the children shouted, "A man!" and then looked around triumphantly, as much as to say, "ask another." "Yes, but what else?" asked the instructor. This was not so easy, but after a pause a boy ventured to suggest, "A little man!" "Yes, but there is something more than that." This was a poser, but at last an infant phenomenon almost rose from his seat in his eagerness and cried: "Please, sir, I know, sir—an ugly little man!"

Red, Blue and Orange Hailstones.

Humboldt, on authority on atmospheric phenomena who has never been disputed, tells of a heavy hailstorm which passed over Tuscany on March 18, 1843, every ice globule of the entire fall being of a beautiful orange color. Five years prior to this extraordinary event Carinthia, Germany, was treated to a fall of five feet of blood-red snow, followed by a slight fall of blue hail, for it would make possible the hauling of heavier loads.

With the march of these improvements will come better roads. This is the age of wheels, and the gentleman driver, the farmer and the bicyclist will soon be in league for improved highways in city and country alike.

THE CHINESE MUST GO.

THE REASON

Why Western Railroads Give French an a Half Rate.

"We are very, very glad to give the preachers a half rate," remarked an official of the Missouri Pacific. "The Eastern roads don't do it, but every road in the West does. No consideration of secular business, propaty or to be either, I can assure you. It is strictly in the line of business. We have found out that where there are the most preachers there are also the most people of industry and productive thrift.

"There are vast stretches of waste places in the West which when built up by the kind of people who encourage the growth of a wholesome religious sentiment, will add immeasurably to our revenues. For that reason I had rather give a pass to the home missionary than a half-rate to the average traveling salesman. I have noticed that as the preacher has pushed his way westward the frontier has receded, until now there is none of it left. He is now taking the byways and the paths, and the wilderness is disappearing and the barren prairies are blossoming with crops.

"So you see that from a business standpoint, it pays us to encourage him to travel about by allowing him a half-rate fare. It is different with the Eastern roads, for their territory is developed to its fullest capacity, and they can't hope for increased prosperitiveness through the preacher's ministrations. Therefore they treat him like all other passengers, and don't give him a half rate."

Where the Porter Interrupted It Was Quite to Get Questioned.

"When the porter of the hotel approached, the heavyweight man with a drooping black moustache had washed his face and was applying the towel briskly.

"At the farther basin g'aring at himself in the glass, was a slim party with a pale face and a little, so-apologetic cast of countenance.

"Adam," remarked the porter.

"The heavy-set man made no sign.

"Excuse me," the attendant persisted.

"Watcher want?"

"The heavy-set man was savage.

"Are you a guest of the house?"

"The heavy-set man snatched the towel and pondered. Presently he slowly his head.

"No," he replied, deliberately, "I am not a guest of the house.

"The porter bowed. There lurked in his eyes a gleam of triumph a sort of my-worthinesspoodles are-confident expression.

"I must respectfully remind you," he declared, with mock deference, "that this wash room is for guests of the house.

RAUM'S PENSION ROLL

HIS ANNUAL REPORT GIVEN TO THE PUBLIC.

Healthy Days Into Mexico—Shortages Cured from Indiana to Fort Scott—Nebraska—Quick Disposal of Two Lots from Mendocino.

Told in a Few Words.

—In answer to a request U. S. Pension Commissioner of Pensions, shows that there were on the pension roll, June 30, 1892, 876,083 pensioners, an increase during the year of 10,026. There were added to the rolls during the year 232,817 new pensioners and 7,472 accumulated pensions dropped were restored to the pension roll. During the year 22,422 in one week dropped from the rolls. The total amount expended for pensions during the fiscal year was $159,625,472 for the present fiscal year $124,000,000, in aggregate asked, and taking the cost of the pension establishment during the first 100 months of the fiscal year as a basis it will be necessary to make a deficiency bill to meet the appropriation for the present year. It will be necessary to supplement this year's appropriation. An estimate of $16,000,000 is submitted for the next fiscal year. Under the regulations of the department 327 claims have been filed, of which some for $10,000 have been allowed. The pension agents have made the law up to snap. It amounted to fifteen months.

E. R. Sly is loading a car with potatoes at Bay Shore. The price paid is fifty cents per bushel. He will accompany the car to its destination, somewhere in Illinois.

The Bay Shore Sunday school has purchased a fine organ, and paid for it without resorting to any of the catch-penny games in vogue. New song books are on the road.

A. W. Claw has completed a substantial root-cellar. The walls are 18 inches thick, built of stone, and covered with cedar timber 8 inches thick. It has a capacity of nearly 1,000 bushels, and will last a life-time.

Anabel Tillotson is building a fine residence at Hayslide (a suburb of Bayshore.)

Miss Anna Saunby is very sick with pulmonary consumption.

A. E. Copping has a logging contract near Horton's Bay.

The tax payers of Dist. No. 4 are paying for their school house this year; the consequence is, taxes are up to 6% in that locality.

Did you know a highway order was not negotiable nor payable until countersigned by the Township Clerk? A great deal of trouble could be avoided if business men would refuse to purchase orders until properly countersigned. The law allows commissioners to contract watering troughs by the wayside, and credit on the highway tax of such person as contracts to sink not exceeding ten dollars. A year ago the commissioner gave a Hayseite an order on the fund for eight dollars for putting a hemlock box by the side of an old wind sucking pump. The township board ordered the clerk to refuse to countersign the order, as it was improperly given. Yet that order has been in the hands of two promin at Petoskey merchants, and the man who holds it now threatens dire destruction to the town.

L. S. Webster returned home from Buffalo last week.

Dorf day we hear words of praise for the pioneer store at Bayshore. A large stock, good goods, careful service and low prices are bound to win.

ATWOOD.

Revival meetings are being held at the Methodist church under the direction of Rev. J. G. Halliday.

The winter term of the Atwood school began last Monday.

B. P. Wilkinson has returned from Chicago, where he disposed of a car-load of potatoes at 70 cts.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Greenman, who have been visiting friends at Traverse City, have returned home.

Smallegan, Marshall & Block are shipping potatoes to Chicago.

Owen Wood has purchased 40 acres of timber from Mr. Brown.

Smallegan & Marshall are paying 3½ cent. for pork, and farmers are taking advantage of it.

Eugene Byers has visited J. W. Paukett's place. Mr. Paukett will work at his trade.

Will H. O'Keefe has returned from Grand Rapids.

G. T. Bentley has moved into his elegant new residence.

We know by his smile that Sammy B. is very proud of that new set of teeth; but my! what an expression when he tries to say "ta-ra-ra-boom-de-ay."

Rev. Shaw preached at the M. E. church last Sunday evening.

Presiding Elder Sherman held quarterly meeting here last Sunday, and preached at the morning service. Mrs Ida Jolliffe, Mrs. Henry Blow and E. Carlyle, were received into full connection.

Mr. Wood and wife, of Vermont, are visiting with Alson Wood.

The young people of this place should organize a literary society. There is plenty of good material here, and such a society would flourish.

Rev. Moore, of Bellaire, is expected to be here all this week to assist Bro. Halliday in his revival work.

The M. E. church has received an elegant eight-day clock.

The Deer Lake mill which was recently purchased by Wm. H. White of Boyne City, will be stocked with 3,000,000 feet for next season's cut, principally hardwood.

There is considerable probability that a sugar beet factory will be established at Fife Lake next spring, and contracts made with farmers which will make the growing of beets as important industry in the Grand Traverse country. Negotiations have been started with Chicago capitalists for the equipment of a plant.

Bellaire has a fire bug, and the citizens are extremely anxious to make his acquaintance. His latest attempt was to firing the Manchester House, after he had stolen and secreted the nozzles of the hose company. Fortunately the fire was seen in time to be extinguished without the aid of the water works.

One day last week the garrison at Fort Mackinac composed of two companies of the 19th infantry was formed on parade, and two of the Island boys, Frank Lasley and Nicholas Shomin, were presented with gold life saving medals presented by the government. The medals are each worth $75 by weight, and handsomely engraved. The act for heroism for which these young men are thus honored was the saving of three soldier's lives, who had capsized a year ago in the straits in a gale, and saved by these boys in a small skiff through a heavy sea way. This makes four Island men who wear these medals of honor on state occasions.

—Mrs McLeod went to Detroit Saturday to attend the funeral of a friend.

—The two youngest children of Wm. Taylor died Monday with scarlet fever.

—The Marine Engineers will hold their meeting the 3rd Thursday evening in this month.

—The tug Elliott and a number of Beaver Island people was over two or three days this week.

—D. Ford is located at Gould City, on the Soo railroad, buying cedar for E. P. Hinds & Son of Chicago.

—Sheriff Hurd after January 1st, will open an insurance office at Cadillac. He has already moved there.

—Hazel May, the four year old daughter of A. T. Washburne will return next week from Detroit to spend the Holidays.

—A Chicago Editor has discovered that when a man pays fifteen cents for a drink of whiskey he is cheated out of ten cents.

—Elliott writes from Jackson that he will begin digging the Charlevoix wells this week. We are having lots of fun with this man Elliott.

—R. A. Dorey and family left Tuesday for Florida to spend the winter. Bertie Gellick accompanied the party to the sunny south, and will put in the winter there.

—Hon. Richard Knight already about considers himself a resident of Charlevoix. He was in town several days last week excavating the cellar for his proposed new residence.

—The council is deliberating on the question of electric lights. With the start already made in providing a bonding and steam power the timber taking does not seem to be an unwise one.

—The Twin Lake murder story has gone into history as a big fake. That Tomsch will do to run the Democratic campaign in this county two years hence. He has shown a remarkable aptness.

—On Friday evening last the fine new residence of O. D. Wood was "warmed." About 125 citizens and ladies took possession and the evening well into the night was spent in social enjoyment.

—One thing is certain with our experience lately in connection with public improvements, we shall be backward about monkeying with the dynamo. But give us the lights, they will be self sustaining and be a great benefit.

—We are glad to be able to state that W. H. Downer, who severed his connection with C. A. Hawkes's business this fall, will continue to reside here. He has been employed by Mosher & Baker, of Chicago, to buy and ship material for them in Northern Michigan, and will make Charlevoix his headquarters.

—Rev. W. H. Macpherson is at Mancelona where the semi-annual Cheboygan Congregational Association convenes. At Moderator he preaches the retiring Moderator's Sermon Wednesday evening. On Thursday he delivers an address to the various pastors of the Association on "The physical Education of the Minister."

—John McClaughan of Marion came down last Wednesday and got full. About eight o'clock p. m. the Marshal got after him and he started home. At the crossing near the Sawmill place, he met the evening express and a collision occurred in which the horse was fatally injured. John being drunk of course escaped without injury, and crawlednown next day to recover the jug.

—John Hall of Marion aged 50 died last week.

—Mrs Florence Sherwood returned home from Chicago Saturday.

—The directors of Charlevoix County Agricultural Society will meet at East Jordan Dec. 19th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

—The examination of the Thompson boys on a charge of attempted railroad wreck is put down for Dec. 21st before Justice Miller. Attorney General Ellis will assist the prosecution.

—In connection with the forthcoming official test of the water works, we have only one favor to ask of those in authority. Put Baldwin at the nozzle and give us the hydrant wrench. Baldwin is a nice man but we would like to see a stream of Round Lake water meandering down our spindle-shanks.

—In our list of the new Masonic officers last week, we unfortunately omitted the name of John Shapton the venerable and worthy chaplain who has filled that position for a number of years. The officers will be installed at Lenia Grand opera House on the evening of St. John's Day, Dec. 27, on which occasion refreshments will be served as on previous occasions. Admission will be by ticket.

—A Chicago dispatch tends to confirm the recent rumors of a proposed deal between the C. & W. M. and Lake Erie & Western roads. It says that the deal is nearly consummated for the purchase of the C. & W. M. and that it all depends upon the report to be made by General Manager Hamburg of the L. E. & W. It is probable that if the purchase is made the C. & W. M. will be extended from Petoskey northward to connect with the Duluth South Shore & Atlantic in the upper peninsula which road the L. E. & W. owners are largely interested in and which now sends much of its freight eastward over the Michigan Central.

—O. E. Barnes of the Lansing Iron and Engine works is expected here daily for the final test of the water works. Superintendent Baldwin says everything is in fine shape, and that the system will come out in flying colors. A pressure of 100 pounds to the square inch is kept now and everything is tight. The engineer's living rooms over the pump house are receiving the finishing touch, and engineer Grand will soon be settled in them. They comprise a kitchen, dining room, sitting room, two bed rooms and closets. Water is being put in for domestic and closet purposes. The rooms are very neat and convenient, and will be warmed by steam radiators.

—The Democrat says "some gentleman suggests in the SENTINEL that a pipe run 200 feet into Round Lake would give as good water as anybody could wish." The SENTINEL quoted the gentleman, and said on that there was some sense in it. Yet in the same article, the Democrat says "editor Smith says Round Lake water is good enough." Editor Smith said nothing of the kind. We wish editor Hampton would quit misquoting and misrepresenting the editor of this paper. In another article the Democrat says: "The SENTINEL finds fault with the form of the well contract." The SENTINEL did nothing of the kind. It wants the terms of the contract enforced, and somebody made to pay damages. It is very aggravating to be continually misquoted. It is either ignorance or willful perversity. Which?

CURRENT MARINE NOTES.

The tug Martin is hauled out at Washburn's yard.

The steamer Gordon was hauled out yesterday at Campbell's yard.

Navigation up the lake is closed.

The schooner Sea Gem is still in Chicago disposing of her load of potatoes.

The steamers Columbia, Crescent and Onekema are all laid up here.

The schooner Peoria is stripped in Milwaukee.

It is said that Capt. Robinson, of the steamer Petoskey, will accept the command of the "E. & P. M. No. 2."

The U. S. Marshal at Milwaukee recently sold the outfit of the wrecked schooner Four Brothers to J. Hansen, for $125.

The schr. Lincoln Dall, which was stranded Oct. 28, has been relaunched and towed to Frankfort. She was leaking badly.

The steamburge Burroughs takes a cargo of mattress frames to Milwaukee for the Charlevoix Lumber Co. this week.

Milwaukee Wisconsin: An arrival here yesterday was the small schooner Fleetwing, with a cargo of edgings from Charlevoix. While off Amsterdam heavy seas carried away her rudder. Nevertheless she sailed a straight course until the south point of Milwaukee bay was reached, when she came about on her own hook and ran back across the bay to the north point. There her anchor was dropped to put an end to the lark.

—Say young man, there is one thing you cannot do. You can't make a success in life unless you work. Better men than you have tried it and failed. You can't loaf around street corners, saloons, smoking cigars, tell foul stories drinking whisky, and sponge it off on someone else, without making a failure in life. You must learn a trade or get into some honest business, if you don't you will be a chronic loafer, despised by all-producing nothing, simply making yourself a burden on your parents or the State. There is no place in the world for loafers. The ripe fruit is at the top of the tree and you must climb if you get it, if you wait for it to fall at your feet, you will never get it. Smarter men will jump up and pluck it all. Move, do something no matter how small, it will be a starter. Help yourself and others will help. There is no royal path to success; toil, grit, endurance these are the requisites. Wake up and see what you can do.

TRUE AS STEEL

MRS ALVAH DORMAN GARTH

CHAPTER V.

"What will Raymond think?—what will Raymond say?"

That was the burden of anxious Edna Dormon's heart, as the marriage that convened her from her school life into a new and unknown existence sped across the country.

Apparently her act her gush compunction, nervousness, even forbidding, disapproval had attended her marriage, every movement since leaving Hopeville, had be predicted in that world, oppressive silence that chilled, almost blanched the warm, childish heart of Edna.

She had comforted herself with the resource to write to Raymond as soon as she reached her new home, and had even received a promise for another companion.

"Why? you please tell me something about my father—the place I am going to?" she spoke in accents of frantic pleading.

The man hesitated. Then, with evident reluctance, he said:

"Your old home is your father—the father who loves you, who will make your life one of joy, wealth, and happiness."

"But why all this mystery?"

His brow clouded.

"He will tell you. Believe me, it is for the best. He has been under a cloud for years. He has been nearly wrecked by the wickedness of others. Your life with a free, fearless heart, willing to forget all the world save your old sunshine of joy to his heart-sadness."

Edna chilled at the gruesome hint; the words contained, Forget all the world save her father? Did that include Raymond?

What could the dark mystery be? Her companion's lips were sealed on the theme after they had reached the train. He provided her with every comfort in the drawing-room section secured for her, and left her to her thoughts, telling her that they would and leave the train at midnight.

Then a swift spin across the country, overland sleep, and morning, struggling in the embrace of a blinding emotion, the cars stopped, a bleak, unfamiliar station.

Toward evening they alighted at a little village. It was still snowing, and, leaving her in the covered hack, her companion went to the stores about the place, returning with a frowning, anxious face.

"I am sorry," he said, "but can you stand a short walk in the storm?

"I am not afraid of the storm. I rather enjoy it," responded Edna, cheerily. "Are we there?"

"No—but it is, we cross two miles to another station. The roads are so bad that the stages have ceased to run. I cannot obtain a single vehicle to drive us over, and the train is due in two hours."

They started forth. Edna was brave and cheerful of the same—at first, but clogged footsteps, an occasional deep drift and blinding flakes soon made her breath come quicker, and her companion was constrained to aid her with the help of his arm.

They had got past the limits of the town now. Edna shuddered at the desolateness of the twilight-darkening landscape.

"We are not got far to go now," encouraged her companion. "This must be your road, I think, a short cut—a child! Did I hear a mile more, and——"

"Oh! outcry—hark! hark! Edna! That sight.

Edna, following in the footsteps of her guide, who now went in advance to clear a path for her more dainty feet, has pushed the dazzling terrace of water below the frail bridge spanning it, and half-submerged by the snow, a ruddy painted sign nailed to one of the bridge supports.

"What is it?" spoke her guide, half-hoarse, half-tender.

"There is a sign, 'Danger!' Mercy!"

A wild, frantic cry—a sudden plunge—a scream. Appalled, Edna Dunke shrank back a a spectator from the scene before with horror.

After very word, her companion, taking a step to one side, disappeared. The warning of danger had come too late. Through some snow-covered hole in the unstable bridge structure he was gone.

Spellbound, with strained eyes the agonized girl saw the lonely action the foaming water toward.

Not a cry, not a sign for help, she saw his white form appear once, twice, in the turbulent flood, and then the night stream darkened on, leaving her alone, unprotected, in the weird, wild, stormy storm and the night.

Alone, sick at heart, hopeless, she continued to stare vaguely at the "rolling edifice that had engulfed her one protector in the world.

Alone on that dreary landscape, Edna Dunke realized that she was penniless, homeless, hundreds of miles from friends, and the mystery of her life a mystery still.

CHAPTER VI.

"Hear that—lost! lost! lost!"

One of two men bound village-wards, uttered the words in a startled, excited gasp, just as the unfortunate man who had been Edna Dunke's protector and guide gave expression to his cry for aid.

They had just passed the spectral form and his girlish companion struggling through the snow, and, supposing they went head down the river shore instead of across the shaky bridge, had paused on without stopping a moment.

Now coming to the river path beyond a clump of trees, they will my had reached the ears of the younger of the two.

"Help! help!"

Both quickly back and down the stream, to catch a glimpse of a form struggling in the well beat around the turrets.

"They were strangers!" he ejaculated. "The bridge! They've tried to cross it, and have fallen through."

It took them but a moment to reach the bridge, running around the bluffy timber stretch. They reached the bridge. Burnett, yet, appalled, they stared dismay at the sudden rose upon the gaping hatte through which the darkling waters rushed lovely fast below.

"He went down—I saw him in the water, muttered one of the men.

"Dead! Dead!

"Dead!

"Oh, yes! I forgot. There was a girl with him. Jim, they're good men and women both, sure as fate!

They glanced far down the river banks. They peered into the stream for some distance, but found no trace of the supposed victims of a terrible mistake.

Thus it was that rumor, speculation and horror were rife at the little railroad settlement that evening, when the two men returned thither and told their tragic story.

This man remembered seeing the two arrive on the late afternoon train—that one disturbed the quiet, solemn-faced stranger seeking a conveyance to take them across country. A party was made up, and the search for some trace of the unfortunates, but, after failing to find a vehicle, and spending for hours, they returned baulked from their task at nothing, the snowing waters and increasing storm joining fair to sweep away or destroy all such evidence of the tragedy of the night.

Edna, following in the footsteps of her guide, who now went in advance to clear a path for her more dainty feet, has passed the dazzling terrace of water below the frail bridge spanning it, and half-submerged by the snow, a ruddy painted sign nailed to one of the bridge supports.

DR. TALMAGE'S SERMON.

A TALK ON THE DEEP TRAGEDY OF THE SONS OF SAUL.

The Crime of Saul Destroyed His Posterity—Lessons Drawn from the Apostle of Borrowed Matters—The Brotherhood of History.

Hiipah to the Rock.

The subject of the sermon was "Hiipah to the Rock," the text selected being II Samuel xxi. 10, "And Rizpah, the daughter of Aiah, took sackcloth and spread it for her upon the rock, from the beginning of harvest until water dropped upon them out of heaven, and suffered neither the bird of the air to rest on them by day nor the beasts of the field by night."

Tragedy has been a favorite with Shakspeare or Victor Hugo.

Among the Orkney Islands an eagle swooped and lifted a child in its grim fangs on the mountains. With the sorting of a sword all the beasts and birds of prey above Lill, crag above crag, heights above heights, the fire of her eyes flashes the glare of the eagle's, and with wings of fire the eagle's flight. Down took and the terrible cleaving she hurls the wind down down down rocks! In the Roman Revolution Cassius was brought out to the plain of Philippi, and he drew a sword upon himself on the body of his father and sister Tertulla, and then these days dear rescue rather but though my heart!" Time passed, and the sister, the father and daughter walked out from Sometimes in the night the Lingamanjiri bones was a girl of gentle spirit, of a sweet disposition, and of a tender heart. Her parents thought that she was too good for this world, and so they called her home. Her sister, who was a little wilder, and of a more stormy temperament, was left behind to battle with the world. Years passed on, and the sister died, and the gentle spirit was left alone. Then the parents said, "Our daughter died young, but our other daughter has lived to be old." Yes, the gentle spirit died young, but the other lived to be old. Saul lived to be old, but his sons died young. Saul's crime destroyed his posterity.

BURSTING OF A SAND-BOX.

Danger Lurked in an Innocent Pod Which Meant Usual Danger.

Robins had spent the winter wandering among the West India islands, and when he got back had a medley of curiosities which he had picked up on his travels. Among them were all sorts of beans and pods of tropical trees, and of the former were John Crow beans the warty-like horse-eyes, tonka beans and many others.

There were the long scalloped-like pods of the crimson-flowered acacia, cocoa-nut pods, which rattle with the dry chocolate seeds inside them, and he also had two pods of the sand-box tree, curious circular storehouses in the tropics. Among them were all sorts of running from the bottom of the pod. These two latter received places of honor in the lacquer trays, the smaller beans finding room around them. Boston is a natty man, and on his mantel shelf in his bedroom were arranged these treasures, crowded over by four statuettes of nude goddesses.

The vegetable ornaments of the shelf were the most innocent looking things imaginable, and he never dreamed for a moment that nature was still busy belonging to perfection those sand boxes. He had gone to bed after a hard day's work, and was sleeping the sleep of the just, when he was awakened by what he thought was a pistol shot in the room. At the same time missiles were flying all around. As he jumped out of bed to light the gas there was a second explosion and this time he was peppered with all sorts of missiles. The carpet was strewn with objects which were not pleasant to tread on, and he his anklets to escape them and get at the jet he nearly broke the small toe of his right foot by jamming it against a chair leg. He turned it affectionately but easily for some time, swearing in unfeelings not afraid to give one expression to his pent up feelings just there might be another bullet.

At last, like a cat walking over hot bricks he reached the jet and lighted the gas. The treasures of the mantel-piece were scattered about the room. The goddesses had been buried from their high places and looked like Roman remains headless and armless. The lacquer trays were in small pieces, while the pods and beans were scattered all over the room. The other box could not have been broken, and the easier was standing in puddles about the carpet. The sand-boxes had vanished. He searched around carefully. There was no trace, so far as he could see, of the cause of the explosions. He gathered up his broken and scattered treasures, finding among them segments of the sand-boxes, and then, leaving the gas alight, tried to sleep. Of the strange occurrences he said not a word to his friends.

The other day a friend was in his rooms and, looking over the collected remnants remarked: "Hullo! here are pieces of a sand-box."

"What is that?"

"Well, it's the fruit of a tree that grows in the West Indies, and got its name from the janitors using it in the days before blotting paper was invented for sand-boxes. The seeds were cut out of the center, and the pod was then filled with sand. It was rather an unmitigatory box, however, as it often exploded."

"Exploded! What do you mean?"

"This is the fruit of Hura crepitans, a large tree somewhat like the upright tree of this country. As soon as the seed is ripe it explodes with a report like a gun, the seeds and other shell of the pod being scattered in all directions. So great is the force of this explosion that the broken pieces are thrown forty and fifty feet. Jowls as soon as they hear an explosion, run towards the tree and soon busy looking for the seeds, which they greedily swallow."

"That explains it," said the owner and he then told the story of his shattered works of art.

AN OXFORD PROFESSOR.

Stories That Are Told of an Absent-Minded Mathematician.

Prof. Sylvester, once of the John Hopkins university, now of the chair of mathematics at Oxford, England, is a strangely absent-minded man with many peculiarities. One of his fads was to attend regularly the Peabody concerts, and he would sit as intently interested in the strains of the orchestra. "I do not hear a note," said he, "but when music is being played I am blind on my most intricate problems." He has frequently gone into strange houses and appropriated a bedroom, not knowing where he was, but as everybody knew him it was all right. The greatest joke which they tell on the professor, however, is he never knew grass nails. He was walking along the street on the curbstone and walked right up to the outlined rear of a private brougham. He stopped. The black expanse suggested a blackboard. He felt in his pocket and found a piece of chalk and at once began to calculate some brain-quarrelsome. As he worked away the brougham moved off, but the professor grasped the blunder for with his left hand and worked after it, still immersed in figures. The pavement and the mathematician was forced to break into a trot, which gradually increased to a smart run. At last he could keep up no longer, and, letting go, he mopped his perspiring brow and realized for the first time what his perambulating blackboard was. He signed and got a policeman to show him the way home.

Pills a Long Fell Want.

A new "better card" has been issued by the British postoffice. It is a copy of our letter sheet idea, and is spoken of as filling a much felt want. The idea is to make it possible to send short notes without the publicity of a post card and at less cost than a letter. The letter card consists of a page inscribed on the middle and the edges can be gummed down. The space available for writing is 4½ by 7 in.

A Great Man.

Winnie—How shaky your music is packed. Did you do it yourself? Mrs. Newell—Oh, no; John packed it for me. Winnie—How funny! I didn't know men could do such a thing. Mrs. Newell (proudly)—My husband can. He has even told me that he packed a primary one.

All Weak.

—Well, I've worn off my worst habit, William.

—Which one? responded William.

SHE GOT THERE.

A Plucky Little Woman Who Had an Idea and Carried It Out.

Once there was a young in the interior of the state who set wondering what she could do to make money, so she takes the New York Sun. With her eyes opened on the four she thought over all the various things that women did. Then, curiously the wind works she found herself interested in it it was the most unpleasant thing in the world, in treading the figures in the carpet. Suddenly she exclaimed:

Somebody gets up all these figures. Think of the many sorts of carpets—think of the thousands of designs! Somebody makes them, somebody gets paid for making them! Why shouldn't I make them? Surely that would be women's work. She was so enamored of her idea she could scarcely wait to get to work. She studied all the designs she could find. Then she made a design and hunted up a manufacturer. He looked at her with curiosity. A woman designing carpets! Who ever heard of such a thing?

Then he told her what his experience was in regard to it, more and her design could not be put into use by any loom that was ever made. This was a new idea. She stopped making designs and went into a manufactory, where she learned all she could learn of the loom and when it could do. Then she had mastered them, double she took her pencils and brushes again. It was a proud day when she had a design accepted. The large manufacturer took an interest in such a plucky single-handed enterprise and furnished her with advice and instruction.

This was the beginning of carpet designing by women in this country. Now there are scores of women who make a business of carpet designing. There are two schools in which it is taught thoroughly. One is the Institute of Technical and Industrial Art. The other is the Artists-and-Artisans' Of the former the little woman who more than a dozen years ago set in her little parlor studying the figures in her carpet, carrying out what she thought out what she could do to earn money. In the president. The carpet succeeded her idea.

LOTS LIKE HIM.

Men Who Live on Medicine and Yet Are Perfect Health.

Although in perfect health, James Bland, of Eastern New York, is always taking medicine. The little of last month he brought home two small bottles. "What pills are you now?" laughed his wife, who had for years told him he needed no medicine the physicians agreeing with her. "Thank, he said, pointing to one bottle, "is appetite medicine." And the knew he never taken any other than in the neighborhood. "That" he said, pointing to the other bottle, "is sleep medicine." And she knew he slept soundly from bedtime until she awoke in the morning. "I hope you may soon recover," she said.

At night, having taken his medicine he went early to bed. "Now for a good sleep," said he.

About midnight he called to his wife, who was fast asleep.

"Mary! Mary!"

"What is it, dear?" she said.

"I've made a mistake." he moaned, "the greatest mistake of my life. Instead of the sleep medicine I took the appetite medicine, and I just can't stand it. I'm hungry as a bear."

She did not scold as she prepared a beefsteak and coffee.

In the morning after taking his medicine he was down at the table to await breakfast. "I'll eat you out of house and home now, Maria," said he. The breakfast was ready she added. "Tea or coffee, James?"

But he did not answer, says Youth's Companion. He did not look up. He was sound asleep. She did not awaken him, perceiving that this time he had taken the sleep medicine for the appetite medicine.

With staring eyes he sprang from the chair about noon, and, laughing when he saw his wife smiling, he threw both bottles out of the sash to land into a five-acre field of clover.

Before and After Taking.

An instructive and pathetic custom still obtains in Munich. Every destitute child found begging in the streets is arrested and carried to a charitable institution. On his arrival he is photographed—dirt, rags and all. After being maintained and educated, when he quits the institution to begin life, the before mentioned photo is given him, and he is required to make a solemn declaration that he will keep it as a reminder of the wretched state from which he was saved and of the kindness shown. The charity has received many gifts from its reclaimed waifs.

For Storing Petroleum.

Petroleum, when stored in bulk, either in tank steamships or in tanks on shore, must be provided with means for expansion when the temperature rises. A drawback in airplacers has been the admitting of air on the contraction of oil. The manager of large works in West Hartlepool, England, has devised an apparatus that will prevent the access of air. It consists of a dome on the top of the tanks to fix pistons the rods projecting through the tops and moving freely. The pistons rest on the surface of the oil and rise and fall when it expands and contracts.

Hinton Witchcraft.

All Hinton believe in witchcraft, and in strange contrasts to the old believers in witchery, they believe that young and pretty maidens are the chief actors in such uncanny mummery. If crops are blighted, or if a general sickness prevails, they write the names of all the young women of the vicinity on separate tree branches and then immerse the stems of the twigs for four hours in a water and aromatic herbs. If one or more of the twigs wither during the specified time the young woman whose name or names is attached thereto is immediately put to death. They the witch is constructed, the crops saved and health restored.

A Wise Precaution.

Johnson (calling downstairs)—Oh, ma, pa has lost his collar button.

Ma—Wait, Jerry and take the parlor one of the room and hang the cage in the hall.

A DREAM OF MURDER.

Troubled Very Recently with the Dreams of Murder.

A farmer with his dogs and their son was walking into the house of a neighbor near one O'Tuomey attended by a beautiful hound of which he was very fond, when a recent dream at him, killed some and injured another his head from which he also had a dream. Suddenly the dog ran out of the house and set a funeral, and from the coffin blood flowed upon the ground. The listeners placed it at her feet opened the lid, and exhibited her husband murdered and his heart torn out. She awoke, as might be expected, in great agony and her husband found the dog comprehensible part of the narrative. Her husband entertained an idiot cousin in the house, and he in disguised rhyme repeated the very same dream to a gossip to whom the farmer's wife had related here.

That very night the farmer was murdered, and the next morning the poor idiot, to the horror of all, exclaimed as he rose from his bed, "O! Dick Magilter was the farmer's name—is MIE! Shamus dhe More kill him"—Shamus dhe More O'Flanagan—big black Jamie—and buried him under the new ditch at the back of the garden. I dreamed it last night—every word of it. Search was made at the spot, indicated by the dream and the body was found with the skull nearly cleft in two. In the meanwhile O'Flanagan absconded and outlaw, but was subsequently arrested, confessed his crime and was executed.

GRAY HAIRS.

Aged Looks Do Not Always Indicate a Decrease Condition.

The fact that some persons begin to show gray hairs when in the prime of life does not indicate a premature decay of the constitution. It is merely a mere phenomenon and indicates no more than great physical vigor. A medical journal says: Many persons and others who have suffered extremely, both mentally and physically, do not show a hair until past middle life, while others, without assignable cause, have their capillary coloring matter rapidly when about forty years of age.

Race has a marked influence. Traveler, Dr. Oldfogy, says that in many years he spent in South America he never saw a bald Indian, and scarcely never a grandsire. The Indian grays very slowly. How the whole Mongolian, or if general statement, gray, and yet they are remarkable for their vigorous mental activity.

The correlation of gray hairs as well as in causes, deserve more attention than they have received. Such a change is undoubtedly indicative of some deep seated physiological process; but what this is we can only ascertain after more extensive observations than have yet been submitted to science.

THE EARTH'S AGE.

Ways in Whose It Is Calculated by Learned Men.

The amount of lime salts in water which drains from clastic rocks and of granites and basalts is found by comparison of different analyses to be on an average of about 3.75 parts in 100 parts of water. It is farther assured by those who take this mode of reckoning the age of the world that the ocean ocean is gradually taking on an average throughout all geological time, still near to the exposures of sedimentary rocks a ratio of one in nine. From these and other more complicated data it has been deduced that the elimination of the calcareous matter now found in all the sedimentary strata must have been going on through a period of 100,000,000 years. This, therefore, represents the minimum age of the world. Geologists also conclude that the formation of the Laurentian, Cambrian and silurian strata occupied a period of about 200,000,000 years; the red sandstone, the carboniferous and the permian systems another 200,000,000 years, the remaining 500,000,000 years belonging with the formation of all other strata. Thus we are led to believe that geological time has been enormously in excess of the limits urged by certain well-known physicists, and that it has been impossible to allow for all the changes which, on the hypothesis of evolution, have occurred in the organic world.

Bear's Gall Is Worth Money.

A bear's gall was recently sent to a man in El Paso as a slight token of esteem from an intimate and dear friend in the country, with the suggestion that it might possess a pecuniary value in Chinese language. Thinking that it was intended to imply that he baked gall, our city gentleman threw it into the stress. Soon afterward a Chinaman came in, and on being interrogated, offered to for it. The work of redeeming it by a side door occupied one minute, and the gentleman was the happiest man in the sidewalk very valuable by Chinese physicians, and are much sought after. We now quote bears' gall in full demand, with limited supply; political gall abundant, with few takers.

Hinton Witchcraft.

All Hinton believe in witchcraft, and in strange contrasts to the old believers in witchery, they believe that young and pretty maidens are the chief actors in such uncanny mummery. If crops are blighted, or if a general sickness prevails, they write the names of all the young women of the vicinity on separate tree branches and then immerse the stems of the twigs for four hours in a water and aromatic herbs. KANSAS DEEP IN SNOW.

A REGULAR BLIZZARD WORKS WILD HAVOC.

Particulars of Kansas's Disagreeable Experiences—Reports from the Monetary Conference, Insanitie ke a Notice in Favor of the Bonds.

Cold in a Few Words.

—A typical Illinois hail has raged in Nance, Pike and Adams Counties. Some of these were from twelve to fourteen hours long, and ranging from two ounces up in various towns along the route. The Rock Island Depot lighted and lost in the storm between Hannibal and Fairmont. The conductor, engineer, one passenger and one mail and express messenger, all of whom were in the cab, were injured, the engineer and conductor fatally. The train was in charge of a substitute engineer, who was taken from the Chicago and Alton road, and the estimated value of the hail damage to the Illinois crops is put at one-fourth of the quarter-million dollars.

—Jail Inspector Hogan, of Chicago, has sacked Phillip J. Hayes, who has been criminal of number in thousand dollars.

—Joseph Rosner, a wealthy retired merchant of Toledo, O., has filed a petition in bankruptcy. He attributes his failure to his heart failure after having responded to a call on his creditors to meet him in the hall of the Produce Exchange. He was 75 years old. The Board did not, after with a large reception to the attendance, and during the proceedings he became so weak that he was carried out in a perfect health. The occasion was the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the Produce Exchange.

—M. Preaux, Director-General for France to the Chicago Worlds Fair, is expected as soon as occasion of the Fair, and will be received.

—During his stay in Milwaukee, Henry Villard let out the information that the Villard Pool, Frederick Kohlsaat, a stockholder in the Milwaukee street railroad company, to the extent of 200,000 marks, or $50,000. Mr. Villard did the private Chicago interests in the matter, and when Paul Isleman, a German writer of prominence, had made a favorable report as to Milwaukee's future financial prominence on stock.

—Mrs. Mackrick, serving a life sentence in Sigtuna for poisoning her husband, is reported to be dangerously ill, with fatal stage of her recovery.

—Official returns of the recent election in North Dakota have the result of the Tipton and two Republican electors and a Republican Congressman.

—William M. Boyle, one of Chicago's oldest and wealthiest citizens, died Tuesday morning. For more than four years he had been confined to his house by ill-health, resulting from his 80th birthday, and his death was the result of a long illness, and his death was the result of a long illness, and his death was the result of a long illness

Wm. White who purchased the Jubinville mill on Deer Creek not long ago, has sold it again to Geo. Ward and O. Wigle of Boyne City.

Mr. Wm. Parkes has retired from the Parkes Lumber Company at Sault Ste. Marie and the place has been filled by a gentleman from Chicago.

Mr. George Suggitt of Petoskey died after an illness of several weeks on Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He had a good army record, having served four years or more.

Hal Roach of Central Lake was arrested last Thursday for selling liquor without having paid the tax. He waived examination and gave bond for the next appearance of Circuit Court.

Antrim County is reported to be out of debt and the Elk Rapids Democrat now calls upon the Board of Supervisors to go to the expense of dividing the lock up at the jail so as to separate the sexes and the boys, girls and young women from contact with the depraved of both sexes.

Cadillac water consumers are now being served by the Cadillac Water Co. The transfer of H. N. Green's plant to that Company occurred last Thursday. Mr. Green's list of water customers, stained 430 names and the gross receipts from water rents was about $3000, and the expense $2000.

St. Ignace people are interested in a scheme to build a $35,000 hotel there next season which in magnificence and general appointments shall surpass anything of the kind in Northern Michigan. A gentleman of Racine offers to furnish $15,000 if the citizens of St. Ignace will donate the site and put in $20,000 more.

R. W. Beach of Boyne City, shot a splendid buck and as he supposed, killed it instantly, as it dropped like a log. Mr. Beach dropped his gun and took out his hunting knife to cut the animal's throat, when the brute sprang up and furiously attacked his would be slayer. Dick was tossed in the air a twinkling, and came down astride the bucks neck. He did not keep this position long however and for some time it was up and down between them. At last Mr. B. managed to reach his gun and dispatched the animal. It was a magnificent creature with extra wide branching antlers.

WHAT A DOZEN IS.

A Very Elastic Term Meaning Anything From Two to Fifty.

The child is taught at school that a dozen means twelve every time, but when the child grows into a man he finds that a dozen is a very elastic term. A baker's dozen is thirteen, and so is a publisher's or a newspaper agent's in many parts of the world. In some sections a dozen fish means twenty-six, and there are other anomalies of this kind. But to find a dozen indicating anything from two to fifty it is necessary to go to the earthenware trade. Here the size and weight of articles decide how many make a dozen, and in jugs, bowls, plates and so on there are two, four, six, eight or more to the dozen. A dozen composed of twelve articles is a very unusual thing in the wholesale pottery trade, and as a result there are few clerkships more difficult to hold than in this line. I tried the work once and failed ignominiously. To have to find the cost of five hundred articles at so much a dozen when that dozen may mean anything in a very definite way until a man gets thoroughly used to it. That it is easy then, I have been told, though I never got used to it sufficiently to know of my own knowledge.

"Billious in it."

Dr. Adametz, the great Swiss scholar, has found that a single grannum of fresh Emmentaler cheese contains not less than 90,000 microbes. In a grannum of the rind of the same cheese he found 3,000,000 inhabitants. Thus it may be seen that a piece of cheese of less than a pound weight may contain more living, moving, breathing individuals than there are human inhabitants on the entire globe.

Asking Too Much.

A Georgia editor has a grievance against one of the railroads. He says that he is perfectly willing, in return for an annual pass, to throw on wood at stations, help grease the engine and assist in handling baggage, but when he breaks his leg while closing a delinquent subscriber through the train he should be allowed reasonable damages.

The investigation of the Alabama election now being made by the Alliance people is opening their eyes. They say they elected their candidates, but were cheated out of the election by the rascality of the Democrats and the good workers say, Perhaps after this bill won't have such a terrible look to southern people after few years experience of Alabama in whole.

YOU WILL BUY SOMEONE A PRESENT, WON'T YOU?

Let us suggest to you a few things that might be acceptable. Now there is nothing more useful than a nice pocket book or card case, and as they come in all grades of leather, one can surely find something desirable. Other popular lines: sterling silver ornaments; Hair brushes, Combs, Mirrors, Thermometers, Gloves, Handkerchiefs, Vases, Jewelry, fancy Hair pins, or some dainty perfumery. And did have you seen those new silver covered Cider bottles, Cracker Jars, etc., they are so new and dainty. Then too, one can buy pretty celluloid scrap boxes, and by putting something upon them it makes a very pretty and useful present. There are so many pretty things at Washburn's Dry Goods Store one must be hard to please indeed, not to find something, especially in dolls. Why, you can buy white, black, chinese or any nationality as well as pretty ones all dressed in the latest fashion. Of course that $25 doll is the center of attraction, but then good ones can be bought at 10, 15 & 25c; think of it and if you have time just drop in and look around. They are making a special offer on Dress Goods for the Holidays.

Here This Firror You.

For Christmas and New Years Holiday the C. & W. M. and D. L. & N. Rys. will sell excursion tickets at one and one third fair for round trip on Dec. 24th, 25th, 26th and January 1st and 2nd all good to return Jan. 3rd, to all points on their own and connecting lines, including Chicago.

—E. E. Bowman sold his photograph gallery on Monday to D. S. Way, and will remove to Grand Haven.

—Rev. W. H. McCartney will deliver a Masonic address at Sherman, Wexford County, on the evening of Dec. 27th.

—The W. C. T. U. meets next Friday at 2:30 p. m. with L. E. Modgie. Be prompt. Invite a friend to come with you.

—Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Matterson, of North Dakota, are guests of W. H. Miller and wife for a few days. Mrs. Matterson is a sister of Mrs. Miller.

—Frank E. Wood and George Pappin are putting in an ice skating rink in the vacant space back of the post office. It will be skilled free as soon as Water will be taken from the hydrant on Clinton street.

—The examination of the Thompson logs for sub-squared timber, or sawlogs, is in progress before Justice Maier to-day. Attorney General Eliza is conducting the prosecution while E. W. Maynard appears for the defense. Superintendent Drake and Mr. H. T. Weaver are here.

—Certain business men of Petoskey have been circulating hand-bills throughout Charlevoix, Harbor Springs and other outlying towns lately, soliciting trade. In the last named town the circulator who did the distributing, with remarkable gall, required a business man to hang one of the bills in his window instead of hanging the creature on a telegraph pole he was permitted to leave town.

—Charlevoix bestows upon herself a Christmas gift. She puts in her own stocking as fine a system of water works as any town of the size in Michigan can boast of. It bespeaks enterprise and a spirit of progress, and will be more far reaching in its influence upon our town than appears upon the surface. The system will soon be substituted for the Now gives us electric lights, a big city hotel, and Charlevoix well be all would wish a yard wide, with a broad fringe around the edges.

—Work on the Belvedere Hotel improvements is well along toward completion. The dining hall was moved to make room for the new building, in which it is connected. The new structure is 28x100 and will contain kitchen, dining room for the regular and other necessary rooms for culinary use. Above there will be the sleeping rooms for the help. Several of the old buildings have been torn down. The improvements will add greatly to the working efficiency of the hotel force. Other improvements are contemplated.

—One of the largest shippers of branch lark from Northern Michigan and said to a Northern and Express reporter last Saturday that there is prospects for an active demand for the lark next season and that buyers would be warranted in offering a considerable advance in the price paid. This fact taken in connection with the certainty of disposing of hemlock timber, for which there is an increasing demand, assures to the farmers another profitable source of revenue.

—Last summer at the instance of a post-office inspector, Mel Livingston an employee of this office let for some time previous employed in the post-office, was arrested by a deputy U. S. Marshal for the embezzlement of about $45 of postal money order funds. The charge was that as book-keeper, he made false entries to cover up the amount taken. He was put under bonds by the U. S. Commissioner at Petoskey, and last week his trial took place in U. S. Court at Grand Rapids. He was found guilty on Wednesday and remanded to jail until yesterday, when he was sentenced to two years in the Detroit House of Correction.

—Henry Johnson reports all right pound girl at his residence.

—Arthur Beattie and wife have gone to Roswell to spend the winter.

The water works were formally accepted by the village council Monday evening.

—The Standard Oil Co. distributes at Charlevoix, East Jordan and Ironton through its agent, H. W. Tullock, 800 barrels of Kerosene oil annually.

—The Ladies Aid Society of Harbor Springs is increasing in number—five new members—three at the last meeting. Will meet on the 28th with sister Hurlbut.

—Perhaps in the general shake up you have overlooked the fact that to the voters belong the spoils in Michigan. That being true there will be a vacancy in the office of Agent of the Board of Corrections and Charities for Charlevoix County.

—On Monday Capt. O. E. Wilbur sold out his grocery business and stock to Alex Ross and Will Cooper. Capt. Wilbur retains the dock and warehouse. Messrs. Ross and Cooper are young men, well schooled in the grocery business and are well known and popular. They will do well.

The pupils of the high school honored the poet Whittier by a memorial birthday exercise on Monday evening. A very pleasant program was presented, consisting of readings and recitations of selections from Whittier's writings, interspersed with music. The high school room was nearly filled with pupils and citizens, all of whom enjoyed the occasion and speak very highly of the session.

—An alarm of fire startled the town at nine o'clock last night. Fire started in the basement of H. W. Cameron's residence, corner of Bridge and Antrim streets. Two streams were turned in from the nearest hydrant, and very little damage was done to the house. But the fire department was somewhat demoralized by conflicting orders. The department should have better organization and assist on the general public keeping in mind at a fire.

—Every where else possible talk in the order of the day why shouldn't it be here? Somehow Charlevoix folks have settled down into the conviction that Mr. Hampton of the Democrat, will be the next postmaster, and the Courier building will be occupied by the postoffice. Postmaster Berdan's commission expires in June, and that is about as soon as Joshua Chickey could get around to run to the old man's seat anyway. Of course it is none of our funeral, and perhaps we are rash in speaking of the matter.

—The Democrat states, semi-officially, that the catching of fish with nets in Round Lake will be made a test case this winter. The law allows the setting of nets in Lake Michigan and "the harbors adjacent thereto." Is Little Traverse Harbor or Northport Bay.

Yes, let us have electric lights. With them we may be better able to see our way clear to get a lamp on us about some other matters, which are of greater importance than electric lights. In the bright glare of electrics we might be able to see that we are inclined, as a community, to be shiftless concerning those things that be essential to our future prosperity. We might be able to read more clearly the hand-bills that the merchants of rival towns are distributing among us, and do something ourselves to hold the trade that belongs to us, and reach out after more. With a few hundredweight bulbs distributed about town we perhaps might read better, the law prohibiting the sale of liquor and tobacco to minors, and those for the suppression of gambling dens in which our boys are being corrupted. Then, too, electric lights would aid us in discovering our own faults as well as those of our neighbors. Then we might be better enabled to "see the point" in the water works well issue. We could also use the dynamo to electrocute Petoskey bill peddlers and croakers. Yes, by all means give us electric lights.

Hon. James G. Blaine is upon his death bed at his home in Washington. The eminent statesman probably cannot live too week out. All hope is abandoned by his family and physicians.

The body of the engineer of the ill-fated Gilchrist was found on North Manitou Island one day last week.

A Running Specimen of Humbuggery.

The Democrat week before last announced that its next issue would be a "boom edition," and on the strength of it secured considerable holiday advertising.

The "boom edition" appeared, and so far as the "boom" feature is concerned, is the biggest fraud we have ever seen, in the way of newspaper work.

It is a verbatim reprint of the Daily Resorter "boom" of last June. It was printed at that time for future use, and makes its semi-annual appearance "for revenue only." We are always pleased to see our contemporary write up the town, when he does it for the good of the town, but when he palms off on a confiding public such a sham as the last week's "boom," it is time to kick.

As a starter we clip the following concerning the railroad. It was all right last June, but it won't do in December, 1892:

As announced elsewhere, months after the last "big boom" started, the railroad line, however, will not be completed to Petoskey for a week or two, but cars will be run as far as Petoskey, this will make no perceptible difference.

Considering the fact that the railroad has been running six or more months, that is pretty good for a boom edition. It is fresh and newsy. Send a few copies to your friend's abroad. And here is an extract from the economical "boom edition" that is full of enlightenment, and would do to mail to far-away friends:

The fire department of this village is provided with a fine steam engine and also a hand engine, with 1,500 feet of good rubber hose. Large cisterns are dug in the principal business portions of the town, and a good water supply is secured from wells drilled in the solid rock. The water mains are so furnished with fire hydrants that a stream of water can be thrown over any building in the business part of the village. The fire department is composed of a number of active young men, who are always ready to turn out at a moment's notice when the alarm is sounded. The village is provided with a fine school building, which is kept in good condition, and in which a corps of competent teachers are employed. The school is graded, and the work done is satisfactory. The village is well supplied with churches, and has a good library, and a good weekly newspaper, the Sentinel. The Sentinel is a live, wide awake sheet, and is well worth the subscription price, $1.50 per year. The village has a good hotel, the Belvedere, which is kept in good shape, and is well patronized by those who appreciate a good house. The village has a good public school, and

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Beneath the Bethlehem Judean sky
Lay the Christ-child in the manger manger,
Where the cattle had fed and lay
A year that brightly passed,
When wandered in the chilly plain
Their flocks, worn weary now
Shepherds who had lain long, frozen,
And heavily gifts they bore
Rich, costly, rare, from far and near,
And someone spoke a word
Then curled in their hands to lay
Low at his cradle feet.

They heard with awe such words as Never mortal before had heard
The angels chanting along and deep,
Sphere calling upon sphere,
Lower and lower sang the star
Where the angels are Then crowned kings prostrate at the sight
Of a babe in a manger lying
A long space a startle shed
With rare wildness, and Where, bound with loving bands, then Bound
The mother and the Child

Time, crowned kings fell upon their knees
With meekness reverent grace
They knew Him by the sign of tears
They gave to Him frankness
Lo! they found Him in manger-weight
Not in palace, as they
But how amazed this news gave
How richly each course a shine!
Were wrought their swift treasures there
Always where Mary's kiss
Was given the Christ-babe, for was all
Love like the one to there.

A rare creature of the Christmas eve,
Long centuries ago,
Yet we find in her the three kings sought;
We have not far to go
For where love and mercy are,
We find Him, where the sense foretold,
The King whose coming was
And who so finds the heritage Christ
Left to the world and bought shows
Not to us the chief heritage King
Thinking and wishes there Latter than

TO SPEND CHRISTMAS.

I NVITED me to spend Christmas with Sam Kettle, and I said I did. Mr. Kettle is a bachelor, his task of sidering a new to him, and I thought I immediately wish a bachelor. "Well, it's the first time of my existence as he ever took so much trouble as this for me, old chap," Mr. Kettle said. Mr. Kettle's friends who might have formed no bad model for the Wise Men, as the best over the tree of sticks, in her old red hood, from which an aspect gray offbooks immaterially, interest a significant smile. Mr. Kettle's friends had constituted intimated almost as meaning.

INVITED ME TO SPEND CHRISTMAS WITH HIM.

"What I've gone thus expect to get out of his mouth." demanded the old hood.

"Is your own sister's son, Hezekiah," said the woman.

"Nobody's nephew is very different from other folks as I know-ow," said Hezekiah, "and the woman.

"Nobody's nephew is different from other folks as I know-ow," said Hezekiah, "and the woman.

"Nobody's nephew is different from other folks as I know-ow."

A POOR RELATION.

A Near-relative Must Be Borgen and What It Participated.

Harry Lane, while hunting on Canyon creek, near Middle Soda springs, Oregon, shot across two bobcats. Charles Mattinson and Charles Youngerman, who had the carcasses of two bullgrown cougars, just shot, lying on the bank of the creek. The men had only been out hunting for a few hours and had separated. One of them, on coming to the creek, had seated himself on a log, when a mountain lion a cougar, came out of the brush and was crossed over. In a minute or two another came along and was promptly shot.

The shooting attracted the other hunter, who, on arriving, said: "Bear hunt there is another one around." His friend asked him if he thought the woods were full of lions, and asked him how many cougars he wanted, but their dog soon started a third and ran it up a tree, where it was quickly dispatched.

Then of the cougars was lean, while the others were very fat, and Mr. Lane asked why this was. The hunters said the large one was a sort of poor relation of the others who had to take what he could get when a deer was killed and content himself with the fragments left by them. On opening the stomach of the lean one it was found to be filled with offal, shinbones, ears and other of the less choice parts of the deer which are not calculated to develop the adipose tissue.

A VAGABOND.

How He Caught Some Eels Without Intending To.

Old John Stonecipher was no steamer. He would not work but lazed around home and consumed what his industrious wife and his boys and girls made on a little farm down in New Jersey. John came up on a long day. Search was made for him, supposing he was off drunk. Finally, in the course of a week, some neighbor suggested possibly he had been drowned. They dragged the creek for him and found him. The remains were in a cool condition, indentification depended entirely upon his apparel. They brought him home and laid him out on the floor of the one small room of his late residence. The stricken widow sat with her arms at individual, looking calmly down upon him, remarked: "Well, he's pretty dead, sir." Seeing something unusual also his mouth, she stooped down, and hold of it, and pulled out an eel — head of another took its place and so on until she had half a dozen squirming on the floor. "Well, what shall we do with them?" asked the newly widowed one of the party. "I guess you had better take him back and set him again for eels," said the old lady. "It's the only thing he's ever brought into this house."

THE BOTTLE IMP HOAX.

The Imposition Was the Result of a Wager Between Two Noblemen.

The bottle imp hoax was one of the most known imposture ever practiced on the credulous English public of the last century. It was the result of a wager between the Duke of Montague and another nobleman in the year of 1761.

In discussing the amazing gullibility of the English Montague declared that if an impostor were to advertise that he would jump into a quart bottle at Hickson's that he would go to see him do it. A wager was made and an advertisement was inserted in all the papers promising that this feat would be performed on a certain date at the Haymarket theater. On the appointed day the theater was packed from pit to gallery, and thousands of persons were turned from the doors.

The supposed magician appeared on the stage, made the startling announcement that if the audience would pay double price he would enter a pint bottle instead of the quart flask on the stage table, and then hurriedly escaped by the stage door.

The performance ended in a riot, in which the theater was almost wrecked and the duke and his companion had to leave town until the affair was forgotten.

TELLS THE WEATHER.

All Ingenious Frenchman's Escape and Amusing Discoverer.

A clever Frenchman, who has original ideas on most subjects, employs a kind of barometer which may safely be called unique. It is nothing more nor less than the figure of a general made of ginger-bread. He buys it every year at the Place du Throne, takes it home and hangs it by a string on a nail.

Ginger-bread, as every one knows, is affected by changes in the atmosphere. The slightest moisture renders it soft; in dry weather, on the contrary, it grows hard and tough.

Every morning, on going out, the Frenchman asks his servant, "What does the general say?" and the man applies his thumb to the ginger-bread figure.

Sometimes he replies: "The general feels soft. He would advise your taking an umbrella." On the other hand, when the general's symptoms are hard and unyielding, the Frenchman sallies forth arrayed in his best, with no fears for his spotless suit or his new hat. He says the general has so far never proved unworthy of the confidence placed in his prognostications.

Mr. Sharp.

Assistants in English shops use the phrase "Two apiece tea" or "Two pounds tea"—meaning two eyes upon ten fingers, when a customer is suspected of larceny; or the shopwalker asks in a voice that may be generally heard, "Has Sir Sharp or Jewell?"—in which the assistants he alludes, the counter reply, "We are expecting him, sir."

An Odd Request.

A surgeon being sent for to bleed a lady belonging to the nobility, did the operation in such a bungling manner that he cut an artery, of which mistake the lady subsequently died. In his will she left him an annuity of eight hundred francs "as a token to his unskilful companion, and that by having a competence he may not be tempted to cause others to run the same risk which has resulted in my death."

A VOYAGE TO 'FRISCO IN '53

Marvelous Experiences of One of a Thousand Passengers.

Charles Prouth of Seattle has been recalling his marvelous experiences of the voyage from New York to San Francisco, begun in September, 1853. He sailed on the steamer Illinois, capital barkentein, from the foot of Liberty street, and was one of a thousand passengers, a surprising number for that day.

Mr. Prouth paints a shocking picture of the degradation of the women of Jamaica, where the Pacific mail steamers made their first stop for coaling. Aspinwall, now Colon, is a most unattractive town at the Atlantic terminus of the Trans-Isthmian railroad, then in process of construction, and states amusing incidents of the journey over the isthmus by boats to Gorgona and by donkey back to Panama.

On account of about water the steamer John L. Stephens had to lie two miles from the shore in the harbor of Panama and the gold seekers were ferried through several hundred yards of shark water in her boats. The capacity of the John L. Stephens, Robert L. Pierson by name, treated all hands to champagne, according to Mr. Prouth, to celebrate the fair weather, and thereupon it at once began to storm and the virtuous elements nearly exhausted him. Mr. Prouth concludes:

"To this day I retain a vivid recollection of the last hot sultry, uneventing and uncomfortable summer spent in New York city.

And to think that in those days there were no lodging adits, no repset shows and no coolers!

HAS GLASS EYES.

But Still He Plays a Very Clever Game of Billiards.

Billiards and blindness are generally supposed to be diametrically opposed. Imagine if you can a man who is totally blind and who at the same time can play billiards, and play them well.

This is not an imaginary statement at all, for in New York lives Julius Gerson, who has no glass eyes, and is needless to add no real ones, who can play billiards, and play a pretty skill game, too. A four-cushion shot is a common amusement to this sightless shooter, and he can "draw," "English" and cross balls around a billiard table in a way that simply astounds people for the first time.

"The table is constantly pictured before me," he said, "as everything else, for that matter. After I have felt around I know just how it looks and it seems as though I could see where the balls are. One thing for which I cannot be too thankful is that I have been blind all my life. When a boy I could see so I know what things look like and what you mean when you speak of red, and blue, and yellow."

The first feat Mr. Stern showed me was a long round the-table shot, wherein the cue ball, with lots of "Eng ish" on the right side, hit, the first ball, went to the cushion and off the rail, ran against three cushions in rapid succession, rolled up the table again, took another cushion and then clicked gently against the second ball. When Mr. Stern heard the soft click of the impact he exclaimed:

"Now I'll show you another," and then went on with a dozen difficult shots.

AFTER A MAN IS FORTY.

He Concludes That on Bed is so Good as His Own.

It's funny when a man gets to be 40 how he always longs for his own bed if he happens to be separated from it. When I start towards home I says begin to give myself to my brother restrained desire to get home, and the main idea in my mind is to get to my own bed. It isn't because those I have been sleeping nights were poor ones, or because mine is superior but there's a something unexplainable when you land your weary body in it. Somehow it seems as if the outside world was not so harsh in its treatments. The sigh you heave when you pull up the sheets and put your bird into the pillow is just about the same as when you used to jump out when you were a little boy and then you felt partially homesick way for the first time from home. You can look back to that time and see with clear eyes, at long range, through time's magnifier that it was not sick for home you were, but just heartsick for your mother, and when you were once more with her and tucked in comfortable, after you were safely tucked in between the sheets she would stick a step and with her thin hand put up before the lamp to shade your face and, glaring up to the bedside, send there looking down—steadfast, selfcleansing, wistful. Then of poor workworn mothers! Most eyesiore to see them now with memory's help.

Made Temperate Laureate.

On the death of Wordsworth the laureateship was offered to Samuel Rogers in an autograph note by Prince Albert. The prince told the venerable poet, who was then eighty-seven years old, that nothing whatever would be expected, but that it would gratify the queen to know that his name was temporarily with the history of her reign. Rogers was very naturally greatly gratified. He considered the proposal for some time and then in a very interesting note declined it. He was then asked to name the person who should fill the place, and he named Alfred Tennyson.

What Lincoln Said.

After the second battle of Bull Run, Lincoln is said to have exclaimed: "Well, I've heard of being knocked into the middle of next week, but I never heard of being pitched into the middle of last year."

Great Air Is There For.

There is a new policeman stationed at one of the uptown crossings of Broadway, New York. Some one said to him the other day:

"So you are here to keep the horses from running over the ladies, are you?"

"Aw! indade I'm not, sir," he replied "I am to keep the ladies from running over the horses," suiting the action to the word by politely and very firmly drawing a woman back who seemed determined to rush right over the nose horse of a heavy drag.

CROSS SWINDLERS.

Stock Is Sold and Delivered—Man Arrested Months Later Wanted.

Men who have made a business of swindling people by pretending to be sick, spiritual, Tom, seldom frequently the chief. The cashier of one of the great express companies recently told a reporter how the seller of one of the big New York banks was swindled out of $40 by a hard-luck story. The swindler said he had recently had issued a large number of money orders for a foreign company. They were stolen, he said, and he had printed on their face in bold red letters the words "Monitor Counterfeits. Not good." They were all filled out, having been telegraphed, and the name of the fictitious "payee" was also indorsed on the back.

A casual glance would tell an ordinarily careful observer that they were merely advertisements, intended to show how money orders looked when ready for payment, even if the caution in red letters had not been there. Yet when a man buttonhole sacked into the bank referred to were shown some below the telegraphed indorsement, and asked to have the money orders cashed, the teller unhesitatingly handed over the $40. Not all so thoroughly careless as this teller are the institutions constantly making mistakes, and the victims of the swindlers are not all careless. "Nearly every week there are detections through banks and clearing houses. I suppose the banks collects get another through some big handling of money religiously from our own expenses I should judge that they must be really stuck at times. Imagine they keep such errors pretty quiet."

THE DURATION OF LIFE.

Figures Which Tend to Alridge That of the Average Being.

The duration of life depends neither on climate nor food nor any other external condition, but on the natural constitution and intrinsic vigor of our organs.

One hundred years is the natural life of man. The natural most human life premature is the result of disorders and sickness in the manner of living which impair the organs and produce premature decay. From the time of Noah to the days of Joshua and Moses the extent decreased one-half, and gradual decrease is constantly. Joshua waxed old and stricken in years some time before his death at 110.

The whole of life means with a person who is most needs effort, more or less, its duration. In a manufacturing and commercial centers particularly where population is more crowded, and where art and labor in the various branch are strained to the utmost needs of human exertion, life becomes subject to influences which are powerfully upon it, and tend to shorten its duration.

Some particular occupat ons also die life by bodily confinement and the privation of good air. When there is a free current of pure air in dwellings of the body and mind are kept in healthy action by moderate exercise, and by cheerful exercise, and the pursuits in life are of a social character, then life may be prolonged to advanced years. But when we indulge in vicious habits which operate pain and trouble, life shortens often imperceptibly, and so we see, that life decline until the fatal result "shakes with rotten rivers rivers run to seas."

A Young Hero.

On board a steamboat plying between Galata and Pera, a young woman, apparently ill with sea sickness, groaned until a stranger asked Turkish, if she was a lady, or would, he had offers tried on people with more serious results. The cure was instantaneous. Hardly had the sick lowed the lady, and when she was ordering ham sandwiches and bottled ale. Some passengers struck with the sudden cure, and wished to know the doleful tenor, and the gentleman disposed of a considerable number of Pera at 8 each. What was the surprise of the bigoes when they saw the lady and her preserver go off arm in arm when the boat was ready to leave. The pills were common jujube paste.

To Determine Boiler's Size.

A company is being organized in Boston for the Back Bay at Boston a refrigerating plant, from which pipes filled with a continual flow of cold air will be laid throughout that section of the city. The plant will cost $100,000 and will be in the use of every one who desires to use it, and it will be arranged so that the temperature can be lowered as desired. It is estimated that its use will save annually about tons of ice and drawing with the annoyance, inconvenience and waste. The service will cost no more than the ice would cost and has the advantage of melting in room and not dry, whereas ice makes it cold and damp. This cold air can be used in food chests, wine cellars and sleeping and living rooms.

A Church That Went to Sea.

A curious tale is that about Tony, a negro church in which, a church founded, it, was organized on the lower islands of the Ivory Coast. It was a division among the islanders as to the location of the church, and also as to the doctrines that should be preached. Finally it was decided to move the church and let the people of seven and toward out from land to wait for a schooner that was to be in around. While it was waiting a half dozen disciples of the "New Light" dashed into the water, clipped the cables and let the church go to drift off to sea. It went about forty miles when it was secured.

Hooker's Idea.

When a Japanese calls in a physician he does not expect that he will be presented a bill for medical services. In fact, no such thing as a doctor's bill is known in Japan, although nearly all the other modern practices are in vogue there. The strict honesty of the people does not make this necessary. When he is through with a patient a present is made—a gift, as the patient or his friends may deem it, or just enough money to pay the doctor is supposed to smile. Use the fee, low and thank his grace.

CITY DADS EMULATE CHICAGO'S WAYS.

Remarkable Religious Demonstration in Kansas—Dead with His Duty on His Knee—Fifty Killed in an English Colliery—Shaters' Grinding for Pleasure.

Tried to a Few Words.

—At Wabash, Ind., in the United States District Court was filed the deposition of John W. Steffen, formerly of Wichita, and of politicians of state repute, now territorial agent of the Black Hills and Fort Pierre in the Jacquette parting case. Steffen testifies that Edward F. Winston of Chicago, the Jacquette contractor, asked his aid to secure the passage of a certain Indian appropriation. He told Winston that it would cost him about $10,000, and that this sum he thought was accepted by Winston from the chapter of the Wabash Railroad and distributed among various counsellors.

—On Wednesday dawn dawned a well-work Sabbath, the result of the work of Evangelist Mills. For goods and groceries, prayers, proverbs, drug stores, railroad offices, and banks were closed until noon, and many saloon doors have certainly remained closed to stay closed.

—In Kansas County, Miss., William Hosea, a respectable farmer, was visited by his mother, his wife by his child and his baby son was born while children were born through a window and struck him in the forehead. The mother died in a few days and followed dead. The association was broken up by the Indian outlaws.

—London cables: A fearful explosion occurred Wednesday at the Bolton colliery, Wigan, and not less than fifty lives have been lost. The men, boys and girls were at work after the colliery, and the explosion occurred in the pit. Only a few men escaped, and it was impossible to enter the shaft for smoke and damp. Fifty bodies were reached from the mine and the greater portion of the victims were found dead. The cause of the disaster and a count of survivors could not be ascertained. The pit is believed that the explosion had caused by spontaneous combustion of the gas. The number of the dead is variously estimated at from 50 to 100.

—At Bayfield, U. T., twenty-five warrants for perjury have been issued against parties who testified lately in land contests. In addition to these eight or ten indictments for the same crime were sent from the United States court at Duluth. Thirty-one cases have already been sent to the United States court from Bayfield, and twenty cases and twenty more are under heavy bonds.

The Final Test.

The final test of the Water Works was made last Thursday with satisfactory results. With six hydrant openings, the pressure was increased from 120 to 140 pounds to the square inch. The streams were thrown at various points and were fully up to the mark required.

During the test Superintendent Baldwin had 175 pounds pressure on the mains, which is an emphatic guaranty that the system will stand for years the average of 70 or 100 pounds required of it.

But one defect was found in the plant and that was the insufficiency of means of supplying the boilers. A larger inspirator has been put in.

Engineer Guard announces his readiness to receive applications for water. Several have already been filed and more are expected.

The Parkes Lumber Co's shingle mill has cut 5,000,000 shingles in the portion of the season that it has run.

Alfred Varley has purchased of S. S. Spaulding the furniture in the Marshall House at Elk Rapids and will assume the management of the house Jan. 1.

Alva L. Coulter of East Jordan the young chairman of the Charlevoix county republican committee is said to be after the office of deputy state oil inspector and we hope he will get it.

Peter Kwiatkin of Advance purchased the large tract of timber land in Eveline township owned by Chas. Peterson of Petoskey, consisting of three hundred acres. Mr. Kwiatkin has a gang of men cutting the cedar on the shore of Pine Lake and next summer will take off all the hemlock bark which is estimated at from 800 to 1,000 cords. He will also build a large dock at what is known as Deep Water Point in front of the land next spring. The price paid for the land was $2,500.

Harbor Springs Arbutus Wart-Old inhabitants have witnessed a great change in climate of Northern Michigan since locating here. Twelve and fifteen years ago snow piled up sometimes four feet deep, winter set in good earnest in Nov. and the harbor and bay were many times frozen over before Christmas. The ice attained a thickness of three feet and did not move out till late in the spring. For a period of about five months during every year we were literally "snowed in" while frequently during that time a "three days' storm" would compel us to stay in doors, stop up the cracks in the house and hug up to a red hot stove. Now things are different. We don't get much good sleighing till after the holidays and the harbor doesn't freeze over till way along in Jan. or Feb. and springs come early. In a few years more this will probably be a great banana belt.

Hauling from Hayes.

Mr. Wood of Grand Rapids, shipped a car load of squashes from Hay Shore last week. He paid $15 per ton. J. M. Garmire sold him nearly ten tons, realizing about $100 per acre for his crop. We should judge that best raising potatoes. Mr. Wood seemed to be pointed in squash policy. He says from six to eleven tons can be raised easily, from an acre, and the demand in the market is always good. He was buying the Hubbard and Pike's Peak or Stoley variety.

Local News.

—Logs are coming in briskly.

—S. M. See & Co. have a change of ad. this week.

—Mrs. McLeod returned from Detroit Saturday.

—The new county officers will all qualify next Monday.

—John Burns and wife are visiting friends in Canada.

—A. T. Washburn has a new display in his space this week.

—Daniel Duke, of Manistee, has been in town a few days past.

—Sam Loiedell spent Christmas week here with his wife and friends.

—Fred Green is home from Detroit to spend a week with his parents.

—Mrs E. H. Green returned from Dejeon Saturday, accompanied by a niece, Miss Frizlee.

—H. L. Page, for some time last summer a resident of this place, has bought a drug store at Redding.

—Miss Louise Moore returned home yesterday from quite a lengthy visit with friends in Grand Rapids.

—"Jack" Nicholls, Arthur Miller and Hugh Vaughan are home from college to spend the holiday vacation.

—The SENTINEL this week begins a series of articles on "our churches." The first of the series, on the M. E. Church, appears on an inside page.

—Diphtheria is raging in many Michigan towns, and the people of this section should use every precaution to keep the disease from obtaining a foothold here.

—It is said that Capt. Robinson of the steamer Petoskey will accept the command of the Ann Arbor No. 2 of the big car ferry that runs in connection with the T. & A. I. R.

—While Mrs. J. S. Dixon was out Sunday afternoon, some unknown person broke into her house by prying off the latch. The culprit was evidently frightened away, as nothing was taken.

—On Monday evening, Jan. 9, the joint public installation of the G. A. R. and W. R. C. will occur at Lewis Grand Opera House, and rations of hard tack and coffee will be served. Program next week.

—Capt. Ed. Girard, of the waterworks, has moved into his new house over the pump house, and will be twenty-four hours of the day right where he can give the pressure on a very short notice. Ed. has already demonstrated the fact that the cuttest tricks are mistake in his opponent.

—On Friday afternoon, a barn owned by Alden Chamberlain on the "old river" near the Chicago resort, caught fire by some unknown means, and was burned to the ground. The fire department took both hose-carts over and made out to reach it from the Chicago Resort hydrant, but only with the effect of preventing further destruction.

—The Masonic installation and banquet at Lewis Grand Opera House last evening was one of the social events of the season. The families and guests of the members to the number of over 200 were served at the well provided tables. The door was cleared at 9:30, and the young folks danced until the "wee sma' hours." The occasion was a most enjoyable one.

—We have received a copy of the Twin Pen Tree Northerner with the name of Hon. A. J. Mills, of Kalamazoo, at the head of the editorial column as editor. The editorial quality of the issue before us clearly indicates that Judge Mills is as good an editor as he was jurist, which is as high a compliment as we could pay. Judge Mills will honor the profession of journalism. He has many friends in Charlevoix who will wish him well.

—No, honor bright, Rev. Hampton, we are not jealous of you, and have no desire to drive out the Democrat, as you state, and you know better. Such a motive would be the supremest foolishness. You know, and so does everybody else, that your "Onion issue" was a rank humbug. As to the public money spent for a SENTINEL book issue, we simply reply that the council bought 500 copies of that issue for distribution. The SENTINEL was, 2—using charitably, Rev. Hampton, shortly after your work began.

—The Charlevoix Hardware Co's new ad. should be read this week.

—The Supervisors will meet at the Court House, Monday, January 2, 1893.

—Dr Will Lewis is home from college for a week, and the boys and girls are all glad to see him.

—A veritable blizzard prevailed during Sunday, and very few ventured out doors, if it was Christmas.

—Dr Lewis moves this week to his house opposite his old place, on Dixon Avenue, and will hereafter be connected by telephone.

—The Bethnap-Richardson congressional count is yet on in the 5th district. We can pull Mr. Bethnap on the track of parties who will deliver him 100 votes on short notice.

—Married, Christmas Day, at the residence of the bride's parents, by Rev. W. H. Macpherson, Mr. Ira Gordon, to Miss Georgie Irwin. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon will reside in Traverse City.

—F. G. Hines & Co., the popular druggists, send in copy for a change of ad. two late for this week. Frank wishes all his customers and everybody else a Happy New Year, and invites them to call. Further particulars next week.

—Last week Geo. Bates sold his interest in the Charlevoix Lumber Co to his partners, and retired from the firm. This does not necessarily mean that Mr. Bates will leave Charlevoix. After attending Grand Lodge next month and making a visit to relatives East, he will return, and we hope, strike something that will keep him in Charlevoix, and afford employment to others. George has confidence in Charlevoix, and will demonstrate it.

—Old settlers of Northern Michigan, especially of Banks township and Charlevoix, will be sorry to learn of the recent death, at the Kalamazoo asylum, of Orphan Smith. He removed from Banks to Washington Territory about fifteen years ago, but two years ago returned to the home of his brother, at Vermontville, Eaton county, where, after a long illness he became insane, and was removed to th asylum. "Uncle Orph," as he commonly known, was for several years County Surveyor of Antrim County, and was one of the best known surveyors in Northern Michigan. He was about 58 years of age at the time of his death, and was never married.

Unclim.

Miss Ella Smith, of Grand Rapids, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Wallace Winfford.

Wallace Whitford fell from a load of logs Monday and hurt his back so that he is confined to his bed.

Capt. T. H. Smith, of Charlevoix, was up to Unclim Sunday with a schooner load of people to spend Christmas. They set sail about 4 o'clock for home and we would like to know if they arrived in port all right.

Mr. Wm. Jenkins was out from Peaston to spend Christmas with his family.

A Hampstonian Slander.

Just run over in your mind some of the most active republicans of your acquaintance and you will find men who are to every appearance sound and hale, and who are getting pension for alleged disability. Is it right to tax the people, including crippled and wounded soldiers, to pay pensions to men who got them simply because they were influential republicans? Every honest citizen should unite in a demand the pension list be cleared of frauds.—Petoskey-Charlevoix Democrat.

Do you compass the idea? Mr. Hampton says that all the frauds on the pension list are Republicans. We presume he reasons thus because most of the veterans are Republicans We presume the "astute" editor intends also a local application in the charge. Pensions are granted upon the certificate of the examining surgeon of the district in which the applicant resides. The veterans of Ionia and Charlevoix counties have to report for examination before the examining surgeon at Petoskey. That surgeon has been a Democrat since the days when Chas. S. Hampton was a Republican or a greenbacker. Of course that is not so very long ago. Dr. A. S. Williams, a life-long Democrat, has been examining surgeon at Petoskey for the past ten years, at least, and, if we mistake not, his predecessor was a Democrat. Mr. Hampton knows he lies when he says that politics has the slightest bearing upon the allowance of a pension claim. It is only the blather of a most unconscientious and unscrupulous demagogue, who lives and thrives upon slander, and wakes fat upon falsehood and vituperation. Timeettlesship raises patriotism above partizanship, a virtue which the writer of the above lie is incapable of. Mr. Hampton has never let an opportunity slip to slap an old soldier in the face, but he seems sensitive when it is his misfortune to be the recipient of the same. Soldiers should paste the above clipping in their hats.

Norwood Notes.

There being no items of news of any importance, a short article on the weather may be acceptable.

After looking up all the signs, symptoms, premonitions and foreboding; the conjunction of the planets and other heavenly bodies, I have come to the conclusion that we are going to have an old-fashioned winter.

The winter of 1867-8 it snowed 100 days in succession, commencing early in December, and lasting into March. Of course it did not snow all the time for 100 days, but more or less snow fell each day, and generally it was more, and we scarcely got a good square and fair view of the sun during the whole time.

It did not commence so early this year, and may not hold out so late, but more snow will fall the present winter than for a number of past years, and the number of days or nights between now and the first of March, 1893, on which no snow falls, you can count on your fingers, and you won't have to count them twice over.

This matter of foretelling what the weather in the future will be is an easy matter when you know how, and you can do it for one year or ten years just as easy as you can for six months; and for a reasonable consideration, Mr. Iddings, I will make you out a weather table for the next ten years, and warrant it to be as correct in each and every particular as anything Mr. Wiggins of Canada, or Prof. What's-his-name out west, has ever given to the public.

CHAPTER V.

Illinois! tell the news!

Like a crisis, a shock, it had flown that said, sunshine night, when the poor child or destiny had stark exhausted and departure at the very threshold of safety.

The Hopeless Hundred Business had spent squandered, frustrated, and lost whatever was the best state of things, whose name was Success, and determined to win.

It was merciful that the soft snow had ceased, and that the moonlight glittered, revealing to the anxious eyes the rugged country of Illinois, and that had unleashed to the chill of hunger once a needed little.

Upon that night, an affabilight number of people, in the shawls and clothes, the Bergmann, look less very smug, the sallow and sunken Julius Bonner bank guide had so nearly led her to the dirty.

"A bridge is get finished, I pit, the Bergmann or Bonner? Brandon! Brandon! gallop, John! Have he engaged the ferry? Have he engaged the Bonner? Is the dear old who want ing to wonder? Have he with a warm sup pers, I it warm?

Brandon started the impedim Tones cottage that resembled a Lapland wigwam, and, with the ease of a man seen bestowed. A colorful daughter, with a pleasant face, the mistress of the house, however, in from the snow-covered sleigh, and ushered animal that had led Elma Bonner through the wonderful journey, the shawl, and visited against her.

"Is the good-man dead?" sang out the lady, pseudonymical yellow, as he made up a handsome and good it six face and a beckoning against the door of the cottage.

Impossible! An eager motherly face showed in the twilight.

"Dead, dear, no. If I can judge! I've been so wearied. Always a boy, throwing cocoanuts and spitting in his ear! Pretty. Will you never mend.

"Never mind this poor mite—seconds one of our schoolday simplicities and your grandpaddying too too dear and girl! interrupt happy John. Come, come see a treasure be found in fur, wou't be dragging the snow all over that clean carpet you think more of than dirt, do you.

"Did you ever—

"Been lonesome?—sang out John, in-doubtedly conversational. Pretty. Pretty! Did you ever see Mary Lamb? Did I ever see a wife? I haven't been grumbling around for fun. With the boys, I've slipped down my neck, and then warm my back. Pretty! Pretty!

"Pretty? Thought I heard something cry out of bed.

"Cigarettes, maybe.

"Cigarettes? Why, I haven't ever had a cigarette in my life.

"Hoosh! tell the news!

"Hoosh! Hoosh! Hoosh!

DOGS AS DETECTIVES.

Dirty Throw Valuable Hints Taken in Unscovering Murderers.

Dogs have many times come prized detective parts in the dramas of the past. It was a dog which revealed the hiding place of the remains of a prominent gentleman murdered by an Indian monster named Fish, at Hackney, England, many years ago.

Now it turns out that the Althorp horror which thrilled England was discovered by a dog. The body of the murdered woman was unhandsomely found by a laborer, but the dog's sagacity led to the discovery.

The animal in question belongs to the wife of the Pytchley Hunt. Amid the smell of decomposed flesh always throws the dog into a strange fit of excitement. A couple of days before the discovery the wife was riding at Althorp and as usual was accompanied by this animal. He was passing the ditch when he noticed by dog suddenly stop, pass about in the most unusual manner and with white phosphor.

The rider did not at that time take any notice of this occurrence and sharply calling hooking, proceeded on her journey, and thought no more about the incident.

Two days later in again ride by the ditch, and the dog once more showed similar signs of fondness. The animal jumped and emerged about and vigorously ruffled the ground, and as before the wing did not at the time attach the least importance to this curious conduct.

When we got to his home, a short distance away, he thought there might possibly be something wrong, and simply on the off chance he in formed a laborer, who went to the ditch and, as stated made the ghastly discovery.

TWO KENTUCKY FABLES.

Falling Out of a Tenderfoot and Finding Hidden Valve Silver.

"I never knew," said Governor John Young Brown, of Kentucky, "what Dudley Warner meant when he wrote Hunter Kentucky fat jug out of his own cornfield, until I visited the mountains of my native state last year. At the time I was making a political canvass of the Eastern part of Kentucky, and one day in the mountains I overheard a mountaineer sympathizing with a neighbor that had lost a dear relative who came to his death by falling out of his own cornfield.

This interested me, and I visited the spot where this supposed miracle occurred. The cornfield was upon the brow of a cliff and the farmer had fallen 200 feet. In those mountains there are dozens of such places. Moonshine is a wonderful state, and I did you know there was silver there?" Answered in the negative, he continued: "I met an old state senator at Frankfort, Gov. Bradley, 72 years of age, who validated the farm he was in nearly half a century ago. The first furrow in his plowed he unearthed a piece of solid silver as large as a wedge (say twice that country for splitting logs. He took the silver to Louisville and a jeweler made him one dozen tablespoons, one dozen teaspoons, and then accepted the silver left over as ample payment for his work. That was forty-seven years ago, and the spoons are good as new. Now, where did that silver come from?"

"Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

It was while returning home from Europe in 1835 that Emma Willard wrote the famous ballad, "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

In midocean a terrific storm set in and the frail ship was tossed about by the waves. The passengers were all badly frightened, except Miss Willard, who seemed to undergo the whole experience with a feeling of gratitude. Soon after the storm had abated she appeared in the main cabin and read the first verses of the ballad. The Duc de Choiseul was among the passengers, and he went into raptures about the piece. He prevailed upon Miss Willard to think it. Six dishes, wrote upon the duke set the words to music, but the air is not the familiar one sung today. Emma Willard wrote many other poems, but none of them ever became so popular as this one.

Venom and Virus.

The difference between a venom and a virus is very marked. Both are poisons, and both are of organic origin but a venom is produced in secreting organs, commonly called venom glands, and is introduced into the system by means especially adapted for the purpose, such as stings or fangs. On the other hand, a virus is the result of disease or affectation, and generally possesses the property of existing in the system into which it has introduced the disease which produced the virus. A virus commonly produces little, if any, local disturbance; a venom generally causes great pain, often severe inflammation and swelling. Venom has a marked local effect; virus causes a general disturbance of the system.

Means of Defense.

The officials of a county police court were startled one day to see a man walk into the court with an enormous axe over his shoulder. He glared fiercely around him, as if he expected to be attacked. Ultimately the clerk of the court ventured to ask him why he was armed with so formidable a weapon. The man replied: "Just his unusual told him to be prepared with a means of defense, and he considered that an axe would do for that purpose.

Alice's Suggestion.

"The poor old dancing bear had been performing for the children, and when he was through Alice gave his owner a large one-cent piece.

"I hope you'll get enough," she said, "to buy the bear some new tears. The one he has on only shows wet."

A FAMOUS LOCOMOTIVE.

Wreck of the Engine that Gave the Alarm at Johnstown.

A famous locomotive was wrecked lately at Bill office, just above Altoona. It was No. 1187, the engine that on the memorable day of the Johnstown flood went rushing down the Pennsylvania railroad tracks from Conemaugh to Johnstown with its shrieking whistle giving the alarm of the oncoming deluge of water.

After the flood No. 1187 was found, bottom upward, buried under a great bank of sand, near where the engineer had abandoned it to flee for his life from the flood.

Relic hunters chipped away the sand and proceeded to dismantle it of every thing that could move. The bell and all the brass fixtures were carried away, and even the big wooden bumper was hacked into splinters, which now stand first among the treasures of many an enthusiastic collector.

After things had quieted down about the flooded city the railroad company began looking around to see what it could rescue from the ruins. Among a score or more locomotives, they found the dismantled No. 1187. It was set on its feet and brought to Altoona. After a week in the shop it came out again without no signs of the ordeal it had passed through. Since then it has been run as a sniffer. About noon on Friday No. 1187 was standing on the track near the B. and O. telegraph office. Just below it was a heavy coal train, stationary, with all hoses and fixtures. Conductor Thomas happened to look back over the train and discover coal train without an engine, and coasting down the steep grade. The sentry had not been turned to allow it to draw on the next track, as was intended. Thomas jumped before the cross and escaped, but No. 1187 was turned bottom up and terribly demolished between the two heavy coal trains.

NOT ON LODGE BUSINESS.

Still He Had a Mission and Was Bound to Fulfill It Promptly.

"If I am not mistaken," said the caller, quoting his card deferentially, "I am in the presence of the Grand and Supremely Exalted Potentate of the Ancient and Honorable Order of Mackamakers?"

"You are, sir," answered the man at the desk with an affable smile.

"Pardon the interruption," said the caller in the same respectful manner, "and the familiarity with which I address you, but you will know my name. Sam Spickle, do you not?"

"Yes, sir."

"And your initials I think I am correct in saying are K. W.?"

"That is correct, sir."

"Thank you, Mr. Spickle. My name is Higgins—Hi-gg-ins, sir. I am glad to find you in, Mr. Spickle, after having made several previous attempts with at success to make your acquaintance. I have the honor, he continued, putting his hat on briskly and taking a bundle of papers from his pocket, "to be the bearer of the first form of Scotch & Co., dealers in dry goods and general merchandise. If it is convenient, Mr. Smythe, you will oblige me very much by settling a little the bill of seventy-five cents that has been running for six months and save me the trouble of having to climb three cogged, heavily, rickety, flight of stairs again. Seventy-five cents, Smythe. Come down.

A FATED MAN.

Unwittingly Encountered With Great Events of the Wars.

The treaty between Grant and Lee, which terminated the war of the rebellion, was signed at Appomattox court house in the property owned by a man named McLean, concerning whom a confederate officer tells one of interesting story. It would seem that Mr M'Lean, though striving to keep himself aloof from wars and rumors of wars, was pursued by a fatality from the start to the finish of the great conflict.

At the outbreak of the war General Beauregard's headquarters were near Manassas, on the farm owned by Mr. McLean. There the first engagement of moment took place. General Longstreet and his corps were also encamped there for a time. When the firing began there came a rolling from the fields, which literally tore to pieces General Beauregard's office, spread on a table in the garden as the rest of the house. At the close of the engagement McLean picked up such goods and chattles as remained and moved to Mississippi where his course of time, the war followed him.

Tired at last of the self-imposed banishment from Virginia, he returned just in time to be fairly settled at Appomattox court house and for his property to be pounced upon for the tipping of the treaty of peace.

Plenty of Free Libraries.

Massachusetts has done more than any other state in encouraging the establishment of free public libraries everywhere amongst the people. Of the 351 towns or cities of the state, 344 now have free public libraries, and the state has recently provided aid for the small towns and villages that are without them, that they may have the same advantages in this respect as the larger places. It will probably not be long before every town in the state is provided with a free public library.

Genuine.

It is well for a dealer to know something of the nature and origin of the articles in which he deals.

If a grocer in a Western city had known more of the science of botany he would hardly have put the following placard upon a quantity of maple sugar which he exposed for sale:

BARNEY'S MAPLE SUGAR
PRICE 25C
PURE FOREST OF ASH LEAF.

ARSENIC THE FAVORITE.

In India the Native Prefer It to Strychnine or Murder.

Cases of poisoning appear from the report of the Bombay analyzer to the government of Bombay, to be common in India. In the Kolaba district one hundred and twenty-five poisonings, resulting were the latter, where cases, occurred with the death in action all the members of the family whatever in his way. Five persons having actually died of arsenic, then abandoned, the room turned queen's evidence and the murderess has been hanged. In Godetpore a young girl was on the eve of marriage with a man who did not meet the approval of her friends.

The friends got over the difficulty by putting arsenic in his food. In Poona the servant of a European mess collected her mistress of some money, and she was lying ill. Some people in these circumstances would have sent for the police. The Poona mess preferred to put arsenic in the pilau's soup. In the Kaira district a woman applied to a "Malar" for a charm to stop the quarrelsome habits of her husband. The charm which was in the form of a white powder proved perfectly successful. The man died, and so did his dog, who ate the remains of the food. Arsenic, which is obtainable without the slightest difficulty in Bombay, always heads, the said, the chemical analyzer's list.

A MIGHTY CHANGE.

What Will Happen if Europeans Carry Out Their Intentions.

There is a movement on foot in Russia and Europe to cut a canal between the Black and the Caspian seas, which would connect the Baltic Sea with the Mediterranean. The Dead Sea is some one more immaterial, but I found the dimensions No 1 149. It was set on its feet and brought to Altoona. After a week in the shop it came out again without no signs of the ordeal it had passed through. Since then it has been run as a sniffer.

About noon on Friday No. 1187 was standing on the track near the B. and O. telegraph office. Just below it was a heavy coal train, stationary, with all hoses and fixtures. Conductor Thomas happened to look back over the train and discover coal train without an engine, and coasting down the steep grade. The sentry had not been turned to allow it to draw on the next track, as was intended. Thomas jumped before the cross and escaped, but No. 1149 was turned bottom up and terribly demolished between the two heavy coal trains.

SAVED HIS FINE.

Story of a Smith Who Was Both Quick-Witted and Lucky.

Judge Smith, once a resident of Phoenix, Ariz., was once a prominent lawyer in the little town of Quartz, Ariz. On one occasion he was ordering a case before Judge Rich Hancock. During the trial Judge Smith had occasion to frequently go out of the court room. Judge Smith finally got tired of the delay in the case caused by Smith's absence, and reprimanded him. Finally Smith came into the room with his hat on. The Judge saw his opportunity and called out: "Mr. Smith, I fine you $50 for contempt of court."

"Very well, your honor," was the reply. "I'll pay it to-morrow."

The case went on. The next day Judge Hancock was in a better humor, and desiring to go out for a moment called Judge Smith to the bench. After Judge Hancock's last left the room the acting justice turned to his clerk and said:

"The fine against Mr. Smith yesterday for contempt of court is remitted," and so it was.

It was never collected.

OUR CHURCHES.

A Review of the History of the First M. E. Church of Charlevoix.

The church history of Charlevoix readers back at a period, which, in the annals of the town, is almost pre-historic. Before Charlevoix was known as a village, the pioneer of the cross was planted here by that grand old pioneer of Christian work, the M. E. Church.

In the summer of 1867 Rev. A. Bentinsugh organized the first class on what is now known as the Charlevoix circuit. Mr. Sensabaugh was at the time, stationed in mission work at Antrim City. The organization took place at A. D. Brady's house, in Marion, (then known as Harnard, and Jos. Clark was appointed as class leader. The following names composed the class: Joseph Clark, Eliza Clark, A. D. Brady, Martha Brady, Chas. Hesseltine, Eliza Hogan, William Clark and Geo. Clark. This work was then known as the "Antrim Circuit," which extended from Antrim to Pine River. Rev. Mr. Sensabaugh therefore, stands upon Methodist records as the pioneer preacher of that denomination in this part of the Lord's vineyard.

In the fall of the same year, Charlevoix was made the head of a circuit, and Rev. J. Gelick was appointed to the charge as preacher in charge. Mr. Gulick, therefore, was the earliest resident pastor on the Charlevoix charge. Rev. V. G. Wright was appointed to Charlevoix, by the District. The work of the pastor was then one which carried with it all the deprivations, toil and discouragements of pioneer church-work. Mr. Gulick, a young man of the time, was compelled to aid to his income by clerking in the store of A. Fox & Co. The old settlers will remember the toil and fortitude which characterized the ministry of Rev. Gulick. The society had already secured the lots upon which their church and parsonage now stands.

The records state that a satisfactory degree of prosperity attended Mr. Gulick's labors. The first quarterly conference was organized Oct. 26, 1867. The following members of the conference appears on the church record of that discussion: Samuel Hogan, Geo. Clark, Pierce, A. D. Brady, Wm. Clark, S. H. Seeley, N. Clark, and included the presiding elder and pastor. At this conference Trustees were appointed, and steps taken toward providing a home for the pastor. The following were the first Trustees: S. H. Seeley, A. D. Brady, Jos. Clark. In 1868, Rev. J. Gulick, the pastor, loaned the society $250, with which, in addition to the amount raised by subscription, the old parsonage was built.

On the first day of January, 1868, a class was organized in Charlevoix, with a membership of 17, Isaac Pierce, leader. The following names appear: D. H. Pierce, James Headley, Mary Headley, C. A. G. Gulick, Jessie Milnes, Joseph Hesseltine, Lottie Stockman, Luna Green, Maggie Coulter, Ella Miller, Mrs. Shipard, Mary Dougherty, Joseph Wells, Margaret Wells. But five of these resided in the village.

As the result of extra meetings held at the Brady appointment, during January and February, 1868, the membership was increased to forty-one. Notwithstanding the wide scope of territory covered, the Charlevoix charge prospered under Mr. Gulick's labors in his two years' pastorate.

In the fall of 1869, Rev. A. J. Wheeler came to the Charlevoix circuit as a preacher. The winter a class of 16 was organized at Horton's, on Pine Lake, but this, and the Barnard class, the record says, did not prosper. We remember Mr. Wheeler as a young man, well meaning, but not calculated to be a successful pioneer pastor. His ministry was marked by a want of zeal with spiritual or temporal growth to the extent desired by the little flock.

In the fall of 1871, Rev. Wright Barrett was appointed to the charge. The class then numbered but twelve full members and three probationers, but the Barnard class was greatly revived, and 28 names added to the roll. Mr. Barrett remained here but one year.

In 1872, Rev. Mark Browning, of the Norwood charge, was appointed to supply the work, and preached here once in four weeks. Rev. Browning's work for that year, while but a "supply," stands upon the records of the society as fruitful of results in the work of strengthening its temporal affairs, inspiring courage in the hearts of the struggling flock. By his efforts, the mortgage on the parsonage with accumulated interest, amounting to about $400, was paid, and the mortgage burned.

The annual conference of 1872 appointed Rev. G. L. Cole, but recently a graduate of Albion College, to the Charlevoix charge. The membership was then twenty four, divided as follows: Barnard, 12; Charlevoix, 6; Horton's, 6. In the fall and spring of 1872-3, repairs to the amount of $65 were made on the parsonage. During the winter 16 names were added to the Barnard class, and the work elsewhere prospered.

In 1873, Rev. Mr. Cole was returned to the charge. In February, 1874, a class of twenty-five was organized at Bird's, in Eveline. During these years the services of the Charlevoix Society was held in the little old school house standing on the site now occupied by the Enterprise factory, and the successor of that "temple of learning," later destroyed by fire. During the winter of 1873-4 protracted meetings were held in this village, and thirty names were added to the church membership.

During the following summer a movement was inaugurated for the erection of a house of worship. The foundation was laid in August, 1874, the corner stone was laid by Rev. J. W. Miller, presiding elder.

Rev. Mr. Cole was returned that fall for the third year. Although the church membership increased somewhat during that year, no progress was made in church buildings, owing to the stringency of the times. But the society congratulated itself upon being free from debt. The pastor closing his year with the following entry upon the church record: "It is with joy and satisfaction that we are able to state at the close of our three years of labor in this part of the Master's vineyard that they have been years of rich experiences of glorious victories and abiding peace with God and the people."

During the years 1875-6, Rev. Wm. L. Tilden was the pastor in charge. During these years, the church prospered spiritually, but temporarily. The membership increased largely, and the church-edifice was completed, but not sufficiently on the interior to permit of occupancy.

In the fall of 1877, Rev. B. H. Whitman was appointed to the charge. During that fall and winter the church edifice was completed, and in the spring of 1878 the society dedicated it, Rev. W. L. Tilden, a previous pastor preaching the dedicatory sermon. The presiding elder was present, and congratulated the church upon the possession of a commodious place of worship and home for their pastor, and without a dollar of debt upon it. The next two successive years of labor here were most satisfactory to the society and to the community, and he retired with the good will of all.

The annual conference of 1880 sent Rev. Mr. McElwee to preach here. He remained but one year, but under his ministration the present parsonage was erected.

In 1881, the new pastor was Rev. Gregory Daniels, (since deceased.) He occupied the pulpit two years, and was a faithful and devoted pastor and Christian gentleman.

Rev. J. T. Iddings followed and for three years this upright Christian minister and grand man preached from the M. E. pulpit. No pastor ever lived nearer the hearts of his people, and few men possessed in a larger degree the essential qualities of a successful Christian leader.

Following him for three years came Rev. W. H. McCartney, a young preacher of a new experience, a preacher of large ability and power. He still occupies a supernumerary relation with the New York conference, and is in business here.

Rev. H. O. Ball was the next pastor, and spent two years here.

Rev. G. S. Barnes, a clergyman of large experience and a gentleman of culture, followed by two year's service, most acceptably to the church.

The present pastor, Rev. David Eagle, has already endeared himself to his charge, and endeavors are not wanting that his ministration will be fruitful of results. He seems to have a valuable property, in the heart of the village, and enjoy the prestige of being the pioneer Christian society in Charlevoix County.

HOW A PUZZLE WAS SOLVED. When you want a certain article, you want the best make of that article, don't you? How to determine which make is best is what puzzles you, you say. And when the puzzle is solved for you, by experts, which make must be questioned, you are pleased, aren't you? And you would like to hear of a puzzle that has been solved for the people of your locality, would you? Well, we will tell you about that very puzzle, and its solution. At the Universal Exposition of 1889 at Paris, France, the Exposition of the world, including those of Germany, was in competition. They were passed upon by a committee of twenty, composed of the ablest experts, two of whom were the leading sewing machine authorities of France. This jury, after exhaustive examination and tests, adjudged the Wheeler & Wilson machines were the best of all, and awarded them the highest prize offered, the GOLD MEDAL PRIZE, giving other prizes only silver and bronze medals. The French Government, as a further expression, apparently, decorated Mr. Nicolas W. Wheeler, President of the Company, with the Cross of the Legion of Honor, the most coveted honor in France. This puzzle is solved by the best sewing machine in the world, which is the latest of the No. 9 and No. 12 Wheeler & Wilson machines. Ask for family use, and the No. 12, for manufacturing uses, and be best in the world today. And you will want a sewing machine, if you do not get the best, it will be a puzzle to you. Agents wanted in all unoccupied territory. WHEELER & WILSON MFG. CO. 182 and 187 Wabash Avenue, Chicago, Ill.
